Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of agricultural land in England is of grade 1 and grade 2 classification, respectively.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The percentage of agricultural land in England classified as Grades 1 and 2 are approximately 3 per cent. and 17 per cent. respectively.

Food Aid

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the supply of European Economic Community food surpluses to pensioners and others in the Denton and Reddish constituency; and what steps he is taking to make it easier for groups to get food to distribute.

Mr. Gummer: As I made clear in my reply on 12 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin), the food is being made available to the most needy.

Distribution is for the charitable organisations listed in my reply on 29 January to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes). Most of these have a national coverage, and I would expect a number of them to have branches in the area named. I am aware of no complaints from the organisations about delays in obtaining release of butter and beef from intervention stores. Milk, cheese and the other milk products concerned are generally available from commercial sources.

PRIME MINISTER

Living Standards

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister what representations she has received concerning the Central Statistical Office report of 16 February 1987, and in particular concerning living standards in Britain.

The Prime Minister: None.

National Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will refer to the Security Commission the disclosure of information to Duncan Campbell relating to Zircon.

The Prime Minister: While the police investigation into this matter is in progress, it would be premature to consider whether a referral to the Security Commission is appropriate.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Prime Minister (1) what her office has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what the projected expenditure is for 1987;

(2) to which firms her office has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

The Prime Minister: The annual expenditure on computer hardware and software is:

	Purchases
Financial year	Hardware £	Software £	Maintenance[1] £	Total £
1985-86	—	—	11,381	11,381
1986-87[2]	5,355	—	17,000	22,355
1987-88[3]	50,000	10,000	17,000	77,000

[1] It is not possible to split the maintenance costs between hardware and software.
[2] Provisional.
[3] Estimate.

There are seven contracts currently in operation, only one of which has been awarded in the period. The contractors are CASU Electronics Ltd., The Imtec Group plc and ICL (UK) Ltd.

In order to preserve commercial confidentiality it would be inappropriate to provide the details of each contract.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if, in view of the statement of the Secretary of State for the Home Department of 3 February, Official Report, column 823, and subsequent statement by the Secretary of State for Scotland, she will take measures to improve co-ordination between Ministers in respect of information relating to the police raid on the British Broadcasting Corporation in Queen Margaret Drive.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) and my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands have made it clear that they have no role in the conduct of police investigations or the obtaining of search warrants.

Official Expenses

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister (1) what has been the annual cost of official entertaining associated with the office of Prime Minister since May 1979 to date;

(2) what has been the annual cost of her foreign travel from May 1979 to date;

(3) what has been the total cost to public funds of the Prime Minister in all her offices, duties, accommodation and expenses in each year from 1979 to date;

(4) what has been the cost of running No. 10 Downing Street and Chequers each year since 1979, both in current and constant prices; what has been the percentage increase annually in real terms; and what has been the annual cost since 1979 on entertainment and allowances for accommodation.

The Prime Minister: The costs of all my offices are as follows:

Year (April-March)	Total costs
	Current prices[1]	Constant prices (1985-86)[1]	Year on year percentage variation[1]
1979-80	1,429,268	2,311,908
1980-81	1,767,949	2,410,719	4·3
1981-82	2,442,406	3,032,387	25·8
1982-83	2,728,421	3,158,553	4·2
1983-84	3,055,684	3,386,437	7·2
1984-85	3,817,676	4,055,662	19·8
1985-86	4,437,357	4,437,357	9·4
1986-87 (Estimate)	4,984,491	4,839,700	9·1

[1] Year to year comparisons are not necessarily valid (see notes 2 and 3 below)

Notes:

(1) I would refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to the hon. Member for Central Fife (Official Report, 23 July 1986, columns 229-30) which gave the costs of my office on a consistent basis.

(2) The basis for the total costs changed in (i) 1981-82 when charging by Ministry of Defence for its aircraft was introduced; (ii) 1983-84, when the Property Services Agency introduced charging for buildings and services; (iii) 1984-85, when Ministry of Defence introduced charging for the Service staff at Chequers; and (iv) 1986-87 when the cost of office services was included for the first time. After allowing for the inclusion of the costs at (iv) above, the estimated cost of all my offices will not have increased since 1985-86.

(3) Following the abolition of the CPRS, the policy unit in the Prime Minister's Office was strengthened by four staff. In the last full year of its existence (1982-83) CPRS employed 35 people and cost £1,109,000. Thus, while the cost of my Office increased as a result of the abolition of the CPRS, substantial net overall savings were made.

(4) Salaries and wages, notional pension liability and administration costs and the grant-in-aid to the Chequers Trust are included. My salary as a Cabinet Minister is included but my pay and allowances as a Member of this House are excluded.

(5) Billing delays prevent some costs from being shown in the financial year in which the goods and services were provided. The above figures, therefore, do not necessarily reflect when the expenditure was actually incurred.

(6) Since the answer given on 23 July 1986 to the hon. Member for Central Fife (Official Report, 23 July, 1986, columns 229-30), the GDP deflator, used to measure the constant price effect, has been re-based from 1984-85 = 100 to 1985-86 = 100.

The annual costs since 1979 of entertainment, accommodation allowances and foreign visits are as follows:—

Year (April to March)	Current prices	Constant prices (1985-86)	Year on year percentage variation

SCOTLAND

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is considering any new measures to deal with the problem of domestic violence in the light of the report by the Women's National Commission entitled "Violence Against Women"; and if he will make a statement on his consideration of measures affecting the victims of violence in general, particularly those who do not have orders under the Matrimonial Homes Act.

Mr. Lang: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 12 February 1987 at column 324.

Housing Revenue Account (Capital Payments)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the housing revenue account capital payments for 1978-79 to 1985-86 inclusive, detailing the amount of capital spending by local authorities for each year on (a) modernisation, (b) capital repairs, (c) new dwellings, (d) gross lending and (e) other, expressing these figures in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the tables. Local authorities' capital payment returns do not distinguish between council house modernisations and capital repairs.

Note.—All figures in the above table are expressed in constant prices by applying the GDP deflator, base year 1985-86.

Children in Care

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland were taken into local authority care during each of the years 1978-1979 to 1985-86 inclusive for the primary reason that (i) their family was homeless, or (ii) their accommodation was unsuitable.

Mr. John MacKay: The information for Scotland, excluding Strathclyde, is as follows:

	Family homeless	Accommodation unsuitable
1978-79	46	22
1979-80	37	34
1980-81	41	22
1981-82	18	23
1982-83	22	16
1983-84	13	8
1984-85 (provisional)	26	18
1985-86 (provisional)	7	12

The information provided by Strathclyde Regional Council relates only to 1984-85, when the numbers of children concerned were respectively 15 and 0.

Highlands and Islands Development Board

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make it his policy to appoint a resident of either Orkney or Shetland to the board of the Highlands and Islands Development Board when the next opportunity arises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Members of the board of the Highlands and Islands Development Board are not appointed to represent any particular part of the board's area. My right hon. and learned Friend appoints members on merit for their personal qualities and experience. It is not intended to depart from this policy.

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all persons resident in either Orkney or Shetland, who have been board members of the Highlands and Islands Development Board; and if he will state the period of their appointment.

Mr. Lang: Two persons who have resided in Orkney and Shetland have been board members. The late Mr. Prophet L. J. Smith was a full-time member from 1 November 1965 to 31 October 1976 and Mr. Thomas C. Graham was a part-time member from 1 May 1977 to 31 October 1980.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland who informed his officials on Friday 30 January about the intended police raid on the British Broadcasting Corporation in Glasgow; and by what method.

Mr. Rifkind A Strathclyde police officer telephoned my official.

Forestry (Sutherland and Caithness)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the areas of the Forestry Commission's plantable reserve in the flow county of Sutherland and Caithness;

(2) if he will list the areas proposed for planting by the Forestry Commission in the flow county of Sutherland and Caithness in 1987-88.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Location	Area of Plantable Reserve (hectares)	Area to be Planted 1987-88 (hectares)
Dyke/Strath Halladale	80	80
Tannach Hill	298	240
Stroupster	950	—
Carn Nam Muc	380	—

Forestry (Western Isles)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list forestry grant applications approved in the Western Isles in the last three years.

Mr. John MacKay: The Information is as follows:

Scheme	Area Approved for New Planting (hectares)	Area Approved for Restocking (hectares)
Eishken, Lewis	47·8	—

Scheme	Area Approved for New Planting (hectares)	Area Approved for Restocking (hectares)
Gleann Gheireasdail, North Uist	524·3	—
Stornaway Trust, Lewis	7·0	—
Borve Lodge Estates, Lewis	7·2	2·3
Stornoway Trust, Lewis	—	1·9
Achmore, Lewis	1·5	—

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Forestry Commission proposes any new planting in the Western Isles; and if he will make a statement concerning its view of the forestry potential of that area.

Mr. John MacKay: The Forestry Commission has no plans at present to carry out new planting in the Western Isles. A range of trees will grow successfully on the islands, particularly where there is some shelter. The scale of planting in the future will depend mainly on private sector interest.

Household Statistics

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the number of households in Scotland consisting of (a) one adult and one or more children under 16 years and (b) two or more adults and one or more children.

Mr. John MacKay: The 1981 census showed that the number of households in Scotland consisting of one adult and one or more children under 16 years was 40,455 and the number consisting of two or more adults and one or more children was 594,520.

The information is contained in table 17 of the census 1981 Scotland housing and household report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Dwellings

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will provide details of the numbers of dwellings in Scotland which are (a) rented from a local authority, (b) rented from the Scottish Special Housing Association, and (c) rented from a new town development corporation for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive;

(2) if he will provide the numbers of dwellings in Scotland which are privately rented, detailing the numbers which are (a) rented with business, (b) rented by virtue of employment, (c) other rented unfurnished and (d) other rented furnished for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive, indicating the percentage of all households which are living in each of these sectors;

(3) if he will detail the existing provision of (a) sheltered housing, (b) amenity housing, (c) sheltered wheelchair housing, (d) wheelchair housing, (e) housing for the ambulant disabled and (f) other specially adapted housing; and if he will give the proportions provided by (i) public authorities, (ii) housing associations and (iii) the private sector, indicating the proportions which are rented housing and which are owner-occupied;

(4) if he will estimate the numbers of vacant houses in (a) the private rented sector and (b) the privately owned sector; and if he will break these figures down according to the reasons for vacancy;

(5) if he will provide the number of new dwellings started in 1986 by (a) local authorities, (b) new towns (c) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (d) housing associations, (e) Government Departments and (f) the private sector; and if he will break down this information by district within regional sub-totals;

(6) if he will provide the percentage of sales of public sector dwellings since 1980 which have been (a) cottage type dwellings, (b) four in a block type dwellings, (c) low-rise flats and (d) high-rise flats; if he will express the sales of each type of dwellings as a percentage of the stock of each type of dwelling; and if he will provide this information for (i) local authorities, (ii) new towns and (iii) the Scottish Special Housing Association;

(7) if he will provide the percentage of sales of public sector dwellings since 1980 which have been (a) two-apartment dwellings, (b) three-apartment dwellings, (c) four-apartment dwellings, (d) five-apartment dwellings and (e) six or more apartment dwellings; and if he will provide this information for (i) local authorities, (ii) new towns and (iii) the Scottish Special Housing Association;

(8) if he will provide a detailed breakdown of local authority housing revenue account income for each of the years 1979-80 to 1986-87 inclusive; and if he will estimate income for 1987-88;

(9) if he will provide a detailed breakdown of local authority housing revenue account expenditure for each of the years 1979-80 to 1986-87; and if he will estimate expenditure for 1987-88;

(10) if he will give the average subsidy provided by housing support grant per local authority house for each of the years 1979-80 to 1987-88 inclusive;

(11) if he will provide the average annual rent for registered rents for 1978 and for 1986;

(12) if he will provide details of the type of short stay accommodation secured for homeless people and the percentage securing permanent accommodation for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86; and if he will provide this in a form similar to table 5 of SDD Statistical Bulletin HSIU number 17.

Mr. Ancram: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Personal Incomes

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons have a gross earned income of £60,000 or more per annum in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the numbers in other countries in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information on gross earned income for the United Kingdom is compiled in terms of tax units (married couples counted as one unit) and after contributions to occupational pension schemes have been deducted. In 1984-85, the latest year for which information from the survey of personal incomes is available, 35,000 tax units had gross earned income of £60,000 or more. The corresponding numbers for other EC countries are not available.

Public Sector Manpower

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the period since 1979 the reduction or increase in manpower in (a) the Civil Service, (b) local government, (c) the National Health Service and (d) nationalised industries after allowing for privatisation both in actual numbers of persons employed and in percentage terms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacGregor: The figures on a full-time equivalent basis are as follows (thousands):

	Mid 1979	Mid 1986	Difference	Per cent.
Civil Service[1]	732	594	−138	−18·8
Local authorities	2,368	[2]2,286	−82	−3·5
National Health Service	975	[3]1,016	+41	+4·2
Nationalised industries[4]	1,304	876	−428	−32·8

[1] Includes Royal Ordnance Factories in 1979 which are excluded from Civil Service numbers in 1986, but not yet privatised. Manpower numbers related to 1 April.

[2] Excludes 66,000 community programme workers.

[3] Provisional estimates.

[4] Excludes the following corporations, privatised since mid-1979: British Aerospace, National Freight Corporation, BNOC, Britoil, Associated British Ports, British Telecom, British Gas and British Airways; and London Regional Transport, which became a nationalised industry from 1984.

The figures given do not make any allowance for privatisation by way of contracting out of services or the disposal of subsidiaries by nationalised industries.

Source: Civil Service manpower statistics, and data underlying "Employment in the Public and Private Sector, 1980-86" Economic Trends, December 1986.

Civil Servants

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all categories of people separately defined in "Public Bodies 1986" who were classified as civil servants in 1979; and if he will state (a) the total and (b) the percentage by which the Civil Service has been reduced if all those no longer called civil servants are disregarded.

Mr. John MacGregor: Three bodies listed in "Public Bodies 1986" — the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, the Health and Safety Commission and Executive, and the Manpower Services Commission — are staffed by civil servants. This situation has not changed since 1979.

Apart from these, the categories of people separately defined in "Public Bodies 1986" who were classified as civil servants in 1979 but whose status has subsequently changed are the staff of the Victoria and Albert museum, the Science museum, the Countryside Commission, the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission, Royal Botanic Gardens and the state hospital management committee of the National Health Service Authority in Scotland.

The total reduction in the Civil Service from 1 April 1979 to 1 April 1986 is 134,800—18·5 per cent.—if we disregard the civil servants whose status has changed since 1979. Excluding the bodies listed above from the 1979 figures does not significantly affect the percentage change. The unadjusted change is 18·8 per cent.

North (Cost of Living)

Mr. Favell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information his Department has on the effect of the cost of living in the North on the prospects for an increased level of economic activity in that region.

Mr. John MacGregor: Differences in the cost of housing mean that the cost of living in the north is lower than in some other regions. If relative wage increases reflected this to a greater extent than at present, goods and services produced in the north would become more competitive. As a result, output and employment would be higher.

Charitable Donations

Mr. Lawrence asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what benefit to charities has resulted from the tax concessions in the Finance Act 1986 for employees wishing to make charitable donations.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The payroll giving scheme, which was introduced in the Finance Act 1986, starts on 6 April 1987. It has generated enormous interest. I am confident that many employers and employees will take part and that charities will benefit substantially.

NHS

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will calculate the cost per head of population of Great Britain of the National Health Service for each year since 1979 to 1986.

Mr. John MacGregor: The information requested is set out in the table.

Expenditure per capita

Year	£
1980-81	217
1981-82	244
1982-83	267
1983-84	283
1984-85	303
1986-87	345

This shows a real terms increase in per capita spending on the NHS in Great Britain under this Government of about 24 per cent.

Free Ports

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he is satisfied with the progress of free ports in general and Liverpool free port in particular; and what changes in the administration of free ports are planned.

Mr. Brooke: The designation of six sites as free zones is an experiment to enable the free ports concept to be properly tested in the United Kingdom. Only three of the designated free ports are operating and as yet there is not sufficient evidence to make a judgment about the experiment. Liverpool, which at some two years has been open the longest, has reported a steady growth in business.

There are no changes planned in the administration of free ports, which must remain the responsibility of the designated authorities. Customs and Excise are conducting a review of procedures and I expect to receive their report before Easter.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the total cost of mortgage interest relief to tax payers in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales; and what is the current distribution of mortgage interest relief in Scotland by the following income bands: (i) under £5,000 pa, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 pa, (iii) £10,000 to £15,000 pa, (iv) £15,000 to £20,000 pa, (v) £20,000 to £25,000 pa, (vi) £25,000 to £30,000 pa and (vii) £30,000 pa plus.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Following the introduction of MIRAS in April 1983, regional information on the cost of mortgage interest relief cannot be extracted from Inland Revenue records. The 1986-87 estimates by place of residence of the mortgagor, given in the table, are therefore subject to wide margins of error.

Direct revenue cost of mortgage interest tax relief[1]—1986-87

	£ million
Scotland	310
England	3,960
Wales	170
Northern Ireland	60
United Kingdom	4,500

[1] Includes the cost of relief to non-taxpayers.

I regret that estimates of the distribution of mortgage interest relief in Scotland by level of income are not available.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis the European Investment Bank has agreed to discuss with Eurotunnel the provision of loan facilities to the Channel tunnel project; what part he took in the decision to take part in such discussions; and what interest rates and date of commencement for repayment have been discussed.

Mr. Brooke: Under the terms of its statute, the European Investment Bank can receive applications for loans direct from undertakings in the Community. The EIB management committee examines each application, including whether the proposed loan would comply with the provisions in article 130 of the Treaty of Rome and the EIB's own statute. If the management committee is in favour of granting a loan, it submits the proposal to the EIB's board of directors, which has sole power to grant loans. In the case of Eurotunnel, no loan proposal has yet been submitted to the EIB's board of directors. Therefore, at this stage, the terms of a possible loan are a matter for discussion between Eurotunnel and the EIB staff. The United Kingdom Government have indicated to the EIB that they are content for the EIB to consider a loan application from Eurotunnel and, if appropriate, to put a loan proposal to the EIB's board of directors, on the understanding that there is no question of a United Kingdom Government guarantee of a financial or commercial nature.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will propose at the next meeting of the board of directors of the European Investment Bank that the proposed loan of £1 billion to the Channel tunnel project be not concluded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is a member of the board of governors of the European Investment Bank. Under the statute of the EIB, it is for the EIB's board of directors to decide whether, and on what terms, the EIB should grant a loan to Eurotunnel for the Channel tunnel project. The EIB has not so far put a loan proposal to its board of directors. If and when it does so, the proposal will be considered on its merits.

British Airports Authority

Mr. Wallace asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the financial implications for the Exchequer of the privatisation of the British Airports Authority.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The financial implications for the Exchequer of the privatisation of BAA plc will depend on the price at which shares are sold. The price itself will be dependent on a number of factors, including market conditions at the time of the sale.

Small Businesses (Taxation)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about further reductions in tax levels for small businesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend receives a number of representations on this subject from time to time.

Forestry

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the treatment for taxation of those investing in forestry and woodlands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A number of individuals and interested bodies have made representations. These indicate a wide divergence of opinion on this subject.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Clelland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for offences of fraud against Her Majesty's Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in each of the years since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Government Trading Funds

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table updating the reply of 20 November 1984, columns 97-98, on the financial performance of Government trading funds.

Mr. John MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1986, c. 544-45]: The information requested is given in the table on an historic cost and a current cost basis for each Government trading fund.

Oil and Petroleum Taxes

Mr. Bermingham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total received by petroleum revenue tax and tax on diesel fuel oil used in private and commercial vehicles in 1985-86.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 20 February 1987]: Total receipts of petroleum revenue tax (including advance payments) and duty on diesel fuel oil in 1985-86 were £6,380 million and £1,336 million respectively.

EMPLOYMENT

Female Workers (Pay)

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General if he will state the estimated proportion of all part-time female workers being paid less than (i) £2, (ii) £3, (iii) £3·20 and (iv) £3·40 an hour in April 1985 and April 1986; and if he will provide the same data subdivided into (i) manual and (ii) non-manual females.

Mr. Lee: The available information comes from the new earnings survey and relates to part-time female employees on adult rates whose earnings were not affected by absence:

Great Britain

	Percentage with gross hourly earnings below 200p	300p	320p	340p
April 1985
Part-time females
manual	44	92	94	96
non-manual	19	67	72	77
all	31	79	83	86
April 1986
Part-time females
manual	21	89	93	95
non-manual	8	61	67	72
all	14	74	79	83

The new earnings survey sample does not include all part-time employees whose earnings are below the national insurance threshold. Comparisons between years will be affected by changes in this threshold particularly at the lower levels of earnings shown in this table.

North-East (Job Creation)

Mr. Merchant asked the Paymaster General if he will list the job creation measures in the north-east that have been supported by the Newcastle city action team using the £1 million fund announced by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in his statement on 14 May 1986, Official Report, column 705.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The purpose of the fund is to stimulate job creation and enterprise in the north-east and I am pleased to say that I have approved support for a number of projects which meet that aim. They have been designed particularly to develop the infrastructure of support for small and developing business enterprise, to introduce products in the areas worst affected by shipbuilding redundancies and to provide some projects with region-wide application. The funding by the city action team was designed to provide comparatively small sums of money which were necessary to lever and to bring together other sources of support from the public and private sectors for the project. Without the grants from the CAT fund these schemes would not have gone ahead. The projects include:

(1) "Design Works" — A project sponsored by the Burton Group plc involving the conversion of a derelict warehouse into a centre of excellence for all types of design including studios, work spaces, offices and exhibition facilities, providing design consultancy and services; it will provide employment and training opportunities for people in the north-east and establish a significant capability for small companies—a grant of £300,000.

(2) North East Media Development Council — an innovative project to establish a regional media training centre specialising in all aspects of film and video work and giving the necessary accreditation for graduating trainees to obtain employment in the industry—a grant of £50,000.

(3) Tyne River Boat Project sponsored by the Association of Marine and Related Charities to build vessels for franchised operation to carry passengers on River Tyne cruises for leisure and educational purposes—a grant of £80,000.

(4) West Newcastle Enterprise Centre to provide business advice and workshop facilities, primarily to assist the unemployed in start-up-businesses — a grant of £30,000.

(5) Product Database — a project sponsored by Newcastle technology centre to establish a database facility for small companies within the region to provide information on new products and to assist companies in adapting their production policies to maintain and increase competitiveness — a grant of £15,000.

(6) Preliminary work by Durham University Business School to establish the basis on which a procurement service for small firms in the region can be established, based on public sector purchasing — a grant of £11,750.

(7) Business Information System On Line (BISON), a project sponsored by the Local Enterprise Agency Project North East to provide a range of computerised guidance tests, marketing data and other information for new entrepreneurs—a grant of £3,500.

(8) Northern Youth Venture Fund, sponsored by the Local Enterprise Agency Project North East and attracting funds from the private sector. To provide low interest loans to youth based businesses — a grant of £60,000.

(9) St. Thomas Street Stables Workshops, conversion of former stables in central Newcastle into managed workshops and office units which provide tenants with centralised services and marketing and financial advice through the Tyne and Wear Enterprise Trust — a grant of £10,000.

(10) Newcastle Marketing Advice Centre — a grant of £2,000 to assist with the promotion of this centre set up by the city action team to provide marketing information and advice to small businesses and £10,000 towards the cost of networking this service to Sunderland.

(11) Innovative Factory for New Technology (INFANT) — a project in Sunderland sponsored by MARI Avanced Electronics Ltd. to establish a factory unit providing training and work experience, particularly in microelectronics—a grant of £197,500.

(12) Centre for Hi-Tech Activity in North Tyneside (CHANT), a project also sponsored by MARI Advanced Micro Electronics Ltd. to establish a centre for training and business development for new small enterprises in the high technology sector—a grant of £80,000.

These projects will make a significant contribution to tackling directly the need for jobs in the north-east and also to providing a foundation for future enterprise development in the region. In many cases the grants complement support from the urban programme, some have DTI support, others combine other Government schemes such as YTS and the community programme and some include significant private sector contributions.

Major projects are proposed for Cleveland but at this stage the other public and private sector contributions have to be confirmed.

Mr. Holt asked the Paymaster General how many people in total were employed in the furniture industry in each of the years 1986, 1981, 1976, 1971, 1966 and 1961; what percentage were (a) male and (b) female; and how many apprentices there were in each of these years.

Mr. Lee: Separate statistics for the furniture industry are not available for the period specified and the series is broken by the introduction of the 1,980 standard industrial classification which reclassifies certain activities. The available information is as follows:

Employees in Employment in the Timber and Furniture Industry in Great Britain

	Standard Industrial Classification 1968 Order 17 (Timber, furniture, etc)			Standard Industrial Classification 1980 Class 46 (Timber and wooden furniture)
June 1961	280,000	80	20	n/a	n/a	n/a
June 1966	283,000	81	19	n/a	n/a	n/a
June 1971	264,000	81	19	n/a	n/a	n/a
June 1976	259,000	81	19	n/a	n/a	n/a
June 1981	220,000	80	20	n/a	n/a	n/a
Sept 1981	216,000	80	20	213,000	80	20
June 1986	n/a	n/a	n/a	206,000	81	19

n/a Not available.

Within the above figures, separate statistics for the furniture industry are available from 1981 as follows:

Employees in Employment in the Furniture Industry in Great Britain Standard Industrial Classification 1980 Activity Heading 4671 (Wooden and upholstered furniture)

	All employees	Percentage of males	Percentage of females
June 1986	82,000	78	22

The estimate for wooden and upholstered furniture are subject to considerable potential estimation error due to the relatively small number of employees in the industry. The Department's statistics do not include separate figures for apprentices in the furniture industry.

Disabled People

Mr. Wareing asked the Paymaster General what expenditure has been incurred by his Department since November 1983 in enforcing the statutory obligations of employers to fulfill the 3 per cent. quota of disabled people in their work force.

Mr. Lee: Precise information is not available in the form requested. The administration and enforcement of the provisions of the quota scheme are an integral part of the Manpower Services Commission's employment services for people with disabilities which are provided through jobcentres and the Disablement Advisory Service. However, the Manpower Services Commission estimates expenditure on administration and enforcement of the scheme to be between £1 million and £2 million each year.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Paymaster General what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Lee: For the financial years 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 Department of Employment expenditure on computer hardware and computer software is as follows:

£ million

	Hardware	Software
1984-85	5·77	0·59
1985-86	8·57	1·22
1986-87	10·58	1·12

Dr. Hampson asked the Paymaster General to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Lee: For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not possible to answer this question in the detail requested. However, since 1984 24 firms have been awarded contracts by my Department for orders in excess of £10,000.

EC Social Fund Projects (Liverpool)

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report projects funded by the EEC social fund in Liverpool in each of the past five years and the amount of funding in each case.

Mr. Lee: The only information readily available on successful European social fund applications in Liverpool relates to the wider metropolitan county of Merseyside, and is restricted to the years 1984 onwards. Details for the last three years for which information is available are given in the table.

The figures given relate to the amounts allocated by the European Commission to the individual applications. For a variety of reasons, the amounts finally paid out will in some cases have been lower and some projects may not have taken place.

Unemployment

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General what is the average rate of unemployment in each of the intermediate areas and development areas, giving the figures for male and female unemployment.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The tables show the numbers of unemployed claimants at 8 January 1987, expressed as a percentage of employees in employment plus the unemployed, in the travel-to-work areas of Great Britain which have assisted area status.

A rate is not calculated for the Manchester assisted area since it is only part of the travel-to-work area.

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General what is the number of unemployed per vacancy in each of the intermediate and development areas in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lee: The following information is available in the Library. The table shows the number of unemployed claimants on 8 January 1987 in each travel-to-work area which has intermediate or development area status, together with the jobcentres and careers offices which cover areas most nearly corresponding to the travel-to-work areas, and the numbers of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres on 9 January 1987 and at careers offices on 8 January 1987. Figures for vacancies at jobcentres and careers offices cannot be added together because some vacancies are notified to both offices. Because of the differences in the areas covered by the unemployment and vacancy figures, accurate ratios of unemployed to vacancies cannot be calculated.

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General by how many, and by what percentage, the number of jobless people in Leicestershire changed during the latest month for which figures are available; and by how many and what percentage vacancies in the county of Leicestershire and the city of Leicester rose or fell during the same period.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. Between 11 December 1986 and 8 January 1987 the number of unemployed claimants in the county of Leicestershire rose by 996, or 2·6 per cent. Between 5 December 1986 and 9 January 1987 unfilled vacancies excluding community programme vacancies fell by 114, or 4·7 per cent., at jobcentres in the county of Leicestershire, and fell by 122, or 10·8 per cent., in the Leicester jobcentre area, which closely corresponds to city of Leicester local authority district. These changes are affected by seasonal factors.

Job Training Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will specify exactly how the funding for the job training scheme has been assembled from within the departmental budget.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Community Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will give full details of current cutbacks in the community programme by region and type of scheme.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on Thursday 19 February. Places are allocated between schemes at local level in the light of both national priorities set out in planning guidance for 1987-88 and priorities determined locally by area manpower boards, which will pay particular attention to improving the quality of opportunity to long-term unemployed people.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide full details of the proposed cuts in community programme places in Kent.

Mr. Lee: On 30 January 1987, the latest date for which statistics are available, community programme schemes in Kent had 3,412 filled places, some 300 more than their formal 1986-87 allocation of 3,104. For 1987-88 it is proposed that the average filled place allocation over the year should be 2,800. This will be subject to discussion in the context of planning generally with the local area manpower board.

Skillcentre (Irvine)

Mr. Lambie asked the Paymaster General when the proposed new skillcentre in Irvine will be given the go-ahead; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Restart Scheme

Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the cost of the advertising campaign for the restart scheme (a) nationally and (b) in Stoke on Trent.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 19 February]: A wide range of Manpower Services Commission schemes have been advertised on television in connection with the restart programme at a total estimated cost of £11·2 million. This advertising expenditure represents less than 1 per cent. of the total expenditure on the schemes. I have no means of knowing what proportion of this expenditure relates to Stoke-on-Trent.

The purpose of this expenditure is to prepare unemployed people for the invitation to a restart interview and to introduce them to the wide range of opportunities that the programme offers. This helps the take-up of the programme and improves the motivation and expectations of those who take part in it.

Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General (1) what estimates he has of the proportion of advertising for the restart scheme in relation to (a) each employer who makes a positive commitment to take part in the scheme and (b) each employee participating in the scheme;

(2) how many employers have made a positive commitment to take part in the restart scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 19 February]: Under the restart programme long-term unemployed people are invited to counselling interviews at jobcentres at which the discussion focusses on their individual needs and the best way for them to get into employment or self employment. Employers are not therefore directly involved in the restart programme and the beneficiaries of restart interviews are long-term unemployed people, not employees.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Rented Housing

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the deadline for consultations following the statement on private rented housing on 5 February, Official Report, column 1157.

Mr. John Patten: 31 March 1987.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the midnight deadline referred to in the statement on private rented housing on 5 February, Official Report, column 1157.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Derelict Land

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether scrap values of items on demolition sites are taken into account when considering applications for derelict land grants.

Mr. John Patten: Income from scrap has the effect of reducing the net loss incurred in reclamation, thereby reducing the amount of derelict land grant payable.

London City Airport (Dockland)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the inspectors' report on the public inquiry into the proposal to fly the BAe 146 super-quiet jet airliner out of the London city airport in dockland.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been no planning application, which could lead to a public inquiry, to vary the planning permission for STOLport in a way which would enable BAe146 aircraft to be used.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Ridley: In 1985-86, expenditure on hardware was £5·02 million and on software £0·65 million. For 1986-87, estimated expenditure on hardware will be £6·42 million and on software £0·86 million. Expenditure proposals for 1987-88 have not yet been finalised.

School Crossing Attendants

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines are issued by his Department to local authorities for payment of school crossing attendants.

Mr. Chope: No such guidelines have been issued.

House Sales (Public Corporations)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will introduce legislation to prevent houses being resold at a profit within three years of original sale by public corporations.

Mr. Tracey: Where houses are bought under the right to buy at a discount the purchaser is required to pay back discount on selling again within three years. Voluntary sales by local authorities, housing associations and new town development corporations are normally subject to similar rules. Where other public bodies sell houses at a discount the terms of sale are properly a matter for them to determine.

Local Authorities (Construction Contracts)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce legislation to prevent the imposition of non commercial conditions by local authorities in contracts with construction companies and other suppliers.

Dr. Boyson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 18 February, at column 916. While we have reluctantly had to postpone the legislation planned for this Session, it is our firm intention to introduce appropriate legislation at the first available opportunity.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what, in constant prices, was the value of the rate support grant payment to the London borough of Tower Hamlets in 1986-87 and for each preceding year to 1978-79; what is the proposed payment of 1987-88 showing separately for each relevant year the payments received by the London Borough of Tower Hamlets in respect of services transferred from the Greater London council after abolition and information available to him on expenditure in Tower Hamlets by the Greater London council on such services.

Mr. Chope: I will answer this question shortly.

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what, in constant prices, was the payment to the London Borough of Tower Hamlets through the housing investment programme, showing Greater London council housing investment, and Tower Hamlets housing investment separately in 1986-87 and in each preceding year to 1978-79; and what is his housing investment programme for 1987-88.

Mr. Tracey: The table gives the housing investment programme allocations made to Tower Hamlets borough council since 1978-79, together with the total capital expenditure the council has incurred on housing:

	£ million (1985/86 prices)
	HIP allocation	Expenditure
1978-79	27·220	21·459
1979-80	22·009	16·576
1980-81	17·123	20·083
1981-82	6·586	11·268
1982-83	12.176	7.720
1983-84	13·264	10·895
1984-85	13·050	12·000
1985-86	11·644	12·011
1986-87	15·950	[1]20·591

[1] Estimate.

Prior to 1986-87 the GLC was free to use its resources throughout London and figures for its investment in individual boroughs are not available. The HIP allocation made to Tower Hamlets for 1986-87 took account of the resources which would otherwise have gone to the GLC.

The HIP allocation made to Tower Hamlets for 1987-88 was £14·997 million. The council can augment this, as in previous years, by making use of its capital receipts.

Mr. Hicknet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he gave in deciding the rate support grant for Scunthorpe borough council to the level of that council's expenditure on recreation compared to other similar authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: An authority's grant entitlement is determined by the relationship of its overall spending to its overall grant-related expenditure assessment, broadly its need to spend. Specific consideration is not therefore given to individual items of expenditure. On the basis of the Secretary of State's firm intentions announced on 13 January, the recreation component of Scunthorpe's GREA is £1·156 million or £18·17p per head which is the 34th highest of all shire districts.

Mr. Hicknet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on why Scunthorpe borough council is under penalty under the latest rate support grant settlement; by how much its expenditure would have to be reduced to avoid penalties; and what would be the change in domestic and non-domestic rates of such a reduction.

Mr. Chope: Like most authorities, Scunthorpe gains grant as it reduces its expenditure and loses grant as it increases it. The rate at which grant is gained or lost is greater above the GRE threshold. Scunthorpe would have to reduce its spending by £1·7 million to get below the GRE threshold and reduce its rate of grant loss. The consequences for both domestic and non-domestic rates of such a reduction could be 23p.

Carsington Reservoir

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations from any organisation or body requesting that there should be a public inquiry into the future of Carsington reservoir following the publication of the Coxon report.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will break down the money to be returned to London boroughs by the London residuary body detailing the sum to be paid to each borough; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Firm figures will not be available until the GLC's final accounts have been audited and certified. However, the tables show the latest estimates which we have from the London residuary body of revenue balances, capital receipts and associated spending power which willl be distributed to London boroughs, the common council and the Temples.

Of the estimated £129 million revenue balances available for distribution, £89 million is being paid out in this financial year in monthly instalments. The remaining £40 million is to be distributed in 1987-88. LRB estimate that a further £40 million may be available in 1988-89. It is, however, too early to say whether this amount will be distributed, as it may be required to finance other expenditure.

Distribution of capital receipts is subject to the Local Government Reorganisation (Capital Money) (Greater London) Order 1987 (SI 1987/118) which will come into effect on 27 February 1987. This provides for the transfer of the cash and spending power. Table B shows the estimated spending power entitlement for the city and boroughs.

Rented Housing

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment under what specific legislative powers his hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Construction was acting when he announced to the House on 5 February, Official Report, columns 1156-7, that guarantees and indemnities and the transfer of land and property by local authorities to housing associations and other persons in connection with the acquisition, construction, conversion, rehabilitation, improvement, maintenance and management of accommodation for letting or licensing after midnight that day would be declared unlawful and void; and by whom such transactions would be so declared.

Mr. John Patten: My statement to the House on 5 February made it clear that the relevant legislation would be included in the Local Government Bill. The Bill was introduced on 18 February.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the continuation of the Rent Acts as they apply to the privately rented housing sector.

Mr. John Patten: The Government have no plans to amend the Rent Acts in this Parliament.

Government Car Service

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost in each year since 1979 to date of the Government car service; and how many Ministers are currently eligible for a chauffeured car.

Mr. Chope: Departmental records for the period 1979 to 1982 are no longer available.

The cost of providing the Government car service to Ministers was as follows:

1982-83	1,595
1983-84	1,745
1984-85	1,844
1985-86	2,125
1986-87[1]	1,726

[1]To 31 December 1986.

All Ministers are eligible for a chauffeuured car and the Government car service currently provides chauffer driven services to 80 Ministers.

Waterways (Maintenance)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has of the maintenance backlog on commercial and on leisure waterways and of how much capital investment is required to clear this backlog.

Mr. John Patten: The present extent of the backlog and the capital investment required to clear it is under consideration by the board as part of its corporate planning process.

Right to Buy

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people in (a) Scunthorpe and (b) Glanford have bought their council house under the right to buy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The numbers of dwellings reported as sold under the right to buy are: Scunthorpe, 1,736 to June 1986; Glanford, 714 to September 1986.

Radiation

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 16 February, Official Report, column 415, concerning free measurements of radon levels in houses, what areas of Somerset are considered areas where radon concentrations might be at or above the action level; what funds are available to cover the cost of any such free measurements in Somerset and elsewhere; what number of free measurements can be provided from the funds presently available; if any criteria other than geographical location will be used in deciding whether to provide a free measurement service to residents of Somerset; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am advised by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) that, on the basis of the results of its preliminary national survey, the only area of Somerset which is currently considered to be an area where radon concentrations might be at or above the action level for existing houses is the eastern part of the geographical area of Sedgemoor in the area of Mendip district council. My Department will pay the cost of measurements by the NRPB of houses in this area. Adequate funds will be made available to ensure that free measurements can be carried out in all areas where radon concentrations might be above or near the action level. In deciding whether or not free measurement of a particular property would be justified the NRPB will consider previous survey results on the locality and geological similarities with other parts of the country known to have elevated radon concentrations. Information on the physical characteristics of the particular dwelling will also be taken into account.

Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation (Housing)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what instructions have been given to Warrington and Runcorn development corporation in relation to the disposal of its housing stock, with particular reference to debt and future repairs liability.

Mr. John Patten: No such instructions have been given since a direction was issued in March 1985 under section 43 of the New Towns Act 1981 requiring consultations with the Warrington borough council on a housing transfer scheme. The Department will be responding to the outcome of those consultations as soon as possible.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations there were between his Department and outside bodies prior to the issue of the draft circular on development involving agricultural land; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Consistently with the normal practice, the draft circular on development involving agricultural land has been issued for the specific purpose of enabling outside bodies to comment before the Government reach final conclusions on the matter.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide the number of dwellings in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland; and if he will detail in percentage terms the number of dwellings in each country which are (i) owner-occupied, (ii) public sector rented, (iii) rented from housing associations, and (iv) privately rented.

Mr. Tracey: The latest provisional estimates are as follows:

Tenure of dwelling stock: end of December 1986 (provisional)

	All dwellings Thousands	Percentage of all dwellings
		Owner occupied	Rented from local authorities or new town corporations	Rented from housing associations	Rented from private owners and other tenures
England	18,886	64·9	24·3	2·7	8·0
Wales	1,126	67·3	22·9	1·8	8·0
Scotland	2,060	41·8	49·6	2·2	6·3

Note: For statistical purposes the stock estimates are expressed to the nearest thousand, but they should not be regarded as accurate to the last digit.

Croft and Birchwood

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make an announcement on the division of Croft and Birchwood into two separate parishes.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has not yet received proposals from the Local Government Boundary Commission.

Nuclear Waste

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment where depleted uranium is currently being stored.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply.

Depleted uranium resulting from the reprocessing of magnox fuel and the operation of enrichment plants is stored by British Nuclear Fuels plc at its Sellafield, Springfields, Capenhurst and Chapelcross sites. Relatively small amounts are held by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for research and development purposes. Other uses, for small quantities of depleted uranium, were listed in my reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 21 October 1985, at column 21.

Construction Work (Scotland)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of any construction work undertaken either by the Ministry of Defence or the Property Services Agency on behalf of the Ministry of Defence in Scotland in 1984, 1985 and 1986; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 20 February 1987]: Construction expenditure in Scotland by MOD direct is I understand not more than £2 million per annum. Expenditure by the Property Services Agency, on MOD's behalf, on new works including the modernisation of married quarters and maintenance is as follows:

	1984-85	1985-86	[1]1986-87	[2]1987-88
New works	80·499	80·785	133·139	166·823
Maintenance	28·953	31·138	30·902	28·318
Totals	109·452	111·923	164·041	195·141

[2] Provisional.

District Works Office, Westminster

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the full cost of the use of consultants in the District Works Office, Westminster; how many consultants have been employed; and what is the comparable cost of using Property Services Agency staff.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 18 February 1987]: Five firms of quantity surveying consultants are now employed measuring term contract works in support of Westminster District Works Office at a total cost of £32,000 in a full year. There is little difference between the cost of providing these quantity surveying services in-house and by consultants.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prisoners (Scheduled Offences)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons imprisoned for scheduled offences have since been released.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested. However, from 1 January 1979 until 2 February 1987, 5,667 persons have been imprisoned subsequent to conviction for scheduled offences in Northern Ireland. Of these 867 are still serving their sentences.

Security Forces (Offences)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of those cases where members of security forces have been charged with offences causing (a) the death of or (b) injury to civilians for each year since 1969, indicating the branch of the service involved Royal Ulster Constabulary, Ulster Defence Regiment, Army, Marines and so on, the charge originally brought, the charge for which each person was tried, the verdict and, where appropriate, where the sentence was served.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Residential Homes and Hospitals (Hygiene)

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what guidelines or requirements Her Majesty's Government have notified to health boards in Northern Ireland regarding hygiene and the use of disinfectant for cleaning in residential homes and hospitals;

(2) how many residential homes in Northern Ireland do not currently use disinfectants in the cleaning of floors, toilets, commodes, walls or fittings;

(3) what are the cost savings to health boards in Northern Ireland of using washing-up liquid rather than disinfectants for hygiene maintenance in residential homes;

(4) what reports have been made by Government health inspectors regarding the use of washing-up liquid rather than disinfectants for hygiene maintenance in residential homes or hospitals;

(5) how many hospitals in Northern Ireland have cut back on the use of disinfectant for hygiene maintenance; and what further savings are envisaged.

Mr. Viggers: The Department of Health and Social Services discourages the indiscriminate use of disinfectants for cleaning in hospitals and residential homes. It will shortly be issuing formal guidance which provides for their use to be specifically prescribed by health and social services boards' control of infection officers. This guidance will mirror recent guidance by the Department of Health and Social Security to the National Health Service. I understand that there has already been some reduction in use of disinfectants in favour of neutral detergents, as a matter of professional practice rather than as a cost-saving measure. The cost effects of this revision in practice have not been quantified. Information about the use of disinfectants in individual hospitals and residential homes is not available centrally. District council environmental health officers have not issued any reports regarding the use of washing-up liquid rather than disinfectant for hygiene maintenance in hospitals ~~or residential homes~~.

Incomes

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the total number of people and the proportion of the population of Northern Ireland in 1979 (a) with incomes below supplementary benefit level, (b) on supplementary benefit, and (c) on incomes of up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, broken down by family type and economic status;

(2) what was the total number of people and the proportion of the population of Northern Ireland in 1983 (a) with incomes below supplementary benefit level, (b) on supplementary benefit, and (c) on incomes of up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, according to the 1983 "Family Expenditure Survey", and broken down by family type and economic status;

(3) what was the total number of people and the proportion of the population of Northern Ireland in 1981 (a) with incomes below supplementary benefit level, (b) on supplementary benefit, and (c) on incomes of up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, broken down by family type and economic status.

Mr. Viggers: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Drainage and Flood Relief

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list expenditure on each capital and revenue arterial land drainage and flood alleviation scheme in Northern Ireland for each year since 1975, indicating what proportion of the work was undertaken by outside contractors as opposed to the Department of Agriculture's direct labour organisation.

Mr. Viggers: Information is not available in the form requested and disproportionate costs would be incurred in compiling it. However, the proportion of expenditure on schemes undertaken by contractors as opposed to the Department of Agriculture's direct labour organisation over the period 1975-76 to 1985-86 is as follows:

	Per cent.
1975-76	nil
1976-77	10
1977-78	8
1978-79	12
1979-80	17
1980-81	23
1981-82	28
1982-83	34
1983-84	39

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the current estimated total cost is of the Blackwater arterial drainage scheme; if he will list the sources from which the cost will be met; and if he will list for each of the phases of the Blackwater arterial drainage scheme the contract number, location, estimated cost and, where available, the final cost.

Mr. Viggers: The total estimated gross cost of the Blackwater scheme in Northern Ireland is £20·1 million, towards which contributions will be made from EC, Irish Republic and Northern Ireland funds. No final costs are available.

Northern Ireland works relate to the following contracts:

Contract and Contract works location		Estimated cost (£ million)
A	Main Channel Benburb-Caledon	2·8
B	Main and Minor Border Channels: Annaghroe Bridge-Derrymeen Bridge, Aughnacloy	3·0

[1] Not given for commercial reasons.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what submissions he made to the European Council in its review of directive 79/197 as required under article 5.2 of the directive; and what plans he has for future cross-border arterial drainage projects in the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland now that directive 79/197 has expired.

Mr. Viggers: A joint United Kingdom/Republic of Ireland submission was lodged with the European Commission in July 1986 requesting an extension of the directive 79/197 and an increase in aid available under it. I have no plans for further rural cross-border arterial drainage projects.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the arterial land drainage schemes which were included in the joint programme submitted with the Republic of Ireland to the European Commission under Article 2.1 of directive 79/197 on a programme to promote drainage in catchment areas, including land on both sides of the border between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland; and if he will detail for each scheme the number of hectares of agricultural land whose drainage would be improved as a result of such schemes, and the estimated cost.

Mr. Viggers: Rivers Blackwater and Finn/Lacky catchments. Some 3,200 hectares of agricultural land in Northern Ireland will benefit from the Blackwater scheme and possibly 1,400 hectares from the Finn/Lacky scheme at a gross cost of £20·1 million for the former. Until the design work is completed it is not possible to give a firm estimate of the cost of the Finn/Lacky but a preliminary figure is £5·5 million.

Terrorism (Convention)

Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has anything to add to the statement on 12 February, Official Report, column 446, regarding the ratification by the Irish Republic of the European convention for the suppression of terrorism.

Mr. Tom King: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Rape

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many men have been prosecuted for rape in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland; how many men have been convicted in each of these years; of these, how many have not been sent to prison; how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of less than three years, between three and five years, between five and 10 years, and over 10 years, respectively; and what orders were made in respect of those convicted but not sent to prison.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Personal Social Services (Costs)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish figures for 1985-86, showing the costs of the personal social services in each of the main United Kingdom regions, and distinguishing between the main categories of expenditure, including administration.

Mr. Newton: Figures for gross current expenditure for 1984-5, the latest year for which complete figures are available, are shown in the table. The information requested is not available for 1985-86 for England as returns have not yet been received from all authorities. Scotland and Northern Ireland have a different method of collecting data which prevents seperate identification of data on administration costs.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, for the most recent 12-month period, the cost of the London ambulance service, the number of persons employed, and the division of these services between emergency and passenger transport; what is the source of the funding; and what is the average cost per passenger or incident of each journey.

Mr. Newton: The London Ambulance Service budget for 1986-87 is £41,800,000.

The whole-time equivalent establishment for both emergency and non-emergency staff is 2,268, comprising:

	Number
(a) Staff on emergency transport	1,508
(b) Staff on non-emergency transport	760

This does not include overtime.

The source of funding is the four Thames regional health authorities, which contribute in the following proportions:

	Per cent.
South West Thames	17·528
North West Thames	28·908
South East Thames	21·180
North East Thames	32·384

With effect from 1 April 1987 this will change to direct funding of the South West Thames regional health authority (the managing authority) by the Department.

The average cost per patient carried (based on 1985-86 costs and patient volumes) was £14·69.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total expenditure in the four Thames regional health authorities in 1978-79 and in the latest financial year for which figures are available; and whether he will express the figures both at current prices and at April 1978 prices.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is shown in the table. The figures are based on total gross revenue expenditure for the Thames regions and boards of governors/special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals, as figures for the individual Thames regions are distorted by the 1982 boundary changes.

Year	Gross revenue expenditure[1] (£ million)
	Cash	1978-79 prices[2]
1978-79	1,573·0	1,573·0
1985-86	3,233·6	1,714·2

Doctors

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service doctors have been permitted to practise for the first time in the London borough of Lambeth in the last two years.

Mr. Newton: Since 1 January 1985 in the London borough of Lambeth 10 vocationally trained practitioners have entered general medical practice for the first time to provide general medical services, and a further 10 general medical practitioners have taken up posts there, having previously worked elsewhere.

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many doctors there are in Basildon; and what is the average number of patients for each doctor.

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the size of the in-patient waiting list at National Health Service hospitals at the most recent date for which figures are available; and how this compares with the figures for May 1979.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry that I cannot give my hon. Friend information in precisely the form requested. At 31 March 1986, the latest date for which figures are available centrally, there were a total of 673,107 patients on the in-patient waiting list for admission to National Health Service hospitals in England compared with 752,422 on 31 March 1979, a reduction of 10·5 per cent.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present number of people waiting for hospital treatment in the Wandsworth health authority and the number that have been waiting for more than six months, more than one year and more than two years.

Mr. Newton: For the latest information available centrally, I refer the hon. Member to "Hospital In-Patient Waiting List at 31 March 1986, National, Regional and District Summaries", a copy of which is in the Library. For more recent and more detailed information the hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Wandsworth district health authority, who may be able to provide the information that he seeks.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each district health authority in England and Wales, what was the length of out-patient hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry that I cannot give the hon. Member the information that he seeks. No information is held centrally on numbers awaiting out-patient appointments.

Tobacco

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospital beds were taken up by patients suffering from diseases normally associated with tobacco smoking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: The available information for the main diseases associated with smoking is given in the table. Smoking is a major, but not the sole, cause of illness from these diseases; in particular, ischaemic heart disease has a number of other important contributory factors.

Estimated average daily number of beds occupied by patients with selected main diagnoses. NHS hospitals in England 1984

Main diagnosis	ICD[1] code	Estimated average number of beds occupied daily

Bronchitis and emphysema	490-492	1,080
Chronic airways obstruction, not elsewhere classified	496	1,180

[1] International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths were recorded from diseases normally associated with tobacco smoking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: It is not possible to be precise. Most deaths associated with cigarette smoking arise from three diseases: lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and "heart attacks" due to obstruction of the arteries of the heart. However, the proportion of deaths attributable to smoking from each of these diseases varies. Furthermore, smoking is also implicated in certain other conditions where no estimate of the numbers of the deaths caused by smoking is available — for example, obstruction of the arteries of the lower limbs.

It is estimated that at least 90 per cent. of deaths from cancers of the lung, lip, oesophagus and larynx, and 90 per cent. of deaths from chronic bronchitis, obstructive lung disease, chronic pulmonary heart disease and aortic aneurysm are attributable to smoking. The total number of deaths from these conditions involved is given in the table.

England and Wales—1985

ICD [1] code		Number
162	Malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus and lung	35,792
140-149	Malignant neoplasm of lip, oral cavity and pharynx	1,697
150	Malignant neoplasm of oesophagus	4,570
161	Malignant neoplasm of larynx	835
416	Chronic pulmonary heart disease	781
441	Aortic aneurysm	7,656
490-492, 496	Bronchitis and emphysema, chronic airways obstruction, not elsewhere classified	28,118

In 1983, the Royal College of Physicians in its report "Health or Smoking" estimated that perhaps 20 per cent. of deaths due to obstruction of the arteries of the heart were related to smoking. The medical term for this condition is "ischaemic heart disease"', but it is commonly often referred to as "coronary heart disease". The total number of deaths from this condition for England and Wales is as follows, but the proportion directly attributable to smoking is less certain as this is only one of a number of causes that give rise to obstruction of the arteries of the heart.

England and Wales—1985

ICD [1] code		Number
410-414	Ischaemic heart disease	163,104

[1] International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many working days were lost in England, Scotland and Wales by people suffering from diseases normally associated with tobacco smoking during the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: Information in the form requested is not available. The table shows days of certified incapacity for sickness and invalidity benefit for the main diseases associated with smoking. The statistics exclude periods of incapacity covered by statutory sick pay (in 1984-85 normally a maximum of eight weeks in a tax year) and working days lost by certain groups of workers who do not claim these benefits. They do include days of incapacity for which invalidity benefit was claimed by men aged 65-69 and women aged 60-64. Persons in these age groups accounted for some 15-20 per cent. of the total days of incapacity shown in the table.

Equagesic

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received calling for the inclusion of the drug Equagesic on the limited list of drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have received a number of letters and other representations about the drug Equagesic. The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs has considered representations from the manufacturers of Equagesic and we have accepted its advice that there is no clinical need for this combination product to be available for National Health Service prescription.

NHS (Trade Unions)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what subjects he discussed at his last meeting with trade union representatives of employees in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: When my predecessor met the staff side of the General Whitley Council on 16 September 1985, the following subjects were discussed:

Implementation of the NHS management inquiry report.
The structure and role of the NHS management board.
Privatisation/contracting out.
Funding of pay settlements.
Code of practice issued by the Commission for Racial Equality.

NHS (Staff)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the numbers of staff employed by the National Health Service in England expressed as whole-time equivalents as well as actual full-time and part-time numbers.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is shown in the table.

NHS directly employed staff as at 30 September 1985[1] England

Whole time equivalent[2]	Numbers[2]
812,800	605,900	368,000

Source: DHSS Annual Censuses of NHS Medical and Non-Medical Manpower.

[1] Includes hospital practitioners and part-time medical/dental officers (clinical assistants). There are 377 (numbers) and 60·7 (whole-time equivalent) medical and dental locums whom it is not possible to separately identify as working full time or part time. These staff have been excluded. Agency nursing and midwifery staff are included.

Abortions

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what requirements and assurances his Department has sought since 1974 from clinics performing abortions after 20 weeks; and whether any clinics have lost their licenses through not complying with these requirements.

Mr. Newton: In the private sector, all places approved for abortion are required to give assurances in respect of:
Financial and business arrangements
Advertising
Facilities and staffing, including medical and nursing cover
Maintenance of patient records and medical notes including number of operations
Patient admission/discharge
Arrangements for blood supply, including emergency cover
Estimation of gestational age
Disposal of foetal material

Places specially approved to carry out terminations at 20 weeks and over gestation are required to give additional assurances concerning the estimation of gestational age by ultrasound scan, the maintenance of a separate register, the availability of resuscitation equipment and arrangements for the immediate transfer to a nearby hospital special care baby unit in the event of a live birth.

No clinics approved to carry out terminations at 20 weeks and over gestation have had their approval revoked through non-compliance with these requirements.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number and percentages of abortions performed to residents and non-residents at 20 to 23 weeks gestation and 24 weeks and over gestation for the years 1984 and 1985; on what grounds these were performed; what ages the women were; how many were performed in the National Health Service; and how many were performed in approved places.

Mr. Newton: The information is given in the tables.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give a breakdown of total abortions in the last five years for which figures are available of abortions upon (a) resident and (b) non-resident women in England and Wales, stating how many of those abortions on such women were performed at nought to 19 weeks gestation, 20 weeks, 21 weeks, 22 weeks, 23 weeks, 24 weeks, 25 weeks, 26 weeks, 27 weeks, 28 weeks, or more, stating in each case (i) the age of the mother, (ii) the marital status of the mother, (iii) the category of premises, (iv) the number of children previously liveborn to the mother, (v) the abortion technique used and (vi) whether the abortion was an NHS abortion carried out in a non-NHS centre under agency arrangements;

(2) if he will give a breakdown of the different grounds for which abortions were peformed in England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available on (a) resident and (b) non-resident women, stating how many of those abortions on such women were performed at nought to 19 weeks gestation, 20 weeks, 21 weeks, 22 weeks, 23 weeks, 24 weeks, 25 weeks, 26 weeks, 27 weeks and 28 weeks or more, stating in each case (i) the age of the mother, (ii) the marital status of the mother, (iii) the category of premises, (iv) the number of children previously liveborn to the mother, (v) the abortion technique used and (vi) whether the abortion was a National Health Service abortion carried out in a non-National Health Service centre under agency arrangements.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 153]: The exact information requested by my hon. Friend would require tables showing about 34 million separate figures on some 80,000 pages. Copies of five tables giving the information in a more condensed form have been placed in the Library. Figures for 1986 relate to notifications for the March, June and September quarters received up to the end of November 1986.

AIDS

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which London hospitals are able to treat people seeking hospital treatment for AIDS.

Mr. Newton: We would expect all general hospitals to be able to treat such patients, and specialist hospitals to be able to so for those conditions associated with AIDS with which they deal.

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he is making within the North West region for the appropriate treatment of AIDS cases in maternity wards.

Mr. Newton: Such arrangements are a matter for health authorities to determine.

Mr. Dickens asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance his Department has issued in connection with the anti-AIDS campaign about the multiple use of needles for blood testing in schools.

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information his Department has received in the context of the anti-AIDS campaign about the relative safety of the gun method and the use of disposable needles for injections; what guidance he has issued on this matter; and what representations he has received about the use of the gun method.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friends have replies as soon as possible.

Committee of Public Accounts (Recommendations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list those recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983 affecting his Department which have been implemented.

Mr. Fowler: I refer the hon. Member to the Treasury minutes published in response to the relevant reports of the Committee. The Treasury minutes are contained in:

1983-84
Cmnd. 9178
Cmnd. 9226
Cmnd. 9325
Cmnd. 9368

1984-85
Cmnd. 9530
Cmnd. 9546
Cmnd. 9587
Cmnd. 9638
Cmnd. 9696
Cmnd. 9743

1985-86
Cmnd. 9808
Cmnd. 9859
Cmnd. 9917

The Committee, on which the hon. Member serves, monitors Departmental progress with accepted recommendations.

Hepatitis

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether hepatitis A and B are notifiable diseases.

Mrs. Currie: Infective jaundice is notifiable under the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1968. Two of its causes are hepatitis A and hepatitis B.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Ron Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Carlisle claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Carlisle constituency is covered by the Department's office at Carlisle, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Carlisle local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,462.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Lambeth claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following number of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's offices which cover the borough of Lambeth, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Southwark	925
Kennington Park	731
Brixton	1,375
Balham[1]	—
Peckham	1,958
Crystal Palace	459
Streatham	755
Battersea[1]	—

[1] Claims for these offices are dealt with at Broadstairs out-station. A total of 5,258 claims were dealt with at that office but this total includes claims proper to other offices.

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Sheffield, Hillsborough claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Sheffield, Hillsborough constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Sheffield, North-East and Sheffield, North-West, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant in each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Sheffield, North-East	1,579
Sheffield, North-West	1,933

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Sheffield, Hillsborough received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 790 claims to maternity allowance were made at Sheffield, North-East and 1,142 claims at Sheffield, North-West, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Lambeth received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the borough of Lambeth although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Southwark	1,115
Kennington Park	410
Brixton	1,727
Balham	[1]
Peckham	1,431
Crystal Palace	1,301
Streatham	1,325
Battersea	[1]

[1] Claims for these offices are dealt with at Broadstairs out-station. A total of 2,999 claims were dealt with at that office but this total includes claims proper to other offices.

Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Heywood and Middleton received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 935 claims to maternity allowance were made at Middleton, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Heywood and Middleton claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Heywood and Middleton constituency is covered by the Department's office at Middleton. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Middleton local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,138.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Harlow claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Harlow constituency is covered by the Department's office at Harlow, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in the Harlow local office during the calendar year 1986 was 1,466.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Harlow received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,011 claims to maternity allowance were made at Harlow, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Ron Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Carlisle received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,042 claims to maternity allowance were made at Carlisle, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Copeland received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,605 claims to maternity allowance were made at Barrow-in-Furness and 565 claims at Whitehaven, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Forrester asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Stoke-on-Trent, North, constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,640 claims to maternity allowance were made at Stoke, North, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Forrester asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Stoke-on-Trent, North constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Stoke on Trent, North constituency is covered by the Department's office at Stoke, North, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims received for maternity grant in Stoke, North local office during the calendar year 1986 was 2,605.

Private Medicine

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to require that those receiving private treatment in National Health Service hospitals are required to produce their private insurance cover details or lodge the necessary funds with the hospital before private treatment starts.

Mrs. Currie: Existing instructions to health authorities are that before admitting a private patient hospitals should always be satisfied of his ability to pay. They should seek deposits equivalent to the full estimated cost of the hospital charges which will be payable, except where there are good grounds for believing that no difficulty will arise over payment, for example when evidence of adequate insurance cover is produced. The Handbook on the Management of Private Practice in Health Service Hospitals, issued in March 1986 to all Health Authorities which are required to implement it, makes the position quite clear.

We have no plans to introduce legislation.

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of people who owe money to the National Health Service through defaulting on payment for private treatment in National Health Service hospitals are foreigners.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not available. Health authorities are not required to keep records distinguishing the country of origin of private patients treated in Health Service hospitals.

National Kidney Research Fund

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a grant to the national kidney research fund in the 1987-88 financial year.

Mrs. Currie: Grants to help with the administration costs of national voluntary organisations which are registered charities or companies limited by guarantee, and which assist in furthering the Department's policy objectives in the field of health care, can be made under section 64 of the Health Service and Public Health Act 1968. The research activities of voluntary bodies are not funded under the section 64 scheme.

No application for a section 64 grant in 1987-88 has been received from the National Kidney Research Fund.

State Pensions

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the future funding of state pensions.

Mr. Major: State retirement pensions will continue to be funded principally through national insurance contributions by employers and employees. We took steps in the Social Security Act 1986 to modify the future costs of the state earnings-related pension in order to ensure that it would be possible to fund increasing pensions for growing numbers of pensioners.

Social Fund

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the change in expenditure by his Department from the introduction of the social fund in Brighton; how many payments he estimates will be made from this fund; and what is the estimated average amount.

Mr. Major: Decisions on the total size of the social fund and on allocations to different parts of the country will be taken nearer to the time of its full introduction in April 1988.

Consultants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, by district, the numbers of consultants employed in the National Health Service as (a) whole-time, (b) maximum part-time and (c) part-time.

Mr. Newton: Information on employment of National Health Service consultants by district is not available centrally for all districts. Numbers of consultant contracts held by regional health authorities, district health authorities designated for teaching purposes, and special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals are set out in the table. Some consultants may hold contracts with more than one authority.

Children (Abuse)

Mr. Dickens asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he proposes to take to reduce the backlog of cases of children who have suffered sexual or other forms of abuse and who are waiting for psychiatric treatment at Great Ormond Street hospital; what is the current backlog; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Very urgent cases of children who have suffered abuse for whom psychiatric counselling is sought from the hospital for sick children are seen immediately; less urgent cases within four or at the most six weeks. The hospital's Department of psychological medicine advises that it is currently keeping up with referrals, which are running at four to five per week.

Since this programme started in September 1981, 630 cases have been referred and 250 patients were treated last year. The Department is funding a special project to develop this service further over the next three years.

Several other clinics in London and elsewhere provide psychiatric counselling for the victims of child abuse.

Radiation (Cancer)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) pursuant to his answer of 16 February, regarding cancer incidence, if he will give for the 0-24 year age group (a) the number of deaths from cancer and (b) the registration of cancer of (i) chronic myeloid leukaemia, (ii) acute myeloid leukaemia, (iii) chronic and acute myeloid leukaemia, (iv) acute lymphatic leukaemia and (v) (i) to (iv) inclusive giving in each case the number of deaths from cancers which have occurred and which were expected and the ratio between occurrence and expected rate for each of the 14 nuclear installations from the dates given in his answer, save for Winfrith, which should be given from January 1968, Bradwell from July 1962, Berkeley from June 1962 and Oldbury from December 1967, Hinckley A from March 1965, Hinckley B from September 1976, Trawsfynydd from March 1965, Dungeness A from October 1965, Sizewell A from March 1966 and Wylfa from November 1967 giving, for each station, the data for each of the four distance zones separately and for the four distance zones aggregated indicating the distance of each zone, and aggregated zone, from the installation;

(2) if he will give the number and expected rate of leukaemia deaths in the 0 to 24 years age group in the area of (a) Trawsfynydd, (b) Sizewell and (c) Dungeness nuclear plants 1963 to 1980 inclusive;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 16 February, Official Report, column 506, regarding cancer incidence, if he will give (a) the number of deaths and (b) the registration of cancers for (i) all leukaemias, (ii) all lymphatic leukaemias and (iii) all lymphatic malignancies for the three age groups, 14 nuclear installations, giving the rates for the four distance zones separately and amalgamated from 1959, or the date the plant started to operate, whichever is the later to 1980 showing in each case the expected rate.

Mr. Newton: The exact information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I refer the hon. Member to table 3 of the report "Cancer Incidence and Mortality in the vicinity of Nuclear Installations, England and Wales, 1959-80", proof copies of which are in the Library.

The more detailed information requested will be obtainable from the microfiche which will become available on or after the publication of the report.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 16 February regarding cancer incidence, if he will list the 25 groups and 16 sites of malignancy cited.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to section 4.6 of chapter 4 (page 73) and to the table on page 84 of the report "Cancer Incidence and Mortality in the vicinity of Nuclear Installations, England and Wales, 1959-80", proof copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 16 February regarding incidence, if the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys' report has studied the cancer incidence and deaths occurring within 12½ kilometres of each nuclear installation.

Mr. Newton: Yes. The report "Cancer Incidence and Mortality in the vicinity of Nuclear Installations, England and Wales, 1959-80" has studied cancer incidence and deaths occurring among those living in pre-1974 local authority areas (LAAs) where at least two thirds of the population live within eight miles (12·87 kilometres) of 15 nuclear installations. The report also includes data for LAAs where at least one third of the population live within 10 miles (16·09 kilometres) of the installations.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the full cost of the statistical study on cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales from 1959 to 1980, carried out by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys.

Mr. Newton: The cost of the statistical study on cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales from 1959 to 1980 carried out by the Medical Research Council, the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, and the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys is about £300,000 excluding overheads (such as accommodation).

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report details of areas of the highest incidence of those forms of cancer which have been correlated with atomic radiation; and whether any of these areas are in the vicinity of nuclear power stations.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Member for Wycombe (Mr. Whitney) on 15 April 1986 at columns 371-72. This presented limited data on the distribution of myeloid leukaemia in the United Kingdom in 1984.

There are a number of detailed studies currently in progress into the incidence of cancer in the United Kingdom. As my predecessor stated on 12 December 1985 at column 767 the results of these will be considered by the committee on the medical aspects of radiation in the environment as they become available. Photocopies of the first rough proof from the printer of the OPCS report "Cancer Incidence and Mortality in the vicinity of Nuclear Installations, England and Wales 1959-1980" were placed in the Library on 18 February 1987.

Mr. R. J. Knight

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on what date his formal inquiry into the case of Mr. R. J. Knight will now be heard;

(2) what are the reasons for the delay in considering the application of Mr. R. J. Knight of Coventry for a formal ruling that he was in employed earner's employment at the time of his accident; and if he has sent an apology to the constituent of the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East.

Mr. Lyell: The oral inquiry into Mr. Knight's case was originally scheduled for 14 January but had to be postponed because adverse weather conditions prevented the attendance of one of the witnesses. Mr. Knight has been informed that the hearing will now be held on 18 March. I much regret the delay.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the letter from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East of 7 November 1986 concerning the case of Mr. R. J. Knight took 14 weeks to answer.

Mr. Lyell: I am sorry for the delay. I had hoped to write to the hon. Member in December but the letter was delayed over Christmas and then had to be amended. The inquiry, the result of which I then intended to await, was postponed on account of bad weather. My letter was then reamended.

Industrial Deafness

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to change the criteria by which industrial deafness is determined; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council is keeping the occupational deafness scheme under continuous review and a report is expected later this year. We will give careful consideration to its recommendations.

Drug Testing

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received the report of the medicines commission on the testing of drugs in healthy volunteers; and whether he will publish its findings and give an indication of his intentions on it.

Mr. Newton: The report has been received and we are making arrangements for it to be published. In considering our conclusions, we are taking account also of the Royal College of Physicians report "Research on Healthy Volunteers".

Meningitis

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many individuals have developed meningitis in the United Kingdom during the current year; and how these figures compare to those for the same period in 1986.

Mrs. Currie: In the six weeks to 13 February 1987 the communicable disease surveillance centre was notified of 215 isolations of meningococcal meningitis in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. In the same period, 13 isolations in Scotland were notified to the communicable disease surveillance unit in Glasgow. The comparable figures for 1986 were 109 and 17 respectively.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what initiatives he has already taken and intends to take to combat the rising incidence of meningitis, especially in Stonehouse, Gloucestershire.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest estimate of the number claiming family income supplement.

Mr. Major: At May 1986, the latest date for which information is available, there were 202,000 families receiving family income supplement.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many family income supplement claimants are currently paying (a) income tax and (b) national insurance contributions.

Mr. Major: At April 1986 there were a total of 200,000 families in receipt of family income supplement and of those 138,000 were paying income tax and 188,000 were paying national insurance contributions.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the percentage of family income supplement claimants paying (a) tax and national insurance and (b) national insurance only.

Mr. Major: At April 1986 there were a total of 200,000 families in receipt of family income supplement and of those 69 per cent. were paying both tax and national insurance contributions and 25 per cent. were paying national insurance contributions only.

Benefits

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of unemployed claimants drawing (a) unemployment benefit, (b) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit and (c) supplementary benefit only in 1957, 1979 and the latest available date.

Mr. Lyell: The available information is given in the table.

	Unemployment benefit only	Unemployment benefit and national assistance/[1] supplementary benefit	National assistance/ supplementary benefit
November 1957	[2]153,000	[2]35,000	46,000
November 1979	387,000	80,000	472,000
May 1986	732,000	194,000	1,684,000

[1] Supplementary benefit replaced national assistance in 1966.
[2] Estimates.

Kidney Organ Donor Cards

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many kidney organ donor cards have been issued by his Department during the past 12 months; and how many of the cards have been taken up by members of the public.

Mrs. Currie: More than 6 million multi-organ donor cards were issued by the Department in 1986. The driver and vehicle licensing centre (DVLC) at Swansea distributed a further 3½ million by enclosing a card with each driving licence sent out.

It is impossible to estimate precisely how many of these cards have been signed and are now being carried by people willing to donate their organs. However, a survey carried out on behalf of the British Kidney Patient Association in January 1987 suggested that about 29 per cent. of the adult population possessed a donor card; this represents about 12½ million people in Great Britain.

Fraud

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for offences of fraud against his Department in each of the years since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: The information requested is as follows:

	(a) Prosecuted	(b) Convicted
1979-80	22,247	21,797
1980-81	24,441	23,871
1981-82	19,713	18,952
1982-83	15,507	14,867
1983-84	10,398	9,479
1984-85	10,394	9,807
1985-86	9,765	9,349

Loan Sanction Allocation (Sheffield)

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he received a letter from the Sheffield city council, family and community services committee relating to the social services loan sanction allocation for 1987-88; what response he has sent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: No such letter has been received.

18 Union Lane, Oulton

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the East Anglian regional health authority has withdrawn from sale No. 18 Union Lane, Oulton, Lowestoft, after receiving and accepting an offer of £27,950.

Mrs. Currie: This is essentially a local matter and the hon. Member may wish to raise it with the chairman of the Great Yarmouth and Waveney district health authority.

Catholic Social Services Central Administration

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to be able to reply to a letter dated 9 December 1986 from the Catholic Social Services Central Administration.

Mrs. Currie: I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 February.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to be able to make an announcement about an agreement with the manufacturers of Skoal Bandits about health warnings on containers.

Mrs. Currie: This is still under consideration and an announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Fluoridation

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why he will not place a copy of the draft circular on fluoridation of water supplies in the Library;

(2) when the comments of regional general managers must be received on the draft circular giving guidance on the fluoridation of water supplies.

Mrs. Currie: Regional general managers have been asked to submit their comments on the draft circular by 31 March 1987. It would not seem necessary to place such a draft document in the Library but I am writing to the hon. Member enclosing a copy.

Special Health Authority

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the annual salary of the chairman and two vice chairmen of the special health authority.

Mr. Newton: Only the chairman of the special health authority will be entitled to remuneration, currently £10,749 per annum.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library a copy of the job description for the position of director of the special health authority.

Mr. Newton: The advertisement for the post including a job description was published on 19 and 22 February in leading national newspapers. A cutting has also been placed in the Library.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage annual increase since 1972 in National Health Service expenditure deflated by movements in National Health Service pay and prices after taking account of (i) demographic change and the increased health service demands from the growing number of elderly people, and (ii) the higher annual cost of medical technology rising faster than inflation.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 12 January 1987, c. 119]: Information in the form requested is available only in respect of gross current expenditure on the hospital and community health services and is as follows:

	HCHS gross current expenditure changes after NHS pay and prices (per cent.)	Increase in demographic demand (per cent.)
1972-73	4·6	0·0
1973-74	3·6	−0·1
1974-75	[1]4·2	0·0
1975-76	1·7	0·0
1976-77	0·3	0·2
1977-78	3·0	0·3
1978-79	[2]2·5	0·9
1979-80	−0·6	1·2
1980-81	3·0	0·9
1981-82	2·0	0·3
1982-83	0·8	0·5
1983-84	0·0	0·5
1984-85	−0·1	0·6
1985-86	0·2	1·3

[2] Figures from 1978-79 are on a slightly different accounting basis and exclude Family Practitioner Committee administration costs.

The costs of medical technology are not separately identified but any increase above general inflation is partially reflected in the HCHS prices index. Increases in activity arising from the introduction of new techniques are estimated to have absorbed resources in the past of 0·5 per cent. a year.

Estimates of increased demand on services from demographic change and medical progress are expressed in expenditure terms but this does not imply that increased spending is the only way in which increased demand can be met. Health authorities' cost improvement programmes and improvements in efficiency have contributed significantly to meeting these demands in recent years.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will state, for each regional health authority, the allowance made for demographic factors and technical and service developments in determining (a) the total current expenditure and (b) the total capital expenditure for each year from 1979 to date.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 696]: Information is not available in the form requested. Although demographic factors are significant in determining each regional health authority's target share of available resources, their effect on allocations for any particular year is not and cannot be separately identified. Similarly, the cost of technical and service developments is not separately identified in allocations. It is for authorities to decide how to meet these pressures and those arising from demographic change from the total resources available to them; these resources include both cash allocations and savings from cost improvement programmes.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total cash released through the competitive tendering process by each health authority, giving category of services and total, for each year from 1979 to the latest available date for England.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 701]: Information is not available in the form requested.

Competitive tendering for domestic, catering and laundry services in England had, by 30 September 1986, generated annual savings of some £73 million. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 25 November 1986 at columns 214-20 which gave a breakdown of that total by district health authority. No matching service breakdown is readily available, but the table following gives the latest available service-by-service analysis for each regional health authority.

Pharmaceuticals

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the information given on 13 January 1986, Official Report, c. 501-2, on prescription charges and the cost of pharmaceuticals by giving figures for subsequent years up to the most recent available date.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, c. 428]: The information requested, in respect of the family practitioner services in England, is set out in the table:

	1985		1986[1]		Financial year[1]
	Jul-Sept	Oct-Dec	Jan-Mar	Apr-June	1985-86

Public Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all the public bodies for which he is responsible on which the consideration of the appointment or co-option of a person with knowledge of disability is a statutory requirement; if he will name the persons so appointed or co-opted on each body; and if he will indicate which of those persons is a person with a disability.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1987 c. 613-14]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for one body where the appointment of a person with knowledge of disability is a statutory requirement. That body is the Social Security Advisory Committee which contains at least one such person.

In addition, my right hon. Friend has responsibility for the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions, together with the local war pensions committees, of which there are 81. The central committee is required to contain at least one disabled war pensioner; the local committees contain at least four representatives of disabled ex-service men.

I regret that the need for personal confidentiality prevents me from naming the persons who fulfil the above statutory requirements.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why Tottenham Department of Health and Social Security office has refused to accept a bulk claim for severe weather payments for the week 12 to 18 January inclusive from the Broadwater Farm neighbourhood office on behalf of pensioners over 65 years and families with children under the age of two years on supplementary benefit living within the London borough of Haringey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1987 c. 89]: Supplementary benefit claims, including single payment claims, are normally accepted from a third party only where it has been confirmed both that the claimant is unable to act on his own behalf and that the third party is able to act for him.

A bulk claim would not enable all potential beneficiaries to be correctly identified, nor would it contain all the necessary information to establish entitlement.

The Department's Tottenham local office could not, therefore, accept a bulk claim for exceptionally cold weather payments on behalf of residents of the London borough of Haringey. Instead, the office agreed to accept a list of names and addresses of potential claimants and to send each of them an invitation to claim.

The office received the list on 2 February 1987 and invitations to claim were issued on 10 February 1987.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications in (a) Scotland and (b) Britain for severe weather payment have come from persons not on supplementary benefit; and what proportion of these are now being processed with a view to checking entitlement to supplementary benefit.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987, c. 341]: Information on the number of exceptionally cold weather claims received from people not on supplementary benefit is not available.

People who fail to qualify for a cold weather payment because they are not in receipt of benefit are given a full explanation of why payment has been refused, with advice on how to go about claiming supplementary benefit.

Benefits

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in the Leeds metropolitan district council area have been in receipt of (a) supplementary benefit, (b) invalidity benefit and (c) housing benefit for each of the last five years.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1987, c. 210]: The information is as follows:

Number of beneficiaries (thousands)

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
Supplementary benefit	66	68	69	69	[1]
Invalidity benefit[2]	[1]	14	14	13	13
Housing benefit[3]	46	51	101	98	99

[1] Figures not available.
[2] Separate figures for invalidity benefit are not available. Figures supplied include sickness benefit cases, and for 1983 and 1984 also include non-contributory invalidity benefit cases. The figures are based on management returns from the five social security offices in Leeds which between them cover most of the Leeds Metropolitan District Council area but which are not exactly conterminous with it.

[1] Figures for 1982 and 1983 do not include cases which received help through supplementary benefit before housing benefit was fully implemented in April 1983.

DEFENCE

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to visit south east Asia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I plan to visit Thailand, Brunei, Malaysia and Singapore in late March and early April. The purpose of my visit is to review high level defence contacts and to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Missile Systems

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the level of expenditure to 31 March 1986 at present prices for the Polaris rocket motor system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is £277 million at 1986-87 prices, and £1 = $1·50.

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what weight was given in 1982 to the combination of ground pressure and power to weight ratio as a factor in deciding vehicle mobility for the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system vehicles; what were the relative (a) ground pressure and (b) power-to-weight ratio of (i) the Boughton demountable rack off-loading pick-up system MMLC truck and (ii) the Scammell MMLC DROPS selected for trials in 1983; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the key performance requirements for DROPS trucks in 1982; what were the relative performances in respect of turning circles as between the Boughton's MMLC DROPS truck and the Scammell MMLC; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what weight was given in 1982 to stability and tilt angle as a factor in deciding vehicle mobility; what were the relative stability tilt angles of (a) Boughton's MMLC DROPS truck and (b) the Scammell MMLC DROPS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The assessments made of the competitive equipment proposals and designs offered by firms in the 1982-83 DROPS competition covered the full desired envelope of technical performance and characteristics as set out in the statement of requirements issued to the industry. I regret I cannot provide comparative details of particular commercial proposals and designs offered to the Ministry in confidence.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence, what assessment was made by the DROPS team of experts appraising competing DROPS proposals in 1983 as to the feasibility of the stated requirement to carry an 8 ft high ISO container within the 4 m legal limit in FRG; if the requirement was disregarded or deleted; if Boughton's existing DROPS vehicle met this requirement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton A secondary ability to carry an 8 ft high ISO container was seen as a desirable feature in the 1982 DROPS statement of requirement and all competitors' proposals were assessed against it as well as other, more essential features. In the event no proposals at that time (including Boughtons) were able to meet this requirement fully within the height constraints of the German regulations. The requirement still stands as a desirable feature for the medium mobility vehicle and is being addressed as part of the ongoing DROPS procurement programme.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the equipment in the Army inventory which is between the heights of 7 ft 9 in and 8 ft 6 in and under a weight of 15 tonnes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hamilton: This information is not readily available.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the nature of his Department's briefing of the United States Army in 1983 and the first half of 1984 on the flat flatrack; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment was made in Boughton's DROPS proposal in 1982 of the suitability of the flat flatrack for operation in rough terrain; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list all official briefings on DROPS given by his Department to the United States Army in 1982; which United States branches, officials or individuals were so briefed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I cannot add to my answers of 16 December 1986 [Official Report, c. 501 and 503.]

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) why, at the DROPS presentation given by his Department on 27 October 1986, it was claimed by his Department that the Multilift mk 4 system now selected was always his Department's preferred choice for DROPS and that the Multilift mk 2 system which picked up a flat flatrack was not the preferred choice of his experts in 1983; and if he will make a statement;

(2) why, at the presentation given by his Department on 27 October 1986, it was claimed that the United States Army had rejected Boughton's DROPS system and returned Boughton's equipment to them, and that this was a vindication of his Department's choice of other systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement will write to my right hon. Friend.

NATO

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Defence when next he expects to attend the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend expects to attend the regular ministerial meetings of the Nuclear Planning Group and of the Defence Planning Committee later this spring.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the value of the British financial contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation infrastructure programme, at constant prices, in each year since 1975.

Mr. Stanley: The value of the United Kingdom financial contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation infrastructure programme since 1979-80, at average 1986-87 prices (to the nearest £ million) is as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	33
1980-81	51
1981-82	51
1982-83	62
1983-84	67
1984-85	63
1985-86	64

Figures for the earlier years are not readily available.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the value of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation infrastructure programme financial contributions to the construction of facilities designed solely or principally for use by British forces, at constant prices, in each year since 1975.

Mr. Stanley: The value of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation infrastructure programme financial contributions to the construction of facilities designed solely or principally for use by United Kingdom forces since 1979-80, at average 1986-87 prices (to the nearest £ million) is as follows:

1979-80	16
1980-81	19
1981-82	56
1982-83	70
1983-84	66
1984-85	81
1985-86	65
1986-87	69

Figures for the earlier years are not readily available.

Trident

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the VHF communication system to the Trident submarine programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: VHF communications form a very small part of the Trident submarine's tactical weapon system which itself accounts for 21 per cent. of the overall Trident project estimate. There are no shore-based VHF communications provided specifically for Trident.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 81, to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, how much has already been spent on Trident at 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £970 million.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 5 February to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, Official Report, column 803, how much was spent on the Trident programme from the beginning of financial year 1986-87 (a) until the end of December 1986 and (b) until the end of January 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Actual expenditure figures for the project as a whole are not available beyond November 1986. The estimated expenditure from April 1986 to December 1986 and January 1987 is some £210 million and £260 million respectively.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 90, to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, how much has been contractually committed to Trident at 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some £2,830 million is estimated to have been committed at 1986-87 prices.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Trident programme to be completed; and if he will break down the expenditure either spent or predicted to be spent according to five-year terms ending in financial years 1984-85, 1989-90, 1994-95 and 1999-2000.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 21 June 1985.—[Official Report, c. 247].

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the level of Trident spending in each year up to 1985-86 using 1986-87 prices and the exchange rates involved in the payments in question.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will answer shortly.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the funds contractually committed to Trident, but not yet spent, are committed to contractors in the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some £370 million has been committed to, but not yet spent with, United States contractors.

Skynet

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the purpose of the Skynet 4B satellite system;

(2) what is the purpose of the Skynet 4C satellite system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: They are both military communications satellites.

Expenditure (Scotland)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the estimated percentage share of procurement expenditure on equipment purchased from Scotland in the 1986-87 financial year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Estimates of regional procurement expenditure are only available for completed financial years. In 1985-86 6 per cent. of defence equipment procurement expenditure was spent in Scotland. This figure is for direct payments to main contractors and does not take account of payments made to subcontractors in Scotland. Expenditure on international collaborative projects is also excluded from this figure.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the percentage share of the total defence expenditure spent in Scotland during each of the past four financial years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Total defence expenditure is not accounted for regionally.

United States Forces in Britain

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the functions of the Royal Air Force station commanders at United States bases in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those military installations used by United States forces in the United Kingdom at which there is no Royal Air Force station commander.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on forthcoming changes in the types, numbers, units and bases of United States Air Force aircraft deployed in Britain;

(2) if there are any plans to base United States Air Force F-15E aircraft in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Stanley: Future deployment plans are generally classified. Where firm deployment plans can be released without prejudice to security the USAF does so, and has announced the replacement of its KC-135 tanker fleet with the re-engined KC-135R and its intention to withdraw the RF-4C aircraft currently based at RAF Alconbury.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of the trials conducted by aircraft of the United States Air Force 4450th test group from Royal Air Force Woodbridge in November 1984 and May 1986.

Mr. Stanley: Both deployments were part of a continuing series which provide experience of flying in Europe for US-based air crews.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to his Department of purchasing additional land in Britain for use by United States forces in each year since 1982.

Mr. Freeman: Under long-standing arrangements, surplus MOD land is made available without charge to United States forces stationed in the United Kingdom. The MOD occasionally purchases additional land for use by United States forces to meet specific operational needs. Records are not maintained in a form which would enable the cost of these limited acquisitions to be identified separately except at disproportionate cost. All MOD surplus land made available to United States forces and additional land purchased for their use remains in MOD ownership.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the annual cost to the Exchequer of providing land and property management, building design and maintenance, security and other services to United States military installations in Britain in each year since 1982;

(2) what has been the annual income to the Exchequer from United States Government repayments in respect of British Government provision of land and property management, building design and maintenance, security and other services to United States military installations in the United Kingdom in each year since 1982.

Mr. Freeman: The main services provided to the United States forces stationed in this country on a repayment basis, with details of costs and receipts at current prices for the years requested, are as follows:

	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	[5]1986-87
A. PSA services
New construction and maintenance[1]	77·4	95·7	103·9	117·7	152·9
New construction funded by NATO[2]	18·1	20·4	8·0	6·7	22·4

Costs	14·5	18·0	22·5	26·0
Rents for married quarters
Costs	1·5	1·7	2·1	2·6
Receipts[6]	1·5	1·3	1·2	1·4

[1] These costs are recovered in full.
[2] These costs are recovered from NATO infrastructure funds.
[3] These are costs incurred by the United Kingdom in pursuance of its obligations under the Status of Forces Agreement for which no recovery is made.
[4] These costs reflect expenses incurred by PSA in design of buildings, letting contracts, supervising work in progress and consultancy fees. The under-recovery reflects reduced charges raised by agreement with the United States authorities for defence and foreign policy reasons.
[5] Figures for 1986-87 are forecasts throughout.
[6] The under-recovery reflects reduced charges raised since 1 October 1983 in recognition of the importance of continuing United States/United Kingdom cooperation in the common defence effort.

For the provision of land to the United States forces stationed in this country I refer to my further written answer of today's date.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the value of United States military construction projects in Britain, at constant prices, in each year since 1975.

Mr. Freeman: The value of new construction undertaken for the United States forces stationed in the United Kingdom at constant 1986-87 prices was as follows:

	£ million
1977-78	81·8
1978-79	70·5
1979-80	62·6
1980-81	61·6
1981-82	49·4
1982-83	69·6
1983-84	85·8
1984-85	71·4
1985-86	72·1
1986-87	112·3

Notes:
1. Figures prior to 1977-78 are not available.
2. The figure for 1986-87 is a forecast.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there is any agreement between Her Majesty's Government and the United States authorities about the standards to which facilities at United States bases are constructed in terms of their suitability for use by United Kingdom armed forces.

Mr. Freeman: No such specific agreement exists but all construction work undertaken for the United States in this country has to comply with United Kingdom building regulations, standards and codes of practice.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the role of the United States Air Force RF-4C Phantom aircraft stationed at Royal Air Force Alconbury includes a nuclear strike task.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency applies equally to United States forces under national command and United States forces under North Atlantic Treaty Organisation command;

(2) whether the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency applies equally to conventional and nuclear weapons;

(3) whether the arrangements for implementing the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency are the same for conventional as for nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

Ministry Property

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the property owned, or leased, by his Department in (a) the East Midlands and (b) East Anglia.

Mr. Freeman: The following are the main locations owned or leased by the Ministry of Defence in Warwickshire, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Cambridgeshire, Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex:

ABM Treaty

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has regarding the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics deployed anti-satellite system; what is its capability; whether it is a technical breach of the anti-ballistic missile treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The Soviet Union has the world's only deployed anti-satellite (ASAT) sytem, an orbital interceptor of limited capability. Although operational since the early 1970s, the system has been tested on various occasions, not always successfully, and not since 1982. The actual interpretation of the ABM treaty is for the two signatories of that treaty.

Trackway

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to complete the investigation by his licensing branch into the allegation that unauthorised production or marketing of trackway is being undertaken by the Singapore Government in breach of a British patent held by Laird (Anglesey) Limited; when the allegation first came to his notice and by what means; and if he will make a statement;

(2) further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 17 February, Official Report, column 525, when the allegation of unauthorised production of trackway was first brought to Her Majesty's Government's attention; and by what means.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The allegation was first made by Mr. V. O'Connor, managing director of Laird Anglesey Limited in June 1984 with further evidence in February 1985 and raised serious and complicated issues both of proof and enforceability. It is not a question of a patent held by Laird Anglesey Limited but of Crown copyright. My officials are currently in correspondence with the Singapore MOD.

Maritime Strategy

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent to which his overall maritime strategy conforms with the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Concept of Maritime Operations, COMAROPS.

Mr. Stanley: Our overall planning for maritime operations takes full account of the concepts developed by the NATO military authorities.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a percentage breakdown of the amount of work to be allocated to the countries participating in the European fighter aircraft project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For the development phase it has been agreed that work will be shared as follows:

	Per cent.
United Kingdom	33
Germany	33
Spain	13

For production, workshares will be based on the number of aircraft each nation has declared as its offtake at the start of the production phase.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he estimates that any of the equipment for the European fighter aircraft will be subject to United States extra-territoriality restriction.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We do not accept the validity of claims that United Kingdom defence equipment might be subject to the exra-territorial jurisdiction of another country.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether United States companies will be permitted to bid for contracts to provide avionics for the European fighter aircraft;

(2) whether West German subsidiaries of United States companies will be permitted to bid for contracts to provide inertial navigational systems for the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The involvement of companies from nations not participating in the European fighter aircraft is in principle permissible. In order to maximise the involvement of the participating nations, however, such companies would be encouraged to acquire a partner (or partners) from within these nations.

Officers (Age)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the average age of a major general in the British Army;

(2) what is the average age of a brigadier in the British Army;

(3) what is the average age of a lieutenant colonel in the British Army;

(4) what is the average age of a colonel in the British Army;

(5) what is the average age of a major in the British Army;

(6) what is the average age of a lieutenant general in the British Army;

(7) what is the average age of a general in the British Army.

Mr. Freeman: The average ages by rank from major upwards of officers in the British Army at 31 December 1986 were as shown in the table:

Rank	Average age
Major	41
Lieutenant colonel	45
Colonel	49
Brigadier	50
Major general	52
Lieutenant general	54
General	57

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether age is taken into account when assessing an officer's suitability for promotion.

Mr. Freeman: Age is one of the factors which may be taken into account in determining whether an individual should be promoted.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the ability of officers over the age of 50 years to direct operations above unit level in a conventional war on the central front.

Mr. Freeman: Assessments of all officers' abilities are made annually in confidential reports.

Challenger Tank

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessments have been made of the ability of the Challenger tank to withstand fire from current Warsaw Pact artillery.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Challenger's abilities against potential threats posed by all Warsaw Pact or other weapons have been most fully assessed and are held under constant review.

Recruitment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Regular Army recruits leave in their first year.

Mr. Freeman: We expect some 25 per cent. of Regular Army recruits to leave in their first year.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether ex-Army personnel are able to re-join their former regiment should they so desire.

Mr. Freeman: This is possible in certain circumstances. Each application is judged on its merits, taking into account the individual's previous record, conduct, qualifications, age and current suitable vacancies.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve recruits leave during their first year.

Mr. Freeman: During the 12-month period ending 31 March 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, 31 per cent. of recruits to the Territorial Army left during their first year of service.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether ex-service men are able to re-join the armed forces should they so desire.

Mr. Freeman: Ex-service men may apply to re-enter the armed forces. Such applications are considered in the light of the individual's previous record, conduct, qualifications, age, current suitable vacancies and in competition with other applicants for entry.

Welfare

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to improve the arrangements for consulting service personnel and their families on welfare matters.

Mr. Freeman: I shall answer shortly.

Territorial Army

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to improve the bounties paid to Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve personnel.

Mr. Freeman: Bounties for the Territorial Army, along with the other reserve forces, are considered as part of the annual review of armed forces pay and allowances carried out by the independent armed forces pay review body.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many officers in the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve have no full-time employment;

(2) how many non-commissioned service men in the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve have no full-time employment.

Mr. Freeman: We do not maintain records of the employment status of members of the Territorial Army.

Soviet Strategy

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence which fronts Her Majesty's Government consider the most likely route for a Soviet attack.

Mr. Stanley: The Soviet Union deploys numerous forces throughout Europe and has a capability for an attack in any region. Any assessment of Soviet intentions must remain classified.

Senior Officers (Secondment)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to conduct a review of the number of senior Army officers seconded to work in his Department.

Mr. Freeman: Senior Army officers working in the Ministry of Defence do so against authorised posts, and as such secondment does not apply. These posts have however been subjected to various reviews in recent years, and all senior Army officer posts are subject, over a period of time, to assessment by staff inspectors in the normal course of their duties.

Artillery Units

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which air defence artillery units are available for out-of-area operation;

(2) what field artillery is currently available for use by the United Kingdom Netherlands amphibious force in northern Norway;

(3) what air defence artillery is currently available for the United Kingdom Netherlands amphibious force in northern Norway;

(4) which field artillery units would be available for out-of-area operations.

Mr. Stanley: The ground forces that we would be most likely to use in operations outside the NATO area are 5 Airborne Brigade and 3 Commando Brigade. The latter is also the main component of the UK/NL landing force, which has northern Norway as one of its deployment options.

Each brigade has a field regiment equipped with 105 mm light guns, and a Javelin-equipped close air defence troop; 5 Airborne Brigade also has a Rapier-equipped area air defence battery.

Depending on the deployment option and other circumstances, the land forces might be able to call on air defence cover from the assets of a naval amphibious group, or from allied land-based aircraft. Additionally, as

I announced in the House on 1 July 1986, at column 916, financial provision has been made in our forward plans for a Rapier battery for the United Kingdom/Netherlands landing force, although this does not yet represent a firm commitment.

War (Military Requirements)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many field artillery units would be retained in the United Kingdom in the event of war on the central front;

(2) what assessment he has made of the number of armoured reconnaissance and engineer units that would need to be retained in the United Kingdom in the event of war on the central front;

(3) what assessment he has made of the number of Regular Army personnel that would need to be retained in the United Kingdom in the event of war on the central front.

Mr. Stanley: This information is classified.

Norway

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the Soviet helicopter threat to northern Norway.

Mr. Stanley: The Warsaw Pact has a substantial superiority over NATO in numbers of attack helicopters. The detailed threat assessments for particular parts of the NATO area are classified.

Pilots

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information he has as to which North Atlantic Treaty Organisation member states recruit women to train as pilots for transport aircraft;

(2) what information he has as to the ratio of pilots currently engaged in flying duties to aircraft in the air forces of all the European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation;

(3) what information he has as to the ratio of pilots engaged in flying duties to aircraft in the United States Air Force;

(4) what information he has as to which North Atlantic Treaty Organisation member states train women to fly combat aircraft;

(5) what information he has as to which North Atlantic Treaty Organisation member states recruit women to train as helicopter pilots.

Mr. Freeman: Information relating to the armed forces of other countries is a matter for the Governments of those countries.

Chiefs of Air Staff (Meeting)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the meetings of the Chiefs of Air Staff of Italy, West Germany and the United Kingdom in Rome on 13 February.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Chiefs of Air Staff of Italy, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom met in Rome on 13 February to review the progress of the Tornado programme. It was a routine meeting, one of a series held over the years. The chiefs expressed satisfaction with achievements to date and discussed the question of future development to enable Tornado to maintain its capability in the longer term.

AWACS

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the threat to AWACS aircraft from Soviet anti-radiation missiles.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The threat to AWACS aircraft from all sources has of course been considered. It would not be in the national interest to reveal details.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the disposal of low, intermediate and high level nuclear waste arising from the dismantling of redundant nuclear submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A number of studies are under way aimed at providing options for the dismantling of redundant submarines and the disposal of low, intermediate and high level waste arising therefrom.

Community Charge (Scotland)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he proposes to reimburse forces personnel serving in Scotland for any costs incurred under the proposed community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The implications of the proposed community charge for Service personnel in Scotland are currently under consideration by my Department. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as we have reached a conclusion.

Royal Navy (Drugs)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many drug offences have been recorded on board Royal Navy vessels in the last 18 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987, Official Report, c. 367]: In the last period for which figures are available—calendar year 1985—the number of RN/RM personnel convicted of drugs offences which took place on board Her Majestys ships was seven.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Scottish Universities

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total number of new undergraduates admitted to Scottish universities for the present academic year; and how many of them came from Scotland, England, Wales, and Northern Ireland, respectively.

Mr. Walden: In 1986 there were 10,748 home acceptances to Scottish universities through the Universities Central Council on Admissions. Of these, 8,307 were domiciled in Scotland, 2,302 in England, 61 in Wales and 348 in Northern Ireland.

Students (Parental Assistance)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing (a) the level of parental contribution to student grants each year since 1978, and (b) the number of covenants made by parents in favour of students over 18 years; and (i) the costs of tax relief on such covenants and (ii) administrative costs in connection with covenants.

Mr. Walden: (a) I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 17 February at column 567.

(b) I understand that covenants made in favour of students cannot be separately identified, but that the number of covenants made by parents in favour of people aged over 18 years is currently estimated to be 250,000. The annual cost of tax relief on these covenants is estimated at approximately £100 million. The administrative costs of these covenants cannot be separately identified. Information is not available in respect of earlier years.

Queen's Croft Special School, Lichfield

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received any representations regarding the future of Queen's Croft special school, Lichfield.

Mr. Dunn: No such representations have been received other than those made by two of my hon. Friend's constituents, which were forwarded under cover of his letters of 4 November and 10 December 1986.

Swann Report

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made in the last year towards implementation of the recommendations of the Swann report relating to ethnically based statistics on school pupils and school teachers; when he expects to announce decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: As my right hon. Friend announced on 25 July 1986 at column 527, he has accepted the main recommendations of the Working Group on the collection of educational statistics on an ethnic basis, and in addition he proposed that information should be aggregated centrally by his Department. A draft of the circular implementing the arrangements is in preparation and will be issued for consultation.

My right hon. Friend expects to receive shortly the report of the working group on the collection of ethnically-based statistics on school-teachers, which was established in January 1986. He will then announce his response to this report.

Research Projects

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library copies of the findings of research projects commissioned by his Department by (a) the National Foundation for Educational Research, (b) Manchester University/ Huddersfield Polytechnic and (c) University of London Institute of Education, concerning implementation of the Education Act 1981.

Mr. Dunn: I have requested from each of the contractors an additional copy of their report. On receipt, these will be placed in the Library.

Literacy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he received the report of the working group of the Manpower Services Commission on illiteracy among long-term unemployed people; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will arrange discussions with (a) the adult literacy and basic skills unit, (b) the National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes and (c)

representatives of local education authorities, in considering what steps to take in relation to the report of the Manpower Services Commission working group on illiteracy among long-term unemployed people; if he will publish a discussion document; when he expects to announce decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: A copy of the report of the working group was forwarded to my right hon. Friend by the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission on 11 February 1987. Consideration of the report is for my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

My Department and the adult literacy and basic skills unit which it funds will co-operate in this consideration as necessary. The management committee of the adult literacy and basic skills unit includes representatives of the National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes and of local education authorities.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library copies of the consultants' report mentioned in the introduction of the Review of the University Grants Committee (Cmnd. 81).

Mr. Walden: I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Genetic Handicap (Research)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) whether the Medical Research Council has now been informed of or is involved in any current or proposed research project into genetic handicap which necessitates or would necessitate the use of the human embryo;

(2) if he is aware of any publicly funded current or proposed research project into genetic handicap which involves or would involve the use of the human embryo;

(3) if he has been notified of any privately funded current or proposed research project into genetic handicap which involves or would involve the use of the human embryo.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: I understand that the Medical Research Council has been informed by the Voluntary Licensing Authority for Human In Vitro Fertilisation and Embryology, which is jointly funded by the MRC and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, that they have at their January meeting approved a project into genetic handicap which necessitates the use of the human embryo. I am not aware of any approach for public funding of this work.

PRIME MINISTER

A330/A340 Airbus

Q42. Sir David Price asked the Prime Minister what plans Her Majesty's Government have to support British Aerospace's participation in the A330/A340 Airbus project by assisting with launch aid.

The Prime Minister: We shall reach a decision on British Aerospace's application for launch aid in respect of its participation in the Airbus A330 and A340 programme as soon as possible.

Satellites (Orbital Slots)

Q53. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government will make it their practice, when filing orbital slots with the International Telecommunications Union, to place details of the proposed satellite in the Library.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 18 February at column 688.

Engagements

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 February.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 February.

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 February.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others and addressed the Conference of the Institute of Directors. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

School Meals

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Prime Minister what was the estimated cost for the United Kingdom as a whole in 1985-86 of school meals provided free of charge, for (a) pupils and (b) staff.

The Prime Minister: The estimated cost of school meals provided free of charge in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is as follows:

	£ million
To pupils	57
To adults	7

It was not practicable to hold a school meals census in October 1985 in England in view of the disruption to the service caused by the teachers' dispute. The Department therefore does not have the information to calculate the proportions of school meals expenditure attributable to free meals for pupils and staff.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Greenwich Mean Time and British Summer Time

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the continued operation of Greenwich mean time and British summer time; what proposals have been made for closer alignment of seasonal time changes among member states of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the past 12 months, we have received three representations in favour of the current system of summer time and 42 in favour of other methods. Member states did not accept the European Commission's proposal in 1984 for harmony of dates to be achieved by a compromise date of mid-October for the end of summer time; but it is likely that the Commission will again seek to bring member states into harmony when the present agreement expires at the end of 1988.

Merseyside Police Committee

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the deputation from the Merseyside police committee.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I met a delegation from the Merseyside police authority on 10 February to discuss the authority's finances for 1987-88. The delegation explained why the authority considered itself disadvantaged compared with other police joint authorities by the formula provided in the Local Government Finance Bill for determining maximum precepts. I explained that in the Government's view the maximum precept derived from the formula would allow the authority broadly to maintain its present level of service in 1987-88 and that we were therefore unable to agree that the Bill should be amended.

Prison Officers' Hostel (Culcheth)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long the single prison officers' hostel at Culcheth has been empty; what the plans are for its future; how many rooms there are, and of what type; and what is the value of the property.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Immigration Policy

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans any changes to the immigration policy and procedures in the light of the report of the United Kingdom Immigration Advisory Service for 1985-86, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: In reply to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) I yesterday announced that the Government are urgently considering measures to prevent people arriving here without the necessary documents. Otherwise I have nothing to add to my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to the hon. Member's question on 5 February at column 777.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he is likely to reach a decision on whether he intends to appeal against the decision of the High Court on 23 January concerning concessionary television licences for certain tenants.

Mr. Mellor: No appeal will be made against the judgment. Applications for concessionary licences will of course continue to need careful scrutiny to ensure that they satisfy in full the conditions of eligibility set out in the Wireless Telegraphy (Broadcast Licence Charges and Exemption) Regulations 1984.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider offering immunity from prosecution to police officers who offer evidence to the inquiry being conducted by the Devon and Cornwall police regarding the treatment in custody of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Mellor: Any question of immunity from prosecution would be a matter for the Director of Public Prosecutions in consultation as necessary with the Attorney-General.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers from the Devon and Cornwall police are involved in the investigation of allegations concerning the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings; and in what capacities they are involved.

Mr. Mellor: The conduct of the investigation is a matter for the chief constable of the Devon and Cornwall constabulary. We understand from the chief constable that about 25 officers are involved in the investigation, though not necessarily full-time.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of the inquiry conducted by Chief Constable Davis Owen into the injuries inflicted on the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings during their first three days in custody.

Mr. Mellor: No. It is not the practice to publish the reports of police investigations.

ENERGY

Severn Barrage

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Energy what assumption is being made in all of the studies into the proposed Severn barrage as to the future status of the estuarial and ports statutory rights, and as to the effects on ports and the ships using them.

Mr. David Hunt: No assumptions have been made in the further Severn Barrage studies on the impact on ports and shipping. This issue will be a matter for close consultation with the relevant authorities during the course of the studies. The consultation document giving details of the studies to be undertaken was published on 16 February and is being distributed to all interested parties for comment by the end of March. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Power Stations

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from the local authorities of Bassetlaw district and Nottinghamshire county council in relation to the application for a coal-fired power station at West Burton; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The only application for a new power station before my right hon. Friend at present is that for the Sizewell PWR. During the last year, the hon. Members for Newark (Mr. Alexander) and for Bassetlaw (Mr.

Ashton) have referred letters to my right hon. Friend that they had received from the chief executive of Bassetlaw district council about a further coal-fired power station at West Burton. No representations have been received from Nottinghamshire county council.

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of the base load is currently generated by nuclear power stations.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB has advised me that, where possible, it operates its nuclear power stations continuously throughout the year, and all are regarded as base load stations at all times. However, the overall number of stations regarded as base load varies from season to season because of the different levels of demand. It is therefore not possible to provide a fixed proportion on the basis requested. Based on provisional figures some 20 per cent. of the electricity available from the United Kingdom public supply system was provided by nuclear power in 1986.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Sales

70. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review his policy towards arms sales to foreign Governments which are responsible for sustained human rights abuses.

Mr. Renton: The export of military and paramilitary equipment is controlled by the Export of Goods (Control) Order. All applications for the export of such equipment are considered individually on their merits. We do not permit the export of military or paramilitary equipment to countries with poor human rights records if we consider that the equipment is likely to be used for internal repression.

WEU (Assembly)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he takes to ensure that the Assembly of the Western European Union has sufficient facilities for the effective pursuit of its duties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Together with our partners on the WEU council, we seek to provide the Assembly with adequate resources to conduct its work. The Council has authorised real budgetary growth for the Assembly against forecast inflation in each of the last three years.

Diplomats (Offences)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 27 January to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, Official Report, column 177, if he will now publish a table giving a breakdown by diplomatic mission of the 3,970 cars with diplomatic registration and the number of alleged motoring offences, including the fixed penalties, committed by each diplomatic mission.

Mr. Eggar: No. Figures for unpaid fixed penalties incurred for parking offences were given in my reply to my hon. Friend on 14 January at columns 200-203.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Kevin McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many formal complaints have been made about incidents of police use of plastic baton rounds in 1986; in how many cases the complaint has been upheld; and in how many cases disciplinary action has been taken against the officers involved.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply 16 February 1987, c. 464]: During 1986 15 formal complaints were made concerning the use of plastic baton rounds by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. One was later withdrawn. Police reports on 10 others were sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions who directed no prosecution on each. The question of disciplinary action is now being considered by the Deputy Chief Constable, and in due course the papers will be referred to the Police Complaints Board. The remainder are still under investigation.

SCOTLAND

Sizewell B Power Station

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the employment consequences for Scottish industry of a positive decision in relation to the proposed Sizewell B power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Orders for power stations, whether coal-fired or nuclear, would be welcome to Scottish industry. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy is currently considering the case for Sizewell B in the light of Sir Frank Layfield's report and until he has reached his decision, it would be inappropriate to comment further.

Chiropodists (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many chiropodists are currently employed by Tayside health board; and what is the equivalent funded establishment number of chiropodists for Tayside health board.

Mr. John MacKay: There were 40·7 (whole-time equivalent) chiropodists employed by Tayside health board on 30 September 1986. This is the funded establishment number for the board.

Blood Donors (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many effective blood donors there have been in Tayside health board in each year since 1981; and how many blood donations were made in each year.

Mr. John MacKay: The available information relates to the east of Scotland region of the Scottish National Blood Transfusion Service, which draws donors from north-east Fife as well as from the area of Tayside health board. The total number of "effective blood donors" is not recorded but the Scottish National Blood Transfusion Service maintains an active donor panel of the order of 35,000 persons in the region, which has been found adequate to meet demand. The number of blood donations in the region were as follows:

Year	Donations Taken
1 April 1981—31 March 1982	31,653
1 April 1982—31 March 1983	31,627
1 April 1983—31 March 1984	31,093
1 April 1984—31 March 1985	29,508
1 April 1985—31 March 1986	27,345
1 April 1986—31 December 1986 (part year)	20,808

Life Expectancy

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current life expectancies by social class; and what were the corresponding figures in 1957 and 1967.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on life expectancies at birth by social class is not available. Standardised mortality ratios by social class for the period 1959-63 are contained in the publication "Occupational Mortality 1959-63" (Registrar General for Scotland); and standardised mortality ratios for manual and non-manual occupational groups for the periods 1969-73 and 1979-83 are discussed in a report in the vital statistics return of the Registrar General, Scotland, weeks 41-44, 1986. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Infant and Perinatal Mortality

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current rates of infant and perinatal mortality by social class for legitimate birth; and what are the comparable figures for 20 years previously.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Infant and perinatal death rates of children whose parents were married to each other, Scotland, 1965 and 1985

	Social Class
	I	II	IIINM	IIIM	IV	V
Infant deaths (per 1,000 live births)
1965	10·5	18·3	22·0[1]		26·4	33·9
1985	7·5	8·6	8·5	8·5	8·2	11·3
Perinatal deaths (per 1,000 births live and still)
1965	15·1	23·1	31·3[1]		35·6	37·4
1985	6·7	9·4	9·4	8·6	10·7	9·6

[1] Manual/non-manual split not available.

Cervical Cytology (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, how many smears for cervical cytology examinations have been taken in Tayside health board in each of the past five years; and what was the detection rate in each year.

Mr. John MacKay: The figures for cervical cytology examinations in Tayside health board for the years 1982 to 1985 inclusive are set out in the table. Data for 1986 are not yet available.

	Number of examinations	Percentage positive
1982	28,356	0·92
1983	31,616	1·03
1984	32,310	0·62
1985	36,535	0·45

Prescriptions (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table for Tayside health board showing for 1986 (a) the number of prescriptions dispensed by general practitioners on which charges had to be paid, and (c) the average annual prescription charge per item.

Mr. John MacKay: The information for the financial year ending 31 March 1986 is as follows:—

Prescribed items dispensed by	Number of prescribed items dispensed	Number of prescribed items charged	Percentage of prescribed items charged
Chemists	2,760,233	543,144	19·7
Appliance Suppliers	3,657	539	14·7
Dispensing Doctors	73,865	8,473	11·5
TOTAL	2,837,755	552,156	19·5

The prescription cost is £2·00 per item but the total income from charges in 1985-86 of £1,222,333 includes £118,236 from pre-payment certificates which do not relate to prescriptions classified as charged. The number of prescriptions obtained on such pre-payment certificates is not known.

Chiropody Treatment (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current waiting list for chiropody treatment within Tayside health board; and how many of those on the list are men aged over 65 years and women over 60 years.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not available centrally.

Labour Statistics (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the numbers employed within Tayside health board by main staff group; and what are the equivalent figures for 1980.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows and relates to whole-time equivalents:

	1980	1986
Medical-dental	971	977
Pharmacists-opticians	51	51
Nurses-midwives	5,905	5,966

Nursing and Midwifery Staff

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of the average earnings of nursing and midwifery staff within the National Health Service at all grades.

Mr. John MacKay: Specific information on average annual earnings of nursing staff is not collected centrally. Average figures would cover a wide range of earnings. Basic salary varies according to qualification, experience and service and may be augmented by additional payments for working unsocial hours and overtime, and there are also allowances for staff employed in certain geriatric and psychiatric units.

The table below shows the mid points of the basic pay scales for the main grades at 1 July 1986.

District Wards (Dundee)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the composition of each district ward in Dundee by social class at the 1981 census (a) in terms of numbers, (b) by percentage and (c) in terms of the number of economically active people.

Mr. John MacKay: The relevant readily available information relates to

i. all residents in those private households which had an economically active head and

ii. residents in private households who were themselves economically active.

The information is derived from a 10 per cent. sample of the 1981 census returns. I am arranging for this information to be published in the Official Report and placed in the Library of the House.

Nurses (Resignations)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many qualified nurses have resigned from working in the National Health Service in each of the past three years; and if he will provide a breakdown of the figures by health board area.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is not readily available and could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Hospital Beds (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) Official Report, 4 February, columns 709 to 712, to what factors he attributes the changes in average available staffed beds within Tayside health board in the broad specialties mentioned in the period 1979 to 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: The position in each of the specialties is as follows:

Acute

The number of beds in the acute sector has been reduced by the changes of use of Arbroath infirmary, closure of Sidlaw hospital and the gradual rundown of Bridge of Earn hospital. Outdated facilities have been replaced by new ones at Dundee royal infirmary and Perth royal infirmary.

Geriatric

During the period in question, the main increase took place in Perth and Kinross where geriatric units were developed at several smaller hospitals.

Mental Illness

The closure of Murthly hospital, a substantial reduction in beds at Sunnyside hospital, Montrose, and a decrease in demand for mental illness beds are the main factors in this category.

Mental Handicap

The reduction in the number of beds has taken place mainly at Strathmartine hospital and is due to the health board's policy of enabling some mentally handicapped patients to return from hospital gradually to the community.

Maternity

Small uneconomic units with low levels of occupancy have been closed. The demand for maternity beds is being adequately met.

Earnings

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department has on the current weekly earnings by social class or social-economic group in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: Information of the form requested is not available. The table provides estimates of average gross weekly earnings by occupational group for April 1986, the latest date for which such information is available at present. These statistics will appear in the 1986 New Earnings Survey part E, which will soon be available in the Library of the House.

Housing Starts

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the numbers of new dwellings started by each local authority in Scotland for each of the years 1978-79 to 1985-86 inclusive, and the total number of new dwellings started by each local authority for the whole of that period.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the table below.

Homeless Persons

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of applications made in Scotland under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 for the period 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986, in a form similar to the tables published on pages 42, 43 and 44 of "Scottish Housing Statistics" 1985.

Mr. Ancram: Such of the information requested as is currently available centrally is set out in the tables.

Figures for 1986 are provisional and exclude applications made to the districts indicated in the tables for which returns have not been submitted. Estimates for the more significant missing districts are: Stirling (1,200), Dumbarton (860), Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (700) and Nithsdale (170).

House Possessions

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how many formerly owner-occupied properties in Scotland were taken into possession by (a) building societies, (b) local authorities, and (c) other mortgagors in the 12 months ended December 1986; and what are the figures in actual and percentage terms compared with those for each 12 month period since January 1980.

Mr. Ancram: This information is not available.

Housing Revenue Account (Expenditure)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of housing revenue account expenditure by local authorities for 1978-1979 and 1985-1986, inclusive, detailing the amount for expenditure on (a) loan charges, (b) supervision and management, (c) repairs and maintenance, (d) loss of rent, and (e) other, expressing these figures in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1985-86 out-turn prices.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the table.

Household Income

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the average weekly household income in Scotland for each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive.

Mr. Lang: The information available relates to average gross weekly income of households as shown in the family expenditure surveys and is provided below. Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Average gross weekly income[1] of households in Scotland

1979	118
1980	135
1981	150
1982	167
[2]1983	*a*168
	*b*166

[1] Gross income as defined in the family expenditure survey comprises cash income (eg from employment, investments, pensions and cash social security benefits) together with selected other benefits such as the imputed value of owner-occupied accommodation and the value of luncheon vouchers. It does not cover most non-cash benefits such as free prescriptions or benefits in kind (eg free coal, company cars). Gross income will not reflect rent and rates rebates, except insofar as described in note 2 below.

[2] Under the housing benefit scheme, introduced in stages from November 1982, some cash transactions were eliminated leading to a reduction in the level of cash income. For 1983 figures are given (a) covering the same transactions as in the earlier years and (b) on a cash transactions basis consistent with the years 1984 and 1985.

House Sales

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list details of sales of council housing to sitting tenants up to the latest convenient date, by district within regional sub-totals; and what was the percentage of the relevant stock that existed at 30 September 1979 which has been sold to date;

(2) if he will list details of sales of (a) Scottish Special Housing Association housing and (b) New Town Development Corporation housing to sitting tenants up to the latest convenient date, indicating the percentage of the relevant stock that existed at 30 September 1979 which has been sold to date.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the table below.

Owner-Occupation

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how many owner-occupied dwellings which are (a) owned outright, and (b) currently being purchased on a mortgage.

Mr. Ancram: It is estimated that, at December 1985, 840,000 dwellings were owner-occupied; of these around 380,000 were owned outright, and around 460,000 were being purchased on a mortgage.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the numbers of households living in mobile homes for each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive.

Mr. Ancram: Complete information is not held centrally.

Health Centres (Argyll and Clyde)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the number of general practitioners and patient populations in each of the health centres in the Argyll and Clyde health board area.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is shown in the table below:

Manpower Services Commission

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the Manpower Services Commission's area manpower boards in Scotland; the number of projects proposals accepted for Manpower Services Commission schemes under the Manpower Services Commission community programmes approved by each of the area manpower boards in each of the past three years, the average amounts awarded, the names of the management agents and the total amount awarded in each of those three years.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The number of community programme projects operating in Scotland at the end of the last two completed financial years and the latest available figure (January) for the current financial year by area manpower board are shown in the table below.

Community Programme Projects Operating in Scotland

TRANSPORT

Lorry Sizes

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport if the Council of Ministers of the European Community have indicated their intention to consider legislation on lorry sizes on the basis of majority voting under the Single Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The Council adopted in December 1984 a Directive (85/3 EEC) on the weights and dimensions of heavy lorries. The Directive contains a derogation for the United Kingdom and Ireland as regards certain of the weight limits, and makes it clear that the duration of the derogation is to be decided under Article 75(3) of the treaty which provides for unanimous decisions. This is not affected by the Single European Act. The UK has no need for a derogation on lorry dimensions; the dimensions specified in the Directive are within our limits, and lorries in other Community countries are no bigger than those permitted in this country.

Air Traffic Controllers

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances air traffic controllers are permitted to listen to conversations between pilots and their bases in other countries; to what use such information may be put; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Air traffic control matters are the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. The CAA has informed me that air traffic controllers monitor designated air traffic control frequencies used for the purpose of providing air traffic or alerting service. They do not monitor airline company frequencies

Trunk Roads and Motorways (Expenditure)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide information on central Government expenditure on (a) trunk roads and (b) motorways for all years since 1978-79 inclusive, by standard United Kingdom region, showing the absolute, indexed and per capita form of the following disaggregated costs: (i) construction costs, (ii) maintenance costs, (iii) capital account costs and (iv) current account costs.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Not all of this information is available. What can be given is extensive and will take time to assemble. I will write to the hon. Member when this has been done and place a copy in the Library.

Driver-only Trains (Safety)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implication for safety of trains running from Stanlow oil refinery without guards; what information he has as to how long this has been happening; what loads are being carried; what safety precautions are being taken; when the decision to use single man operation was implemented; who was consulted about this decision; and what is the cost saving.

Mr. David Mitchell: The British Railways Board has established criteria for the circumstances under which driver-only operation may be permitted. These criteria cover all types of train, including freight trains, and have been agreed by the Railway Inspectorate as providing a satisfactory basis for the safe operation of trains by the driver only. As the board has the responsibility for the safe, efficient and economical operation of its railway the hon. Member should write to it for the detailed information he requires in relation to the remaining parts of his question.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total revenue from vehicle excise duties in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available: and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The figures requested are as follows:

Year	Total revenue from vehicle excise duty (£ million)	Percentage increase on previous year
1976-77	814	6·4
1977-78	1,045	28·4
1978-79	1,086	3·9
1979-80	1,162	7·0
1980-81	1,360	17·0
1981-82	1,618	19·0
1982-83	1,840	13·7
1983-84	1,997	8·5
1984-85	2,264	13·4
1985-86	2,426	7·2

Drunk Driving

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of the information supplied to him by the hon. Member for Chislehurst, he has anything to add to his statement of 2 February, Official Report at column 675, regarding the percentage of road accidents attributable to drinking and driving.

Mr. Moore: In my statement of 2 February I was reported as saying at column 675 that 95 per cent. of accidents in this country involved drinking and driving. That figure is incorrect. 25 per cent. of all road deaths are alcohol-related. I have asked for the Official Report to be corrected.

EMPLOYMENT

YTS

Mrs. Peacock asked the Paymaster General how many young people have completed YTS schemes in Batley and Spen and Yorkshire to date; how many left before completing their full entitlement to training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The information is not available in the form requested.

By the end of March 1986, around 2,800 young people in the local authority district of Kirklees had completed YTS schemes since the scheme was introduced in 1983. The comparable figure for Yorkshire is 32,000. Over the same period, around 4,600 young people in Kirklees and 44,500 in Yorkshire, left the scheme before completing their full entitlement.

Independent research has shown that most young people who leave their schemes early are either employed or are in further education-training. Of those who completed the YTS schemes in Yorkshire and Kirklees between April 1985 and March 1986, 61 per cent. and 74 per cent. respectively were in employment three months after leaving YTS. I am very encourged by the achievements reflected in these results.

"Services—the Second Industrial Revolution"

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Paymaster General what policy changes he intends to make in the light of the findings of the report "Services—the Second Industrial Revolution?" from the Institute of Manpower Studies, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: None.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General what is the number of people living in (a) Lancashire, (b) Greater Manchester, (c) Merseyside and (d) Cheshire who have never worked since leaving school.

Mr. Trippier: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed claimants in the counties of Lancashire, Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Cheshire of all ages who had not had a job since leaving full-time education, as at 8 January 1987, together with those aged under 18 years.

County	Unemployed Claimants
	All ages	Aged under 18 years
Lancashire	5,330	1,495
Greater Manchester	16,714	4,756
Merseyside	16,692	4,232
Cheshire	5,382	1,590

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will give the total numbers of men and women employed in Yorkshire and Humberside, South Yorkshire and Barnsley travel-to-work area in 1979, and each succeeding year to date;

(2) what is the up-to-date average unemployment figure for each of the travel-to-work areas in the United Kingdom, specifying the male, female, long-term unemployed and youth unemployed, separately.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what assumption is made for the purposes of compiling his Department's estimates of the number of employees in employment of the number of YTS trainees with contracts of employment.

Mr. Trippier: None. Employers are instructed to include, but not separately identify, only those YTS trainees with contracts of employment in completing the statistical returns from which the employees in employment series is derived.

Mr. Duffy asked the Paymaster General if he will give the total number of men and women employed in Yorkshire, Humberside, South Yorkshire and the Sheffield travel-to-work area in 1979 and each succeeding year to date.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Community Programme

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General how much money is budgeted in the current financial year and for 1988-89 for Manpower Services Commission community programme schemes in (a) Great Britain, (b) Scotland, (c) Strathclyde region and (d) the Renfrewshire, Dunbartonshire and Argyll area manpower board.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Hotel Classification

Mr. Gregory asked the Paymaster General what are the criteria for the five gold crowns award under the English Tourist Board's new hotel classification scheme; what is the anticipated number of recipients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am informed by the English tourist board that their criteria for the award of five gold crowns under their voluntary hotel classification scheme are as follows:

"The main criteria are that the establishment should have achieved and maintained, over the course of at least three years, a wide range and high standard of facilities and services. In addition the establishment would normally be expected to provide the following facilities and services, over and above the standard requirements for five crowns.

1. A tended reception / writer / office available at all hours.
2. Portering provided by uniformed staff and a storage room for luggage.
3. A valet service, comprising dry cleaning, pressing, laundry and shoe cleaning. (This service may involve the use of outside facilities).
4. All services provided by well-trained, well-presented and efficient staff.
5. Accommodation, both in respect of bedrooms and public rooms, of a particularly high level of comfort, with furnishings and decor to a standard significantly higher than the minimum required for five crowns.
6. A restaurant, serving breakfast, lunch and dinner to residents and their guests each day. All menus offering an appropriate range of choice. Table appointments and decor to a high standard. Last orders for dinner no earlier than 9.30 pm.
7. A 24 hour room service to include the provision of hot meals at any hour of the day or night.
8. A bar or lounge service, with cocktail facilities.
9. A range of leisure and other additional facilities. Examples: bookstall, theatre ticket bureau, haidressing salon, games room, swimming pool, sauna, solarium, tennis courts, squash courts, golf course, typewriting, photocopying and secreterial service.
10. Adequate security and service arrangements to enable guests to preserve their personal privacy and avoid unwelcome attention or disturbance.

When applying these criteria the award committee will take into full consideration the nature and location of the hotel and the particular needs of the clientele it seeks to serve.

I understand from the ETB that it expects no more than 40 hotels to receive the five gold crown award.

Literacy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General when he received the report of a working group of the Manpower Services Commission on illiteracy among long-term unemployed people; what estimates are given in that report of the numbers and proportion of persons with such inadequate skills among the long-term unemployed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment received the report on 12 February 1987. The report estimates that some 25 per cent. of the long-term unemployed, or between 350,000 and 400,000 people, have literacy or numeracy problems that might affect their opportunities of securing employment. In 1986-87 the Manpower Services Commission is spending £5-6 million on basic literacy and numeracy skills training; this provision is in addition to spending by local education authorities. The figures in the report emphasise, however, the scale of the problem that remains.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General whether he will arrange discussions with (a) the adult literacy and basic skills unit, (b) the National Federation of Voluntary Literacy Schemes and (c) representatives of local education authorities, in considering what steps to take about illiteracy among the long-term unemployed; if he will publish a discussion document; when he expects to announce decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment is considering the report in conjunction with other colleagues with relevant departmental responsibilities and will decide what, if any, action to take on it as soon as possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the rate support grant settlement in cash terms to (a) Burnley borough council and (b) Pendle borough council for each year since 1979; and what are the comparative figures in 1979 prices.

Mr. Chope: The information for 1981-82 and later years, expressed in cash terms and at 1981-82 prices, is as follows. Figures for earlier years are not available on a comparable basis.

	Rate support grant[1]
	Burnley borough council		Pendle borough council
	Cash	1981-82 prices[2]	Cash	1981-82 prices[2]

In 1981-82 and 1982-83 the amounts are final rate support grant payments. In 1983-84 and 1984-85 the amounts are grant entitlements based on the latest supplementary reports in each year; in 1985-86 they are grant entitlements based on the Secretary of State's firm intentions for the third supplementary report and in 1986-87 they are based on the Secretary of State's firm intentions for the first supplementary report.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish central Government expenditure on the rate support grant to all local authorities, excluding domestic rate relief and hold-back for all years since 1978-79 to 1986-87 inclusive, giving this information in absolute, indexed and per capita forms.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed the information in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what, in constant prices, was the value of the rate support grant payment to the London borough of Tower Hamlets in 1986-87 and for each preceding year to 1978-79; what is the proposed payment of 1987-88 showing separately for each relevant year the payments received by the London borough of Tower Hamlets in respect of services transferred from the Greater London Council after abolition and information available to him on expenditure in Tower Hamlets and the Greater London Council on such services.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, Monday 23 February 1987]: Rate support grant payments to the London borough of Tower Hamlets, in constant prices, for the period 1981-82 to 1986-87 and estimated payments in 1987-88 assuming Tower Hamlets spends at the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement level, are given in the table. The arrangements for paying rate support grant changed in 1981-82 when the needs, resources and domestic elements were replaced by block grant and domstic rate relief grant. Information is therefore not available on a comparable basis in earlier years.

Rate Support Grant[1]

Year	£m 1981-82 prices[2]
1981-82	25·757
1982-83	23·500
1983-84	22·912
1984-85	20·113
1985-86	17·269
[3]1986-87	48·740
[3]1987-88	45·498

[1] Rate support grant comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant.

[2] Cash values converted to 1981-82 price levels using the GDP deflator.

[3] Rate support grant payments in these years reflect increased responsibilities taken on by London boroughs following the abolition of the GLC.

In 1981-82 and 1982-83 the amounts are final rate support grant payments. In 1983-84 and 1984-85 the amounts are grant entitlements based on the lastest Supplementary Reports in each year; in 1985-86 they are grant entitlements based on the Secretary of State's firm intentions for the third supplementary report and in 1986-87 they are based on the Secretary of State's firm intentions for the first supplementary report. The estimated amount of rate support grant payments in 1987-88 are based on the Secretary of State's intentions for the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement and assume that Tower Hamlets spends at its "expenditure level" given in the settlement.

Block grant is an unhypothecated grant and amounts cannot therefore be specifically attributed to services transferred to Tower Hamlets following the abolition of the GLC, nor is information available centrally on expenditure by Tower Hamlets on such transferred services.

Man-made Mineral Fibres

Mr. Knowles asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the possible risks of man-made mineral fibres, in the light of the work by the World Health Organisation on this subject.

Mr. Ridley: A summary report of an international symposium published last December by the World Health Organisation indicates that an increased lung cancer risk was observed in workers involved in the early days of the manufacture of these materials. The DHSS committee on carcinogenicity has reviewed the available evidence for workplace exposure at the request of the HSE and has indicated that exposure to man made mineral fibre (MMMF) should be accepted as having the potential to increase the risk of lung cancer.

The evidence we have shows that, in the MMMF industry, existing safety precautions are keeping fibre concentrations at the point of manufacture well below the limits considered by the WHO at the symposium. Further advice will be offered by HSE on other occupational exposures.

Work has recently begun to assess the extent of domestic exposures. MMMF in the form of glasswool and rockwool constitute the majority of loft insulation materials used in this country. On the limited data so far available, there appears to be negligible risk to the health of householders, either from existing loft insulation installations, or from laying it themselves, or from infrequent visits to their lofts. As a precautionary measure, the Government have work in hand to collect more data, and assess risks. We will give further advice and take action as necessary. Meanwhile, there is no reason for householders to remove MMMF from their lofts, but they should take simple precautions which we have already recommended such as wearing masks and gloves when working in lofts or in other places where the insulation is exposed.

I shall make another announcement when further medical advice is received.

Community Change

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he proposes to take, in reaching final decisions on the form of the proposed community charge, of the representations from the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy regarding (a) the extent to which the community charge may vary from place to place and (b) the length of the transitional period during which domestic rates and the community charge will run in tandem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: On 15 December, my right hon. Friend set out his proposals for the operation of the community charge and confirmed the Government's intention to introduce a simpler grant system and a uniform rate poundage for business [Official Report, c. 392.] So far as other aspects of the system set out in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714) are concerned, we are still considering the responses that were made, including that from CIPFA.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on the housing investment programme for all years since 1978-79 inclusive, by standard United Kingdom region, showing the absolute, indexed and per capita from of the following disaggregated costs: (i) capital account costs and (ii) current account costs.

Mr. Tracey: The available information is for English local authorities' and new towns' housing and is given in the tables. For estimates for other parts of the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Urban Development Programme

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on the urban development programme for all years since 1978-79 inclusive, aggregated for the standard United Kingdom regions, giving the information in absolute, indexed, and per capita forms.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

Heritage Conservation

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those organisations which, under the auspices of his Department, receive Government funds for the general purposes of protecting, improving and restoring the heritage; and if he will list the amounts involved.

Mr. Waldegrave: The relevant organisations, covering the built and natural heritage in England, and the amounts applicable in 1986-87, are listed below. In some cases their responsibilities extend to other parts of the United Kingdom. Government funding in this area has increased substantially over the last few years: in 1979-80 it totalled some £61 million—an increase of about 58 per cent. in real terms over the period.

Spectrum Arena

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply of 10 February 1987, Official Report, column 157, if one of the conditions of the sale of the Spectrum Arena will ensure that it remains in leisure use; if he envisages any change in the different types of leisure facilities currently available at the Spectrum Arena after its sale; what percentage of the proceeds of the sale of the Spectrum Arena will be spent on new facilities at Birchwood; and what will the remaining proceeds be used for.

Mr. John Patten: It is for the development corporation in the first instance to determine any conditions of sale in relation to the Spectrum Arena. I understand that the corporation's preference is for continued leisure use, but the precise nature of such use would be for discussion between the corporation and prospective purchasers.

Substantial amounts were due to the development corporation at the time the Spectrum Arena closed in respect of loans to the former lessees, the Birchwood Project (Warrington) Limited. Those amounts will be a first call on the proceeds of sale, after provision for the proposed investment in new facilities in Birchwood referred to in my previous reply. No specific proposals have been submitted to the Department as to the amount and nature of that new investment.

Angling

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in respect of the Nature Conservancy Council's establishment of sites of special scientific interest, he will introduce a consultative procedure including the water authorities and established angling clubs where their fishing rights are likely to be affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Any notification, as being of special interest, of a site owned or occupied by a water authority is made to that water authority. The Nature Conservancy Council and the National Anglers Council are preparing joint guidelines for the management of fishing activities within sites of special scientific interest and have agreed to meet regularly to exchange information and views. I endorse this approach and see no need for more formal consultation arrangements.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set up an appeals procedure against Nature Conservancy Council's decisions on the establishing of sites of special scientific interest, allowing for access to such a procedure for the angling fraternity where its sport is liable to be affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The question of a right of appeal has been considered and rejected during the passage of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and subsequently by the House of Commons Select Committee on the Environment. I am satisfied that existing procedures are adequate.

Housing Defects Act

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many owner-occupiers in the South West region live in houses designated under the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many owner-occupiers in the South West region have been awarded grants under the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. John Patten: Local authorities in the South West region have reported paying 44 reinstatement grants during the period December 1984 to September 1986.

Nitrates

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the detrimental effect to health of people living in areas which have a high incidence of nitrates in the soil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My Department has this year received about a dozen representations referring to possible health risks from nitrate when it passes into drinking water supplies. Advice on the health implications of nitrate in drinking water are set out in a letter from the Government's Chief Medical Officer to local medical officers on 27 November 1985; this letter is reproduced as appendix B to the report of the Nitrate Co-ordination Group. A copy of which is available in the Library. No public supplies contain nitrate concentrations above levels considered acceptable by the Chief Medical Officer.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what central Government financial help is available to water authorities to encourage them to reduce the level of nitrates in the soil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Water authority investment is funded from water charges and not grant aided by the Government. If nitrate in the soil needs to be limited in order for example to limit nitrate concentrations in water supplies, costs should where practicable be borne by those responsible for the increased levels. I am at present considering the report of the Nitrate Co-ordination Group which made a number of recommendations for dealing with the nitrate issue.

The Rural Economy

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he plans any changes to the policy announced by his predecessor on 30 April 1986, Official Report, column 412, regarding change of use of agricultural buildings, in the light of his recent announcement of a new draft planning circular in connection with Her Majesty's Government's proposals for the rural economy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Paragraph 6 of the draft circular "Development Involving Agricultural Land" would reaffirm the Government's existing policy on re-use of redundant buildings in Green Belts and elsewhere.

Water Services (Share Sales)

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to make any changes to the cash limit for class X, vote 9 Department of the Environment, sales of shares in the water services public limited companies.

Mr. Ridley: The cash limit for Class X, Vote 9 for 1986-87 will be reduced by £1,000,000 from £2,500,000 to £1,500,000. This decrease reflects the revised timetable for water authority privatisation which I announced to the House on 3 July 1986 at columns 1261-70. The saving will be surrendered as a reduction in public expenditure.

Anti-Fouling Paint

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the results of the first year's monitoring programme for TBT in the aquatic environment, and what further action he proposes to take.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 13 January 1987, c. 143]: In the light of evidence that the existing controls have not been effective in reducing contamination of the aquatic environment to acceptable levels and of evidence that the existing environmental quality target has been set too high to protect the most sensitive species, the Government have decided that further controls are necessary. The Government intend, therefore, to make further regulations under section 100 of the Control of Pollution Act as soon as possible to ban the retail sale of anti-fouling paints containing tributyl-tin (TBT). This should effectively prevent their use on small craft. In addition the regulations will prohibit products containing TBT being used to treat fish farm nets and cages.

From 1 July all anti-fouling paints will become subject to the provisions of the Food and Environment Protection Act and, as my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, announced in his reply to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 3 February, he has asked the Advisory Committee on Pesticides to consider and advise on the scientific evidence on TBT in the aquatic environment, with a view to making appropriate recommendations well before 1 July.

London Docklands

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 169, concerning the price of land to be sold to the Canary Wharf Consortium by the London Docklands Development Corporation, what factors other than land price will be taken into account in assessing the terms of the agreement overall; whether the consideration of other factors excludes acceptance of a price below the market value of land in the enterprise zone; if he will list all the previous occasions on which land for which he has any responsibility has been sold at a price below the market value as a result of priority being given to other factors involved in the transaction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987, c. 382]: Other factors to be considered in assessing any overall agreement between the LDDC and the consortium include the relative strength and value of the commitments by both parties, for example to the provision of essential infrastructure; the implications of the term of LDDC's regeneration task and resources; and the potential economic benefit for docklands as a whole. The LDDC is responsible for determining the conditions of any sale for the Canary Wharf site, and these will be reflected in the price.

Details of all disposals at less than best price of all publicly-owned land for which my right hon. Friend has responsibility could be provided only at disproportionate costs. However, I am not aware, in the case of the LDDC, of any disposals at less than best price.

Rates

Mr. Peter Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, how many ratepayers there are in each of the following boroughs; Brent, Camden, Hackney, Haringey, Islington, Lambeth, Lewisham, Southwark and Tower Hamlets; how many of these pay no rates at all; and how many are partially rate rebated.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his answer, 9 February 1987, c. 126]: The information available centrally about the numbers of domestic ratepayers and those receiving full and partial rebates in 1985-86 is as follows:

	Number of domestic ratepayers[1] (000's)	Ratepayers on supplementary benefit receiving rebates[2] (000's)	Ratepayers receiving standard rebates including housing benefit supplement[2] (000's)
Brent	94·5	16·5	23·4
Camden	80·1	16·5	13·1
Hackney	75·4	24·3	14·9
Haringey	83·9	18·4	17·8
Islington	69·4	19·4	10·2
Lambeth	106·6	30·5	18·2
Lewisham	97·1	18·6	15·8
Southwark	96·6	27·4	18·0
Tower Hamlets	62·0	19·2	11·2

[1] These are the numbers of domestic hereditaments. They are not strictly comparable with the numbers of rebate recipients, which are households, as there can be more than one household receiving rebates in a hereditament.

[2] Local authorities' latest estimates of the average number of households receiving certificated (supplementary benefit claimants) and standard (other claimants) rebates in 1985-86. The majority of those receiving certificated rebates receive full rebate and the majority of those receiving standard rebates receive partial rebates.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest available figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in the North since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in the North between 1979 and 1984 fell by 42 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy — manufacturing investment in the North over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 28 per cent. in real terms.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the latest available figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in Wales since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in Wales between 1979 and 1984 fell by 32 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy—manufacturing investment in Wales over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 28 per cent. in real terms.

Machinery (Investment)

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures to show how much was invested in new machinery per worker in 1975, 1980, 1985 and at the latest available date; and what comparative information he has for the United States of America, Germany, France, Japan and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development average for the same years.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Regional Development Grant

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on the regional development grant, distinguishing between different levels of assistance and aggregating the information to the standard United Kingdom regions, for all years since 1978-79 inclusive.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Insurance and Pension Fund Investment

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish information available to him on insurance and pension fund investment for all years since 1978-79 inclusive, by standard United Kingdom region in absolute, indexed, and per capita forms.

Mr. Howard: Information on investment by insurance companies and pension funds is not collected on a regional basis. Statistics on investment by insurance companies operating in the United Kingdom, for the calendar years 1980 to 1985, were published in British Business on 28 November 1986. Corresponding data for investment by self-administered pension funds managed from within the United Kingdom were published in British Business on 12 September 1986. Information on the holdings of assets at the end of 1978 and 1979 and net investment during 1979 for United Kingdom insurance companies and self-administered pension funds was published in British Business on 7 September 1984.

Employment (Assistance)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the organisations which are relevant to assisting employment in the regions who have moved out of the southern region to the north since 1979; with what impact on employment therein; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Credit

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received about the availability of credit to young people from organisations providing funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: In 1986 I received some 23 letters relating to personal over-indebtedness and roughly one third of these expressed particular concern about the availability of credit facilities to young people. This year, to date, I have received a further four letters on this subject, all but one concerned with young people. I shall continue to keep the situation under review but I do not believe it would be right to impose restrictions on the availability of credit to young people.

Rolls-Royce

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of the years since 1971 in which loans were made to Rolls-Royce Ltd., the years in which the loans were repaid and the interest received by the Government in the relevant years.

Mr. Pattie: I will reply to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Correspondence (Delays)

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when his Department expects to be able to reply to letters from M. J. Palmer dated 30 January and 6 February;

(2) when he expects to be in a position to reply to a letter addressed to him dated 2 February from Mohamed Al Fayed.

Mr. Howard: The matters contained in these letters are receiving careful consideration. I cannot say at present when a substantive reply will be given to them.

United States (Export Controls)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the members of the trade associations referred to in his answer of 19 February are United States subsidiary companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: This Department does not possess the information requested.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether the approved foreign consignee status to which he referred in his answer of 19 February involves mandatory compliance with the United States export laws including re-export licensing requirements from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 19 February if the distribution licence system requires, directly or indirectly, a United States re-export licence for goods to be exported from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Whatever their requirements, extraterritorial re-export controls are rejected by the Government, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear on 19 February.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what powers he intends to decide on visits of American officials to check the books of United Kingdom companies to which he refers in his answer of 19 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government's permission is required before any such visit by an official of a foreign power, acting in that capacity, can take place within the United Kingdom.

Fireworks

Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to restrict further the sale of fireworks to individuals.

Mr. Howard: The Fireworks (Safety) Regulations 1986 give magistrates the power to impose a penalty of fines up to £2,000 or three months imprisonment on retailers who sell fireworks to the under-16s. The Consumer Protection Bill will give magistrates power to impose similar penalties for throwing fireworks about in the street.

I do not intend to ban the retail sale of fireworks altogether since many people get a great deal of innocent pleasure from domestic fireworks parties.

I will continue to keep under review the scope for reducing the number of firework injuries. The 1986 fireworks safety campaign had novel features and I believe achieved considerable impact. Officials will shortly be discussing with the suppliers the scope for changes in the voluntary restraint arrangements whose effect on the accident and injury statistics should not be underestimated.

THE ARTS

Marketing and Management

Mr. Murphy asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the progress of his new marketing scheme to help arts and heritage bodies improve their marketing and management.

Mr. Luce: The details have been widely circulated through arts agencies. Completed application forms must reach the Office of Arts and Libraries by 30 April 1987.

I am encouraged by the reports that I have had of the interest and enthusiasm being shown, and by the development of arts marketing in general.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Finance Ministers (Paris Meeting)

Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement about the meeting of Finance Ministers in Paris on 22 February.

Mr. Lawson: I attended a meeting of the Finance Ministers and central bank governors of six of the group of seven major industrialised countries in Paris on 22 February. A copy of the joint statement issued at the end of the meeting has been placed in the Library. As I said at the press conference in Paris after the communiqué had been issued:

"For a number of weeks there has been speculation in the press about a possible meeting of the G5 or the G7. I have all along insisted that there should be no meeting until it had been properly prepared and that we knew we were close to an agreement of substance.

And that we have now had—a well prepared meeting that has reached an agreement of substance.

Along with Secretary Baker and Minister Stoltenberg I am one of the three survivors of the Plaza Agreement of 1985. And I see this as its lineal descendant—Plaza II.

Then, we were all agreed that the dollar needed to fall and we acted accordingly. Now, we all agree that the time has come for a period of stability, and we will act accordingly. I welcome that."

Free Ports

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has any plans to offer capital investment grants or low interest loans to non-European Economic Community companies wishing to set up in British free port zones.

Mr. Brooke: No. The Government made it clear from the start that it had no financial commitment to the free ports other than the customs staff involved with them. Businesses setting up in free ports may of course be eligible to incentives as a result of the application of other Government policies, for example regional assistance.

Civil Service Pension Schemes

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to include years of war service as contributing towards Civil Service pension schemes other than the transfer of war service from the National Health Service superannuation scheme for the Civil Service pension scheme.

Mr. Brooke: The reckoning of war service for Civil Service superannuation purposes is governed by the Superannuation Act 1946. This, and regulations made under it, provided that people who entered the Civil Service for the first time before 30 June 1950 could count their full-time service in the armed forces during the war as though it had been unestablished service in the Civil Service. In recent years, the reckoning of war service concession has been extended to employees in the other public services, ie to local government and NHS employees, teachers, policemen and firemen. People who entered pensionable public service employment before 1 July 1950 and who, without a break in pensionable employment, have subsequently had their accrued pension benefits transferred to the Civil Service pension scheme may therefore count their war service for Civil Service pension purposes to the extent that it would have reckoned had they remained subject to their former pension scheme. There are no plans to extend the war service concession further.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Ottaway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much value added tax receipts have risen in the period 1 October 1986 to 31 January 1987; what was the comparable rise in the same period of 1985-86; and how much of the increase is attributable to penalties for the late payment of value added tax.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what has been the total revenue from value added tax on fuel sales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case;

(2) what has been the total revenue from value added tax on vehicle service and repair in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case;

(3) what has been the total revenue from value added tax upon motor vehicle sales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Excise Duties

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from fuel excise duties in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Tax Revenue

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from the taxation of cars or benefits in kind in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what has been the total revenue from car tax in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case;

(2) what has been the total revenue from all motoring taxes in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

RAF Range, Tain

8. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Defence what prior notification was given to local residents of the controlled detonation of an unexploded practice round at the Royal Air Force range, Tain, on 18 December 1986.

Mr. Freeman: Under the procedures that apply at Tain, notice is given to the local police of such occurrences usually about 24 hours ahead. In this case notification was given to them by telephone on 16 December that a controlled detonation would take place on 18 December. On that day the range authorities reminded the local police of the planned detonation shortly before it was subsequently undertaken.

Maritime Strategy

9. Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations he has had with North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies concerning maritime strategy.

10. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether there have been any recent changes in the role of the Royal Navy in the Atlantic.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend regularly discusses a wide range of strategy issues with his NATO counterparts, including the maritime component.

There have been no recent changes in the basic maritime strategy of either NATO or the Royal Navy.

HMS Hermes (Replacement)

18. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence what provision he has made to fill the aviation support ship role formerly carried out by HMS Hermes.

Mr. Stanley: Plans have been made to provide a limited helicopter lift capability in support of amphibious operations from within existing assets. We shall be addressing the means of providing helicopter lift in support of amphibious operations over the next few months.

Dangerous Military Cargoes

19. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received regarding procedures for transporting nuclear weapons following the recent road accident on Salisbury Plain.

Mr. Stanley: I assume the hon. and learned Member is referring to the accident involving a military convoy that occurred on 10 January near West Dean in Wiltshire. My Department as of 20 February had received 51 letters from right hon. and hon. Members and members of the public regarding that accident. In accordance with the practice of successive Governments, I can neither confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear weapons, nor comment on their method of transportation.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply on 10 February, Official Report, column 184, if those in charge of the arrangements for the transportation of dangerous military cargoes are informed of the number and type of 50-tonne road mobile cranes that are available for hire close to the routes of military convoys carrying dangerous cargoes; and what assessment has been made of the availability for hire by his Department of 50-tonne road mobile cranes throughout the United Kingdom and at any time.

Mr. Stanley: The drivers of all military vehicles carry instructions advising them which Service unit to contact if recovery assistance is required in the event of a breakdown. Service units maintain information on the recovery facilities available for hire, when required, from local commercial sources. No detailed assessment has been made of 50-tonne road mobile cranes as these are readily available for hire.

Surveillance Satellites

21. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom's current capability to launch surveillance satellites.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom does not have a satellite launch capability of its own.

Trident

22. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the value of contracts which have been, or will be, placed with United Kingdom contractors under the Trident programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced to the House on 27 January, 62 per cent. of the total of the latest Trident project estimate will be spent in the United Kingdom. This amounts to more than £5,700 million.

37. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received following his announcement of the revised cost of the Trident programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: One written representation has been received.

48. Mr. Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Trident fleet to be fully operational.

Mr. Stanley: The United Kingdom Trident force will be introduced progressively from the mid-1990s. For reasons of security, it is not our normal practice to publish detailed in-service dates.

65. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will declassify information on the number of warheads to be carried in Trident submarines.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 20 February.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he used (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) a special defence price index to convert Trident spending into 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Allowances for pay and prices in the Trident estimate are calculated by using indices for the appropriate defence industrial sectors. The GDP deflator is not, therefore, used.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence what undertakings he has received from the United States Administration with regard to the United Kingdom's use of Trident in circumstances where the United States President has not authorised the firing of United States nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: The Trident D5 missile system is being made available to the United Kingdom under the terms and undertakings contained in the United States/United Kingdom Polaris sales agreement of 6 April 1963 (Cmnd 1995), which has been extended for this purpose. This envisages, in accordance with the Defence 1962 Nassau "Statement on Nuclear Defence Systems" that the British strategic nuclear deterrent will be used for the international defence of the Western Alliance in all circumstances except where the British Government may decide that supreme national interests are at stake. In all circumstances, decisions on the operational use of the British deterrent rest solely with the British Government.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many copies of the document "Trident and the Alternatives" have been produced; and what are the channels of distribution.

Mr. Stanley: To date, 1,000 copies of Defence Open Government Document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives" have been produced. Copies have been placed in the Library of both Houses and in the Vote Office, and are available on request either to my Department or to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Army Resources (Equestrian Duty Time)

23. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the degree and circumstances of use of Army resources including personnel property and officers in connection with equestrian duty time activity excluding the Household Cavalry.

Mr. Freeman: In addition to the Household Cavalry, the following corps and units hold Army horses:

Unit	Number of horses	Nature of duties
a. RAVC Training Centre	Averages 150 which includes some 45 from other units for treatment, rest or further training.	(i) Reprovision of horses (ii) Training remounts. (iii) Advanced military equitation training. (iv) Farrier training. (vi) Treatment and rest of horses.
b. The Kings Troop Royal Horse Artillery	111	Ceremonial.
c. Royal Military Police Provost Companies	26	Police duties including range patrol and ceremonial duties.
d. London District Staff	19	Ceremonial.
e. Defence Animal Support Unit BAOR	5	Range Patrols.
f. Royal Military Academy Sandhurst	2	Ceremonial.

Some 280 personnel are involved in duties connected with these horses.

Contracts (Cancellation Charges)

24. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's contracts are subject to cancellation charges.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A clause is included in all major contracts which enables the Ministry to determine these contracts prematurely. The clause provides for the payment of fair and reasonable costs incurred by the contractors in the event of determination.

ABM Treaty

25. Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the United States Administration on the terms of the treaty with the Soviet Union on anti-ballistic missile defences.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend discussed a variety of arms control issues including the ABM treaty during his talks with Mr. Weinberger and other members of the United States Administration last week.

Strategic Defence Initiative

26. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for British defence policy of any United States decision to proceed with early deployment of strategic defence systems.

Mr. Stanley: The SDI is a research programme designed to investigate the feasibility of strategic defences. It is not possible to speculate at this stage of the research on the form any deployment might take or on its implications for British defence policy. The United States

Administration have made it clear that no decisions on deployment, let alone on any particular system, have been taken.

45. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent consultations he has had with members of the United States Administration about the deployment of weapons systems as part of the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Corby (Mr. Powell).

Frigate Orders

27. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to announce further frigate orders.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Decisions on further frigate orders will be taken when appropriate.

Western European Union

28. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to attend a meeting of the Western European Union.

Mr. Stanley: Because of other commitments my right hon. Friend regrets that he is unable to attend the next ministerial meeting of the Western European Union, scheduled for 27 and 28 April in Luxembourg. He has asked me to represent him.

Tornado Programme

29. Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Tornado programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Deliveries of Tornado aircraft are proceeding satisfactorily according to the approved schedule.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to meet the Japanese Defence Minister to discuss the possibility of Tornado sales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have no plans to meet the Japanese Defence Minister.

Nuclear Missiles

30. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the cost of ordering the Tomahawk sea-launched cruise missiles for the Royal Navy following the publication of the document "Trident and the Alternatives"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: My Department has received no representations specifically on this matter since the publication of Defence Open Government Document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives" on 30 January. As I said in the debate on the Royal Navy on 2 February at column 708, a United Kingdom minimum deterrent based on either sea-launched or air-launched cruise missiles would be likely to be about double the cost of Trident.

39. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about nuclear missiles following publication of his open Government document, "Trident and the Alternatives".

Mr. Stanley: No such representations relating directly to the publication of Defence Open Government Document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives" on 30 January have been received to date.

41. Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in favour of purchasing sea-launched Tomahawk cruise missiles for the Royal Navy, following the publication of "Trident and the Alternatives"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Forth) earlier today.

44. Mr. Neale asked the Secretary of State for Defence, in response to the document "Trident and the Alternatives" if he has received any representations on the merits of the French M5 nuclear missile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: My Department has received no representations specifically on this matter since the publication of Defence Open Government Document No. 87/01 "Trident and the Alternatives" on 30 January. As I said in the debate on the Royal Navy on 2 February at column 708, a switch to a French ballistic system has all the potential to cost the United Kingdom considerably more than the procurement of Trident D5.

Soviet Union Defence Minister

31. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to seek to meet the Defence Minister of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Younger: No.

Helicopters

32. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he will be ordering new support helicopters for the Royal Air Force.

55. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce his decision regarding the acquisition of support helicopters.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown).

68. Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to safeguard the helicopter industrial base and, in particular Westland plc, through his future ordering programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government addressed the defence implications of the future of Westland plc last year (Cmnd. 9916) in their response to the third and fourth reports of the House of Commons Defence Committee. As we said in the response, the pursuit of value for money in defence procurement takes full account of the longer term considerations which bear on the continued existence of companies or capabilities within the defence industrial base.

With regard to the future ordering programme for helicopters, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Yeovil.

69. Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has considered the project definition study of the proposed NH90 collaborative helicopter; and whether he can now make a statement of his Department's intentions on funding British industrial participation in this aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our studies are virtually complete and a decision will be announced shortly.

Anti-Submarine Warfare Capability

33. Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline the measures his Department is taking to improve anti-submarine warfare capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Anti-submarine warfare (ASW) is an area of crucial strategic importance and because of the increasing capability of the Soviet submarine fleet, we place particular emphasis on our ASW capability. We have four of the new type 23 frigates, which are optimised for ASW, on order. We plan to increase the proportion of nuclear-powered hunter-killer submarines in our fleet and introduce the new powerful and quiet Upholder class of conventional submarine. The collaborative Anglo-Italian EH101 programme to develop a new ASW helicopter is proceeding; an initial order of 50 aircraft is envisaged. In addition we maintain continuing programmes of research and development and of enhancements to and new purchases of ASW weapons and sensors. For example, initial production of the new Spearfish heavyweight torpedo is under way, an improvement programme for the Tigerfish heavyweight torpedo is nearing completion and last year we placed a large order for the lightweight Stingray torpedo.

Royal Dockyards

34. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement regarding the preferred contractors for the royal dockyards.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made today by my right hon. Friend about the contract with Devonport Management Limited in respect of Devonport dockyard and to my right hon. Friend's similar statement on 27 January at column 183 authorising a contract to be signed with Babcock Thorn Limited for the future operation of Rosyth dockyard.

Nuclear Capability

35. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received regarding the adequacy of Britain's nuclear capability.

Mr. Stanley: Since the beginning of 1987 my Department has received about 30 written representations relating to the adequacy of Britain's nuclear capability.

Nimrod

36. Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the progress of his review of the failures of management in his Department during the Nimrod advanced early warning programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The study of the adequacy of the arrangements for the scientific and technical specification and monitoring of major projects, which was set up against the background of our experience with Nimrod AEW, is now under way and is expected to report by the middle of the year.

Departmental Land and Property

38. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to improve the management of his Department's land and property.

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence is constantly looking for ways to improve the utilisation of its land and property holdings. These are of course held in support of the operational, training and support needs of the Services and are managed on a single-Service basis. However, following a number of studies which recognised a need to maximise utilisation through joint usage, and which took advice from the private sector, a number of opportunities for tri-Service occupation of sites were identified which would enable the disposal of other properties. To oversee all the necessary work to achieve these savings, and to apply regular reviews of matters related to the overall management of the defence estate, a defence estate steering group was established in 1985.

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the end use to which land disposed of by his Department has been put in the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No records are maintained on the use of land which has passed out of MOD ownership.

Air Defences

40. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to strengthen air defences between now and 1991.

Mr. Stanley: The defence of RAF establishments against possible air attack will benefit from the major programme of improvements in both the quantity and quality of our air defences which is now under way including the programmes for the Tornado air defence variant, the Boeing E-3A and improved UKADGE. In addition, specific measures are being taken to ensure survivability and the continuance of air operations, for example by hardening aircraft shelters and other key facilities and by extending our airfield damage repair capabilities.

Defence Equipment (Orders)

42. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied that British defence equipment companies are receiving full and fair opportunities for securing orders for new equipment from both the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation procurement authorities direct and the member states' procurement agencies.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I can confirm that United Kingdom defence equipment companies receive full and fair opportunities for securing orders from NATO procurement agencies. Opportunities for securing orders from NATO member Governments are governed by each nation's procedures and legislation.

United States Secretary of Defence

43. Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to meet the United States Secretary of Defence to discuss nuclear defence policy; and if he will make a statement.

61. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the United States Secretary of Defence to discuss progress on the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Younger: I discussed a wide variety of issues of mutual interest during my talks with Mr. Weinberger and other members of the United States Administration in Washington last week. I have no immediate plans for any further discussions.

Cruise Missiles

46. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the schedule for arrival of the first cruise missiles at Molesworth.

Mr. Stanley: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, South on 15 April 1986 at column 375.

66. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom capacity exists for the manufacture of Tomahawk sea-launch cruise missiles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is, no doubt, within the capability of British industry to manufacture Tomahawk cruise missiles under licence, but no production facility currently exists.

Exports

47. Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of British defence exports in 1986.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The detailed figures are not yet available, but it is already clear that 1986 was a very successful year for our firms active in this field.

Bramley Camp, Basingstoke

49. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about the future of Bramley camp, near Basingstoke.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the review of possible further defence use of Bramley camp is taking longer than I had expected, and at this stage I can add nothing to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend on 9 December (Official Report, c. 142). I will write to him when the review has been completed.

Polaris

50. Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Polaris missile system will be obsolete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: To ensure the continued effectiveness and reliability of the United Kingdom's strategic deterrent it is necessary to commence replacing it in the mid-1990s.

YTS

51. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Defence, if he has any plans to increase the number of YTS trainees taken on by the armed services during the next six months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Armed Services YTS was expanded on 1 January 1987 to offer one or two year engagements in line with the Manpower Services Commission YTS. Intakes within that total are dependent upon applicants successfully meeting MSC YTS eligibility criteria and normal Service recruitment standards. Places are awarded on merit. In 1986-87 there are some 2,000 places available and vacancies still exist.

French Defence Minister

52. Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to meet the French Defence Minister to discuss nuclear defence policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I shall be meeting my French colleague in Paris next month when I expect to discuss with him a wide variety of defence issues of mutual interest.

Pegasus 11-61

53. Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in negotiations with the United States Government to develop the uprated Pegasus engine, the 11-61.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have carried out a technical evaluation of the proposed Pegasus 11-61 engine in conjunction with the United States Marine Corps. Rolls-Royce plc is now engaging in separate commercial discussions with the United States authorities and with the Ministry of Defence.

For our part, we expect to receive a formal proposal from Rolls-Royce shortly. Although there is at present no United Kingdom requirement for an uprated Pegasus, the 11-61 offers the prospect of operating costs lower than those of the current Pegasus engine. This will be taken into account in our life cycle evaluation of the proposals.

Committee of Public Accounts (Projects)

54. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to seek to revise the terms of the major project statement in relation to the Committee of Public Accounts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The terms of the major project statement reflect successive requests from the Committee of Public Accounts.

In 1986 the Committee agreed to my Department's suggestion that the threshold for inclusion of projects be raised. Other changes may be agreed between the Committee and my Department from time to time.

63. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence projects of over £250 million have been communicated to the Committee of Public Accounts since 1983.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Forty-eight projects, including nuclear projects, with approved expenditure in excess of £250 million and two projects with approved expenditure between £200 million and £250 million have appeared at various times in the major project statements submitted annually to the Public Accounts Committee since 1982. The figures are the same if 1983 is taken as the starting point. Tornado GR1 and F2 are treated as a single project in this calculation.

Royal Ordnance Factories

56. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the conditions of service of employees of the royal ordnance factories have been adequately protected following the transfer of Royal Ordnance plc to the private sector.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 26 January 1987 at column 132. Employees of Royal Ordnance plc will have the normal protection provided by the law in maintaining their terms and conditions of service.

AWACS (Contracts)

57. Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list any offers to quote for American defence contracts which have been made since and in connection with the decision to purchase the airborne warning and control system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The bidding opportunities being made available by Boeing and its sub-contractors to meet their commitments in relation to the selection of the AWACS system for the RAF, and the responses by British companies, are a purely commercial matter. We are, however, closely monitoring contracts placed under the offset arrangements.

NATO (Missile Systems)

58. Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent consultations he has had with North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies concerning the anti-ballistic missile systems.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Corby (Mr. Powell).

European Fighter Aircraft

59. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether discussions on the European fighter aircraft have yet covered the question of the cancellation charges which might arise once construction commences.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The contract negotiation currently taking place with the two prime contractors will include discussion of the terms of cancellation subsequent to contract signature.

Force Level, Europe

60. Mr. Andy Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to meet the Soviet Defence Minister to discuss force levels in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: No, but contacts between representatives of NATO and Warsaw Pact countries on a mandate for negotiations aimed at establishing conventional stability in Europe from the Atlantic to Urals at lower levels began this month.

Porton Down (AIDS)

62. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any use is proposed to be made of facilities at Porton Down for research to combat AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My Department's chemical defence establishment at Porton Down is not involved in work of this nature, but I understand that the centre for applied microbiological research, which is part of the DHSS's public health laboratory service and is situated at Porton Down, is engaged in research to combat AIDS.

Modular Stand-Off Weapon

64. Mr. Duffy asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with progress achieved on the modular stand-off weapon collaborative programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily between the governments of the United Kingdom, United States, France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Canada. It is hoped that this major programme will lead to significant economies in the use of NATO resources. It is the intention to sign a memorandum of understanding in the first half of 1987.

Royal Military School of Music, Kneller Hall

67. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is now able to make a statement on the future of the Royal Military School of Music, Kneller Hall.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence expects to announce a decision soon.

Defence Procurement (Co-operation)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on European co-operation on defence procurement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Good progress is being made in promoting wider and more systematic European co-operation in defence procurement, the primary forum for which is the Independent European Programme Group. Over the past two years the IEPG has been revitalised and is now establishing a considerable record of achievement. Eleven harmonised operational staff targets have been produced and discussions are under way aimed at establishing joint projects to meet them. Efforts are also being made to promote greater collaboration on defence-related research. Regular meetings at ministerial level are now held and my right hon. Friend looks forward to meeting his IEPG colleagues again in June. Outside the IEPG, regular discussions are held at all levels with our major European collaborative partners.

Defence Capability (Costs)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the cost of increasing the United Kingdom's defence capability in all areas, except nuclear defence, by 10 per cent.

Mr. Stanley: The cost of increasing defence expenditure on conventional forces by 10 per cent. would be about £1·8 billion per annum based on current year estimates. The increase in capability which such a sum might buy would depend on how the money were to be spent.

Research Expenditure

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on defence research for all years since 1978-79 inclusive, by standard United Kingdom region giving the absolute, indexed and per capita form of the following disaggregated costs: (i) capital account costs and (ii) current account costs.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Research and development expenditure is not at present separately identified by region. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 16 February to the hon. Member for Merionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas).

Fishing Vessel (Submarine Incident)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action was taken to rescue the fishing boat Summer Morn, from Portavogie, entrapped by a submarine in the Irish sea on Wednesday 18 February; whether his Department was in contact with the submarine; from which country the submarine originated; and what information he has as to what arrangements exist for compensation to be paid to the skipper for the loss of his fishing nets.

Mr. Stanley: RN and RAF search and rescue Helicopters went to the scene of the incident and remained there until their presence was no longer required. It is not our practice to comment on specific aspects of submarine communications. The United States navy has said that one of its submarines was involved in the incident, and that anyone who feels that they may have experienced damages or losses as a result of this incident may submit an Admiralty claim to the US Navy in London.

Pilots

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to allow women to train as pilots in the armed services.

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans at present to do so.

Nuclear Weapon Programmes (Jobs)

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make an estimate of the number of jobs in the north-west dependent upon United Kingdom nuclear weapon programmes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Estimates of the number of jobs dependent upon MOD expenditure are not made on a regional basis. It is estimated that the Trident programme will create an average 7,500 direct and 6,000 indirect jobs throughout its procurement period in the United Kingdom as a whole. About 11,000 MOD civilians are directly employed in maintaining the present nuclear deterrent.

US Bases

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency applies equally to United States forces under national command and United States forces under North Atlantic Treaty Organisation command;

(2) whether the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency applies equally to conventional and nuclear weapons;

(3) whether the arrangements for implementing the existing understanding between the United Kingdom and the United States of America governing the use by the United States of its bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency are the same for conventional as for nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: The Churchill/Truman understanding of 1952 reaffirmed that the use of these bases in an emergency would be a matter for joint decision by Her Majesty's Government and the United States Government in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time. Appropriate arrangements exist to cover both conventional and nuclear United States forces, whether under national or NATO command. These arrangements are classified.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Cervical Screening

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to review the five-year recall rota for cervical cancer tests.

Mrs. Currie: Our guidance to health authorities on the recommended interval between cervical smears is currently under review. The outcome of that review will be announced shortly.

Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to appoint a new chairman for the North Lincolnshire health authority; and if he will consult staff and local authorities in the area before doing so.

Mrs. Currie: My right hon. Friend is not required to consult anyone before making the appointment of a health authority chairman. He does, however, take account of any names that may be put forward from various sources. An announcement will be made about the chairmanship of North Lincolnshire health authority in due course.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to appoint a new chairman for the Humberside health authority; and if he will consult staff and local authorities in the area before doing so.

Mrs. Currie: The chairman of Humberside family practitioner committee resigned recently for personal reasons but has agreed to carry on until his successor is appointed. It is too early to say when that will be.

My right hon. Friend is not required to consult anyone in making the appointment but will take account of recommendations from various sources including any received from hon. and right hon. Members.

Medical Practitioners (Fees)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much has been paid to medical practitioners for services in examining claimants for (a) mobility allowance and (b) attendance allowance in each of the past 15 years, comparable at 1985 prices.

Mr. Major: The available information is in the table. Comparable information is not available for earlier years. All figures are at 1985 prices.

Total paid in respect of claims to:

	(a) Mobility allowance £	(b) Attendance allowance £
1981-82	2,519,415	5,369,717
1982-83	2,964,121	7,194,835
1983-84	3,547,567	7,709,134
1984-85	4,770,862	8,701,248
1985-86	4,459,386	9,391,078

Departmental Staff

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many civil servants have been employed directly to handle claims for (a) mobility allowance and (b) attendance allowance in each year set out 1974, 1979, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Major: The numbers of civil servants employed directly to handle claims for the two allowances mentioned are as shown in the table.

	Mobility Allowance	Attendance Allowance
1974	—	220
1979	155	321
1983	302	469
1984	361	555
1986	494	617

Notes:
(i) Mobility Allowance was introduced in 1986.
(ii) All dates are 1 April.
(iii) Most of the staff are located at North Fyled Central Office but the figures in the table include for local and regional offices an estimate of the number of full-time equivalents for staff whose duties extend beyond these two benefits.

Benefits

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people in (a) Burnley constituency area and (b) Pendle constituency area have been in receipt of unemployment benefit for (i) less than six months, (ii) six months to one year, (iii) one to two years and (iv) over two years at the latest date for which figures are available;

(2) how many (a) men and (b) women (i) in the Burnley constituency and (ii) in the Pendle constituency have been in receipt of unemployment benefit for each of the last five years aged (a) under 25 years, (b) 25 to 35 years, (c) 35 to 50 years and (d) over 50 years, respectively.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many new claims for supplementary benefit were registered in the local offices in Brighton and Leicester, respectively, for each year since 1979 by claimants under the age of 25 years.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants were disqualified for unemployment benefit or had their supplementary benefit entitlement reduced under section 20(1) of the Social Security Act 1975 or regulation 8 of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations in each month since January 1979; and what change has occurred in the proportion of cases in which the maximum period of disqualification or reduction is imposed since it was increased from six to 13 weeks.

Mr. Major: The information is not available in the form requested.

The numbers of people subject to disqualification of unemployment benefit under Section 20(1) of the Social Security Act 1975 are shown in the table which gives a quarterly breakdown. The figures differ from those given by my predecessor in his reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 1 May 1986 at columns 471-72 because they take account of decisions made following a review carried out by the adjudication officer.

	March	June	September	December
1979	129,519	128,489	142,464	138,072
1980	133,421	126,306	123,301	104,424
1981	88,428	86,901	87,268	85,802
1982	82,467	84,158	93,240	89,708
1983	83,711	83,142	93,475	93,859
1985	94,827	95,935	108,652	102,948
1986	96,499	102,084	111,858	n/a

Notes:
1. The figures for 1984 are not available.
2. The figures for December 1986 are not yet available.

The number of people subject to a voluntary unemployment deduction under regulation 8 of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1983 are shown in the following table the information being available only on an annual basis:

	Number
1979	364,000
1980	260,000
1981	195,000
1982	182,000
1983	299,000
1984	299,000

Notes:
1. Figures for 1985 and 1986 are not available.
2. The figures have been estimated from information in the Annual Statistical Enquiry, on the assumption that deductions apply for, on average, four weeks.
3. The figures include deductions made pending a final decision and it is estimated that 40 per cent. would be refunded when a decision went in the claimant's favour.
4. The figures in the two tables overlap where supplementary benefit is paid to people who are disqualified for receiving unemployment benefit.

Information is not yet available following the change to increase the maximum period of the penalties under section 43 of the Social Security Act 1986 which came into effect from 5 October 1986.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average waiting period for the processing of new supplementary benefit claims by his Department's Brighton offices; and if he will provide details of waiting times for each year since 1979 on a quarterly basis.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 270.]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Figures are not available for the period before 1983, nor are they collected on a quarterly basis.

The average time taken by Brighton local office to deal with a claim for supplementary benefit from 1983-84 to date is as follows:

Year (ending April)	Working days
1984	4
1985	8
1986	8
1987[1]	8

[1] Period up to 10 February

Rent Arrears

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the amount and proportion of total rent arrears recorded for each authority in England and Wales attributable to delayed payments from his Department.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not available, but I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Staffordshire (Mr. Heddle) on 10 December at columns 188-189.

Occupational Pensions Board

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to appoint a new chairman of the Occupational Pensions Board.

Mr. Fowler: I have appointed Mr. Jeremy Rowe CBE as Chairman of the Board from 6 April 1987, in succession to Mr. Ronald Abbott CBE, whose term of office ends on 5 April.

Mr. Rowe is Deputy Chairman of the Abbey National building society and Chairman of Peterborough development corporation. He also chaired the housing benefit review team which I set up as part of the social security review in 1984. His wide experience in both public and private sectors will enable him to bring a broad perspective to the job of chairman of the Occupational Pensions Board, reflecting the Board's wider responsibilities with the advent of our personal and occupational pension reforms.

I wish to pay tribute to the valuable service of Mr. Abbott as Chairman of the Board since July 1982 and, before that, as Deputy Chairman since its foundation. Under his leadership the board has been notably successful and authoritative in discharging their duties, and many of our pension reforms reflect their expert advice.

Mr. Abbott has received most valuable support from Mr. Eric Rogers as deputy chairman of the board; and I am delighted that Mr. Rogers has agreed to accept re-appointment for two years from 6 April.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Leicester and in Brighton received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Leicester and Brighton respectively, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Leicester (Burleys Way)	1,238
Leicester (Lower Hill Street)	1,558
Leicester (Norton Street)	1,781
Leicester (Yeoman Street)	2,211
Brighton	1,727

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Stockton on Tees claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending 31 December 1986, 2,576 claims to maternity grant were made at Stockton and 2,472 claims at Middlesbrough, the Department's offices which cover the Stockton on Tees constituencies, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Stockton on Tees received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,897 claims to maternity allowance were made at Stockton and 1,299 claims at Middlesbrough, the Department's offices which cover Stockton on Tees, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dagenham claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Dagenham constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Barking and Ilford, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant is each of the two local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Barking	1,508
Ilford	3,103

In addition, 412 claims for maternity grant were made at the Dagenham local office, which covered part of the constituency, before it closed on 14 August 1986 when the work was transferred to Barking.

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dagenham received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,395 claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's Barking and Dagenham offices and 2,140 claims at Ilford, the offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Worsley constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 906 claims to maternity allowance were made at Farnworth, 1,040 claims at Leigh and 676 claims at Salford, South, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bury, North constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,622 claims to maternity allowance were made at Bury, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bolton, North-East constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 2,037 claims to maternity allowance were made at Bolton, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Worsley constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Worsley constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at Farnworth, Leigh and Salford South, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims for maternity grant received at the three local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Farnworth	1,239
Leigh	1,462
Salford South	1,066

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bolton, North-East constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Bolton, North-East constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Bolton although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at the Bolton local office during the 1986 calendar year was 3,457.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bury, North constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Bury, North constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Bury, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at the Bury local office during the 1986 calendar year was 3,982.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many families in Brighton and Leicester, respectively, currently receive family income supplement; what is the average weekly sum received by each family; and how many of these families are entitled to free school meals as a result.

Mr. Lyell: I regret this information is not available. Family income supplement claims are dealt with centrally by our office in Blackpool and no information is maintained about claims from particular local areas.

Family Credit

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the number of families in Brighton and Leicester, respectively, who will be entitled to receive family credit; and how many of them will be entitled to continue receiving free school meals.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that it is not possible to make an estimate on such a localised basis. Overall, family credit is expected to reach about double the number of families now helped by family income supplement. Families receiving family credit will not be entitled to free school meals, but the rates will be set at a higher level so as to give extra cash help instead.

Single Payments (Appeals)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many appeals against decisions relating to single payments for those on supplementary benefit are currently being dealt with by the three local offices serving the Birmingham, Perry Barr constituency, namely: Soho road, Walsall road and Kingsbury road; and how these figures compare with the numbers one year ago.

Mr. Lyell: National administrative statistics for social services appeals are not disaggregated below regional level and so figures for the individual Birmingham offices are not available. The latest available statistics are for single payment appeals lodged in the DHSS midlands region in the quarter ending 31 March 1986 when the total number of supplementary benefit single payment appeals awaiting a decision was 5,534. The equivalent figure for the quarter ending 31 March 1985 was 6,935.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) occupied and (b) unoccupied hospital beds there are in each of the regions of Great Britain.

Mrs. Currie: The requested information is given in the table for regional health authorities in England. A variety of reasons may lead to some beds being unoccupied. These include the need to have beds available for emergencies, unexpectedly early discharges which leave a bed available until the next day and unpredictable admissions (for example, in maternity cases).

The health services information steering group recommended in its first report that bed use data should include all patients using a ward in a 24-hour period and that aggregated bed occupancy statistics should not be used as an indicator of efficient bed use. A more useful measure of bed utilisation is patient throughput per available bed. For instance, in 1985 19·5 in-patient cases were treated per available bed compared with 15·00 in 1979.

Statistics for the rest of Great Britain are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

National Health Service hospitals in England, 1985

Regional/Special Health Authority	Average daily number of occupied beds[1]	Average daily number of available beds not occupied[1]
Northern	18,900	4,873
Yorkshire	21,061	5,732
Trent	23,075	6,316
East Anglian	9,912	2,622

Special Health Authorities	2,351	735
England Total	263,962	61,526

[1] Bed occupancy figures are based on a midnight count and do not therefore reflect the use of beds by patients who do not stay overnight.

Births (Sheffield)

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many births were there in Sheffield in the last year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: During 1985, there were 6,162 live births and 31 stillbirths to mothers living in the Sheffield metropolitan district.

McColl Report

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a further statement on any implementation of the recommendations of the McColl report.

Mr. Major: As I said during the debate in the House on 17 February at column 796, I hope to announce decisions on some of the central recommendations of the McColl report very shortly.

Social Security Act 1986

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from voluntary organisations concerning implementation of the Social Security Act of 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Social Security Act 1986 was passed by Parliament on 25 July 1986 after 230 hours of debate. The Act was the culmination of two and a half years of intense review and discussion.

Four thousand five hundred organisations and individuals accepted an invitation to comment. Nineteen public sessions were held by Ministers with 62 organisations and individuals contributing.

The Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9518) received over 7,000 responses. Before and after publication of the subsequent White Paper (Cmnd. 9691) in December 1985 proposals were discussed with many welfare and voluntary organisations and representatives of industry (this included the Child Poverty Action Group, Age Concern, the Disablement Income Group, the Equal Opportunity Commission, the Confederation of British Industry and the Trade Union Council).

More recently Ministers have met representatives of the Child Poverty Action Group, National Council for One Parent Families, Age Concern, Youthaid, Cleveland Welfare Rights and the Union Coalition for Social Security to discuss specific issues. Discussions are currently under way with the local authority associations on draft housing benefit regulations; with the Association of County Councils on the Social fund and with major pension interests on changes relating to pensions.

Since the autumn of last year, Ministers have attended outside engagements or held meetings with many interested organisations. Examples of these are the National Council for Voluntary Organisations, the Child Poverty Action Group, the Spastic Society, Age Concern, the Personal Finance Editors Association, the Confederation of British Industry, the Soldiers, Sailors, Airmens and Families Association and the National Association of Pension Funds.

We have received substantial, and diverse representations on the implementation of the legislation. The consultations we have fully entered into reflect the importance of the subject.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give (a) the daily mean temperature and (b) the weekly mean temperature for the 64 Department of Health and Social Security weather stations for the week beginning 15 February.

Mr. Major: The Department receives information from the Meteorological Office for 63 weather stations in respect of fixed seven-day periods beginning each Monday. The information requested for the week commencing Monday 16 February is as follows:

Nurses

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, what is the average pay (a) of trainee state enrolled nurses, (b) of trainee state registered nurses, and (c) of staff nurses, expressed as a percentage of the national average wage, for each year since 1974.

Mr. Newton: Information in the form requested is not available. The basic salary scales for staff in each of the three grades are given in the following table.

In addition, staff in these grades are eligible for additional payments mainly for working overtime and unsocial hours. Present average earnings (excluding London Weighting) of students/pupils and staff nurses are estimated to be about 12 per cent. and 17 per cent. respectively greater than basic pay.

The hon. Member may wish to refer to part A of the "New Earnings Survey" for information on national average gross earnings, copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report figures for the difference between the funded establishment number of nurses, and the number of qualified nurses employed by the National Heath Service (a) in England and Wales in total, (b) in each regional health authority and (c) in each district health authority, for each year since 1974 for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: I regret that detailed information of this nature is not available centrally. However, I am aware of the results of a survey of a sample of health authorities in England, conducted for the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives and Health Visitors, which showed that at 31 March 1984 and 1985 an average of 2·5 per cent. of wholetime equivalent funded posts for nursing and midwifery staff had remained vacant for over three months.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he will take to reduce the shortfall of National Health Service nurses below funded establishment numbers in (a) Greater London and (b) inner London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The National Health Service Management Board has commissioned a study into the nursing services in London. The steering group is currently processing the information obtained and is aiming to complete its study and report to the management board by late spring. We will then consider what local or national action may be required to remedy any problems revealed. A number of district health authorities are already taking steps such as the provision of free overnight accommodation, subsidised transport and the provision of crèches.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to increase the contribution of private health care organisations to the cost of training nurses.

Mr. Newton: We intend to discuss with repesentatives of the private health care sector the ways in which its contribution to nurse training can be expanded in the light of the Project 2000 proposals of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about his plans to reform training for the nursing profession.

Mr. Newton: On 5 February, we received proposals from the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for the reform of education and training for the nursing profession. These proposals were based on the Council's Project 2000, on which the profession had been widely consulted.

In company with ministerial colleagues in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland we will shortly be consulting all health authorities on the management implications, particularly on manpower and costings, for the National Health Service. At the same time we will be asking the views of other interested organisations, including those representing staff interests. This consultation process will be completed by the end of July; decisions on the way forward will be taken in the light of the views expressed.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the subject of district health authorities' ability to recruit nurses up to the funded establishment number.

Mr. Newton: We have not received any formal representations from district health authorities on their ability to recruit nurses up to their funded establishment (for which there is no central definition, and which will therefore vary between authorities). We have, however, received a number of letters from health authority employees referring to nurse recruitment difficulties in particular localities and specialties.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of qualified state enrolled nurses and of qualified state registered nurses employed by the National Health Service for each year since 1974.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to recruit persons under 18 years of age to work as National Health Service nursing auxiliaries.

Mr. Newton: There is no statutory mimimum age requirement for recruitment to the nursing auxiliary grade. It is therefore for individual health authorities to decide whether or not to recruit persons under 18 years of age to that grade. Such decisions would have regard to the particular location and the specialty involved. However, the training of 16 to 18-year-olds as support workers to nurses is part of the recently announced feasibility study of the scope for greater use of the youth training scheme in the National Health Service. This study is purely exploratory.

Medical Equipment

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what response he intends to give to the report on medical equipment by the Advisory Council for Applied Research and Development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Fowler: The Government's response to the Council's report is being published today. I am placing copies in the Library.

We welcome the report as a valuable contribution to consideration of the British medical equipment industry's long-term prospects. Its recommendations will help to serve the dual interests of patients in the National Health Service and of the industry.

Our response makes clear our existing strong commitment, through measures in a variety of fields, to the support of the industry. This is exemplified by the wide-ranging programme of actions for the National Health Service announced on 15 December 1986 and designed to develop a strong, internationally competitive health-care industry in the United Kingdom. The response also outlines the further measures we shall be taking as a result of the report.

While we accept that the National Health Service has an important part to play as the major purchaser of medical equipment in this country, I should emphasise the scope that exists for British industry to assist the service in the achievement of increased efficiency and value for money, and the provision of improved care. By meeting a higher proportion of the service's needs the industry has an opportunity to build a firmer base for exports. It will have our full support in doing so.

Psychiatric and Mental Handicap Hospitals, Epsom

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the plans for the 3,500 patients and 4,000 staff at the five psychiatric and mental handicap hospitals near Epsom, to whom these plans have so far been made known; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 February 1987, c. 586]: At the ministerial review in December 1985 South West Thames regional health authority was charged with the task of presenting a report on the future of the cluster of mental handicap and illness hospitals in and around Epsom. This report, submitted by the region for ministerial approval on 31 December 1986, is due to be published in the near future. My hon. Friend the Minister for Health, in a letter on 9 February 1987 to Sir Antony Driver, chairman of the South West Thames regional health authority, paid tribute to the work put into the report and welcomed the possibilities it opens up for achieving a better life for a very large number of people.

The management of change from care in these three large mental illness hospitals and two large mental handicap hospitals to care in the community and in small units is acknowledged as the biggest task of its kind in the country.

Whilst staff employed at these institutions have, I understand, been aware of the impending changes over the past 18 months by the normal management machinery of meetings and bulletins, it was not until the steering group report was finalised that it was possible to provide members of staff with specific proposals of how, when and where those changes might take place. Early in January a detailed letter summarising the content of the report was issued to all staff accompanied by a letter from their district chairmen. The chairmen said in their covering letters that although much remains to be done to put the plans into effect, the completion of the strategy will give both management and staff a sense of direction and a clearer idea of the timescale. The regional health authority intends to keep staff involved and consulted as plans progress.

Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report table 3.14.6 of the Government's expenditure plans 1987-88 to 1989-90 giving (a) the number of patients treated in each specialty and category, (b) the rate per 1,000 population of both cases-attendances and patients treated in each specialty and category, (c) the average percentage change per annum for (a) and (b), and (d) the accumulative percentage change for each specialty and category.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 700]: The information requested that is not contained in table 3.14.6 of the Expenditure White Paper is given in the tables:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef and Veal Stocks

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what the volume of intervention stocks of beef and veal in Humberside was at the end of December 1986; where they are stored;and what is the average cost of storage per pound;

(2) what the volume of intervention stocks of beef and veal in Lincolnshire was at the end of December 1986; where they are stored; and what the average cost is of storage per pound.

Mr. Gummer: The following stocks of intervention beef were stored in Humberside and Lincolnshire at the end of December 1986. There are no support buying arrangements for veal.

Storage costs are not recorded separately for individual areas. The average cost per annum of storing beef in the United Kingdom is 14·1p per pound (bone-in) and 6·4p per pound (boneless).

Humberside
Hull 5,503 tonnes

Lincolnshire
Bourne 11 tonnes
Grantham 1,986 tonnes

EC Food Aid

Mrs. Shields asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what the criteria are for deciding who should receive meat and butter under the European Economic Community food aid scheme;

(2) what amount of meat and butter has been distributed in Ryedale under the European Economic Community food aid scheme;

(3) what proportion of meat and butter available for distribution under the European Economic Community food aid scheme has been distributed in rural areas;

(4) what consultations were held with voluntary groups before the distribution of butter and meat in the United Kingdom under the European Economic Community food aid scheme was announced.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Radiation Contamination

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the continued existence of sheep and lambs contaminated by radiation emanating from the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 19 February 1987, c. 1051]: I am pleased to say that in blue-marked sheep, all of which left the restricted areas before 22 December, levels of radioactivity have dropped substantially. Live monitoring of over 50,000 of these show an average of 111 Bq/kg. We therefore propose to lift slaughter and export restrictions on blue-marked sheep with effect from 27 February. The necessary amendments to the Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) (England) (No. 2) Order 1986 and the Export of Sheep (Prohibition) Order 1987 are being made.

As for further developments during 1987, my officials have written to farmers in the Cumbrian restricted area to give them our best assessment of prospects for the new lamb crop. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Library.

Fish Stocks (Seals)

Mr. John Townend asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government have any plans to co-operate with the Norwegian Government to reduce the growing damage done to the fish stocks in the North sea by seals.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1987, c. 395]: I am aware of recent media reports of a sudden influx into the Norwegian sector of the North sea of substantial numbers of harp seals, which has given rise to particular difficulties for Norwegian inshore fishermen.

We are co-operating with Norway and other countries in research on the impact of seals on fisheries within the framework of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea. In addition, the Salmon Advisory Committee, which has recently been set up, is being asked in the early stages of its work to look at influences on salmon stocks, including predators.

Agriculture Council

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers meeting held in Brussels on 9-10 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 288]: My right hon. Friend represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the council of Agriculture Ministers in Brussels on 23-24 February.

Agreement was reached on the arrangements for payment of compensation for temporary suspension of quota in 1987-88 The Commissions original proposal, which would have had the effect of reducing the compensation payment when a producer exceeded his individual reference quota, was not adopted. This means that we succeeded in retaining the full benefit of formula B and article 4A, which was the basis of the compromise agreement reached in December. Compensation for suspension will be made during the first quarter of 1988. This is an improvement on the Commission's original proposal to pay after 1 April 1988.

The Council agreed also that if at the end of 1987-88 the target reduction in milk production for the Community as agreed in the December package has not been achieved the Council will take action to correct the position on the basis of proposals by the Commission.

The Council was unable, after lengthy discussion, to agree new intervention arrangements for butter and skim milk powder. My right hon. Friend continued to support the objective of making intervention more flexible. There was agreement on the principles which should be followed in reaching decisions. The Council will resume discussion on this at next week's meeting.

The Council will also take up next week negotiations on the socio-structural package. The main issues outstanding here remain the arrangements for early retirement (particularly whether this should be made optional and not mandatory on all member states) and the detailed provisions on extensification of production.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

A-Levels

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the Government intend to retain GCE A-levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government are firmly committed to retaining A-levels and to strengthening them where possible. To this end, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have invited Dr. Gordon Higginson, vice-chancellor of the university of Southampton, to chair a small independent committee with the following terms of reference.

"In the light of the Government's commitment to retain general certificate of education advanced level examinations as an essential means for setting standards of excellence, and with the aim of maintaining or improving the present character and rigorous standards of these examinations:

— to recommend the principles that should govern GCE A-level syllabuses and their assessment, so that consistency in the essential content and the assessment of subjects is secured; — to set out a plan of action for the subsequent detailed professional work required to give effect to these recommendations."

The members of the committee are

Miss Sonia Beesley. Journalist and broadcaster.

Sir Roy Harding CBE. Former chief education officer of Buckinghamshire and former vice-chairman of the Secondary Examinations Council.

Mr. Graham Leech. Head of Range high school, Formby.

Mr. Mark Nicolson. Manager, Barclays Bank plc and chairman of the CBI under-35s group.

The committee will start work very shortly and has been asked to report by Easter 1988.

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1962 (a) the value of student grants inside and outside London, (b) the real value when compared with the rise in retail prices (c) the real value when compared with the rise in rents/accommodation costs (d) the real value when compared with the rise in average earnings, (e) the total value of student grants as a percentage of gross domestic product and (f) the real value when compared with the increase in book prices, all indexed using 1962 as a base.

Mr. Walden: The information with the exception of item (e) is as follows. I shall reply to the hon. Member regarding (e) as soon as possible.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mrs. Rumbold: For the year 1985-86, expenditure on hardware was approximately £1,107,000 and on software £336,000. For the year 1986-87, the expected expenditure on hardware will be approximately £1,007,000 and on software £226,000. Expenditure in 1987-88 is expected to be of the same order.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mrs. Rumbold: Contracts in excess of £10,000 were awarded to the following firms. It is not possible for reasons of commercial confidentiality to provide details of the value of each contract.

Under-fives

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to consider the recommendations made by the Select Committee on Education about provision for the under-fives in its report entitled "Achievement in Primary Schools"; what discussions he has arranged on such matters; whether he intends to publish a consultative document; when he expects to make decisions regarding provision for the under-fives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The Government intend to respond to the Select Committee's report within the normal time scale for such responses.

Special Schools

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing for each local education authority in January 1986 the number of pupils at special schools and the percentage of the total school population in such schools; what information is available on the numbers of pupils at special schools with statements under the Education Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The number and percentage of the total school population, excluding independent schools, who are in special schools, for each local education authority in January 1986, are given in the table. The annual return of pupils in special schools does not distinguish pupils who have statements under the Education Act 1981 from other pupils.

Education Act 1981

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing for each local education authority and each year since 1981 the numbers of statements made under the Education Act 1981.

Mr. Dunn: The information in the following table is based on returns submitted annually by local education authorities in England since the Education Act 1981 came fully into force on 1 April 1983. Figures from the returns made in January 1987 are not yet available.

[1] 1983 was a transitional year. The figures in this column include pupils newly assessed under the Education Act 1944 as needing special educational treatment, plus those assessed under the 1981 Education Act as having special educational needs.

Children With Special Needs

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to his Department on budgeted and outturn expenditure by local education authorities on children with special needs in recent years; if he will publish a table showing relevant expenditure by each local education authority in the latest year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Local education authorities make an annual return of expenditure and income to the Department of the Environment and my Department and the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy have access to the figures. CIPFA also collect budgeted figures from local authorities. The latest information is contained in columns 153 to 194 of "Education Statistics 1986-87 Estimates" published by CIPFA, a copy of which is in the Library. The information covers special schools but not special classes in primary and secondary schools. This information is not available centrally.

EC Research Grants

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the grants available from the European Economic Community to fund academic research in the United Kingdom; and what has been the total amount received by the United Kingdom institutions in each year since the inception of these schemes.

Mr. Walden: The European Economic Community promotes research and development through direct action (in community laboratories), indirect, shared-cost action (involving contracts to enterprises and research institutes) and concerted action (involving the co-ordination of national programmes). Where appropriate, United Kingdom academic institutions can apply for indirect action contracts, and in some cases for funds for concerted action. Discussions are in progress concerning the budget for the framework programme for EC research and technological development for 1987-1991.

UK academic institutions may also be eligible for certain other EEC grants for example, from the regional and social funds.

Information about the total amount of EEC research grants awarded to UK academic institutions is not readily available. The Department will be undertaking a special exercise to bring this information together. A substantial amount of work will be involved but the results should be available later this year.

Sheffield (Report)

Mr. Cabom asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will publish the report of Her Majesty's inspectors which was completed in 1985 on Sheffield education.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend received last week the report by Her Majesty's inspectors on educational provision in the metropolitan district of Sheffield, and will publish it. There is as yet no firm publication date. The report is based on Her Majesty's inspectors inspection of maintained schools and educational institutions within the Sheffield local education authority between 1983 and 1985.

Human Embryos

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the Medical Research Council has been notified of or is funding any research project, either current or proposed, into genetic disease which necessitates the use of the living human embryo.

Mr. Walden: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley) on 24 February.

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he intends to take steps to encourage and enable colleges of further education to become involved in the new job training scheme, either as managing agents or as providers of training; and what resources will be available for the financial year 1987-88 to enable colleges to contribute effectively to the scheme.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government recognise that colleges of further education are experienced and expert providers of education and training. They will have an important role in the new job training scheme. A number of colleges have already been involved in the pilot scheme, both as providers and as managing agents. Their prime role will be as providers where they will need to demonstrate the value of their courses to local JTS managing agents, and to negotiate appropriate fees. Where they act as managing agents themselves, they will receive a fixed amount per trainee from the Manpower Services Commission, which is responsible for running and funding the JTS.

AIDS

Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment has been made as to whether blood sampling in school science lessons carries any risk of transmitting the AIDS virus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: There is no evidence that the AIDS virus has been transmitted through the use of blood for teaching purposes in schools or colleges. However, the accidental inoculation of infected blood may result in the transmission of infections such as HIV and hepatitis B. Individuals may not be aware that they are infected, nor may the school or college know; therefore it is my right hon. Friend's view that, in the interests of safety, students or staff should not give blood or cell samples for class use in school or for non-advanced further education work in colleges.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract;

(2) what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Hurd: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Racing Industry

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of recent developments in the racing industry, he will set up an inquiry into bookmaking finances.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. The Office of Fair Trading is looking at certain aspects of the bookmaking industry in response to representations made about the introduction of satellite television in licensed betting offices.

Greater Manchester Police

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to increasing the establishment of the Greater Manchester police.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Greater Manchester police authority is responsible for determining the police establishment of the force, subject to my right hon. Friend's approval. A total of 208 additional police posts have been approved for the force since May 1979, and the existing police establishment is 6,943. The strength of the force on 31 January 1987 was 6,747, an increase of 307 since May 1979, and I understand that the police authority expects the force to reach its full police establishment during the next financial year (1987-88). The force also has a civilianisation programme, which should release police officers for operational duties.

Civil Defence

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to stage a regional civil defence exercise in 1987 along the lines of those held in Home Office regions 6 and 10 in 1986.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the date and time at which Metropolitan police officers arrived in Glasgow in connection with inquiries into the BBC series "The Secret Society" and as to when he decided to seek the co-operation of the Scottish authorities in procuring a search warrant for BBC Glasgow.

Mr. Hurd: Metropolitan police officers arrived in Glasgow in connection with their inquiries into the BBC series "The Secret Society" at 10.15 am on 30 January 1987. They had decided to seek the assistance of Scottish authorities in procuring a search warrant for the BBC offices in Glasgow the previous day. This decision was entirely for them.

Murder Trials

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were tried for murder in each of the years from 1957 to 1986; and how many of these in each year were acquitted.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the table. These figures are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (for 1957-63 in table III, for 1964-75 in table II(a), for 1976-79 in table 5(a) and for 1980-85 in table 2.2A of the supplementary tables). Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Radio

Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about improvements in reception of independent local radio.

Mr. Hurd: I have informed the Independent Broadcasting Authority that the Government will consider sympathetically proposals to improve reception on MF or VHF/FM in particular localities within existing independent radio coverage areas. Approval of power increases or the construction of additional transmitters will be subject to national and international clearance by the Department of Trade and Industry for frequency planning purposes.

Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the Green Paper on radio.

Mr. Hurd: I have today presented to Parliament a Green Paper setting out the choices and opportunities which the Government see for the development of radio services in the United Kingdom. The options discussed in the Green Paper are in tune with the Government's general approach of encouraging the stimulus of competition, the broadening of consumer choice and the lightening of regulatory burdens while at the same time preserving standards. The Green Paper envisages the possible development of new national commercial services and of community stations to take their place side by side with existing independent local radio stations, all with more freedom to meet their audiences' tastes and preferences.

We are not proposing to proceed with the recommendations of the Peacock committee that BBC Radios 1 and 2 should be privatised.

I very much hope that the Green Paper will stimulate a lively debate and that ordinary listeners in all parts of the country will respond to our request for views and comments.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Moore: In 1985-86, expenditure in the Department of Transport on computer hardware was £9·5 million and on software £2·1 million. In 1986-87 the figures are expected to be £9·5 million and £1·6 million. For 1987-88, the projected expenditure is £9·8 million and £1·6 million.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Transport to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Moore: The following firms have been awarded contracts for computer hardware valued at more than £10,000 by the Department of Transport in 1985-86 and 1986-87.

A12-M11 (Hackney Wick)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the consultations and statutory procedures in connection with the new all-purpose dual carriageway on the line of the A12 Hackney Wick to M11 link road; when he expects work to commence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The road's centre-line was fixed last October. New draft orders have been published, and are open to objection until 6 March, for revised layouts at the two intermediate interchanges. Local public exhibitions are being held to explain them. There will almost certainly be a further public inquiry. Further progress will depend on the satisfactory completion of these procedures and those which will follow in respect of land acquisition. Work should start by mid-1990.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will deposit in the Library, tables showing, in cash prices, the outturn figures for transport supplementary grant to each local authority, for every financial year from 1974-75.

Mr. Moore: Tables showing the transport supplementary grant paid to each authority from its introduction in 1975-76 have been deposited in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Nitrogen

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received representations about limiting the over-production of cereals in Britain and the European Economic Community through a policy of taxing or controlling the use of nitrogen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We have received a number of letters suggesting the imposition of some form of tax, levy or quota on the use of nitrogenous fertiliser. However, we have concluded that such matters would be neither efficient nor effective as a means of reducing the production of cereals and other agricultural produce in surplus. They would operate indiscriminately against crops not in surplus, would be costly to administer and could put at risk the viability of many farms.

Hop Industry

Mr. Warren asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received in favour of a European Economic Community funded outgoers scheme for the United Kingdom hop industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The National Farmers Union sent me a copy of its proposals for a European Community-funded outgoers scheme for hop growers. We have received nine letters on behalf of growers in favour of such a scheme.

Our officials have discussed these proposals with the NFU and other interests. We do not think that the proposals would be cost-effective and I understand that the European Commission has rejected them on the grounds of cost.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the supplementary meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers on 23 February.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Sir P. Mills).

Fisheries Council

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the Council of Fisheries Ministers on 23 February.

Mr. Gummer: Largely as a result of the success of the United Kingdom presidency in completing all outstanding fisheries business by the end of the year, the Council meeting arranged for 23 February, like that provisionally arranged for 12 January, was cancelled.

Wool

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is able to announce the guaranteed price for wool for the 1987 clip; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Together with the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, I have received the state of the wool market and prospects for the 1987 clip.

The prices achieved by the British Wool Marketing Board for United Kingdom wool improved during 1986, but since average auction prices did not rise above the guarantee level of 129p/kg Exchequer advances continued to be necessary. The deficit in the board's stabilisation fund has continued to rise and is currently at £19·3 million. Accordingly, my colleagues and I had to consider seriously whether the guarantee should be cut. However, we are mindful of the need to encourage the continued improvement in quality of British wool, a growing proportion of which is exported. Furthermore, current wool prices are significantly higher than a year ago, stock levels are low and the Wool Board has reported markedly improved prospects both in the demand for and in the price of British wool. My colleagues and I have therefore decided to maintain the price guarantee for the 1987 wool clip at 129p/kg.

Plant Health Services

Mr. Hayward asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has decided upon the charges to be made for certain plant health services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: We have now reached decisions about the charges to be made for certain plant health work from 1 April. An order introducing these charges will be laid before Parliament shortly.

We are imposing charges for only part of our plant health work: export certification and import licensing. These are two areas where services are provided at the specific request of individual growers and traders. The majority of our plant health work, including particularly the normal checks on imported material and work on controlling outbreaks of plant pests and diseases, will continue to be carried out at public expense. The import licensing charges relate only to those cases where special arrangements are made to licence imports which would normally be prohibited but which are permitted under certain strict conditions.

The basic charge for calling out an inspector to a grower's or trader's premises for export certification purposes will be £28. This charge will cover a limited amount of inspection work. There will be additional, lower charges for inspection and other services not covered by the basic charge and special rates for services which do not involve a visit. Import licences for commercial and scientific purposes will cost £150 each, with further charges for extra inspections and other services not covered by the initial licence fee. Import licences for private individuals will cost £25.

In setting the new charges we have taken very careful account of the comments we received on the proposals which we circulated last September. We have made a number of changes in our proposals in order to meet the points put to us. In particular, in the light of the representations we received, the charging arrangements will allow seven small consignments to be certified, at the pre-export inspection stage, for the price of one. This should significantly alleviate the situation of the many small exporters who wrote to us expressing their concern about the possible impact of the original proposals. In addition, half price services will be available (up to a full cost value of £500 per year) for firms not registered for VAT or with an export turnover of under £5,000 in the previous financial year. The arrangements will also allow two small fields to be soil sampled for the price of one.

In addition officials are urgently considering with the interests concerned the possibility of introducing alternative statutory controls in place of the existing import licensing arrangements for chrysanthemum cuttings from Malta and the Canaries and for certain ornamental nursery stock from New Zealand. This would mean that the importers concerned would not need import licences. Also we are discussing with the industry interests the possibility of developing a new approval scheme for nurseries. Such a scheme would enable growers whose premises were approved under the scheme to attach a MAFF plant health logo to material which had been passed for export at growing season inspections but which in the event was sold on the home market. It should also be possible to develop from such a scheme arrangements under which approved nurseries would not be subject to such intensive pre-export checks and could thus incur lower export charges.

I believe that the new charges represent a fair and reasonable approach to recouping the cost of these plant health export and import services.

Overfishing

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food pursuant to his answer of 4 December, to the hon. Member for Scarborough (Sir M. Shaw), Official Report, column 788, what arrangements have been made to penalise overfishing under the common fisheries policy in the European Community.

Mr. Gummer: The amendment to article 10(4) of the Control Regulation (EEC) No. 2057/82 agreed at the Fisheries Council on 5 November 1986 empowered the Commission to close a fishery when a total allowable catch has been exhausted even when one or more member states had still to fish their national quotas. In addition, provision was made for the first time to compensate those member states which suffered prejudice as a result of such a closure at the expense of the member state (or states) which had overfished their quotas of that particular stock. A Commission regulation 493/87 dated 18 February 1987 which provides the detailed rules for determining the nature and extent of the compensation has now been adopted with the approval of the Management Committee for Fishery Resources.

I believe that this is a practical and sensible regulation which gives member states and the Commission the flexibility to respond quickly in cases of overfishing and further strengthens the control arrangements of the common fisheries policy.

EC Food Aid

Mrs. Shields asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the criteria are for deciding who should receive meat and butter under the European Economic Community food aid scheme.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 12 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin).

Mrs. Shields asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations were held with voluntary groups before the distribution of butter and meat in the United Kingdom under the European Economic Community food aid scheme was announced.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: I held meetings with charitable organisations on 20 and 22 January before releases started on 23 January.

Mrs. Shields asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what amount of meat and butter has been distributed in Ryedale under the European Economic Community food aid scheme;

(2) what proportion of meat and butter available for distribution under the European Economic Community food aid scheme has been distributed in rural areas.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: I do not have figures of distributions in particular geographical areas.

ENVIRONMENT

National Housing Forum

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the future role of the National Housing Forum, recently formed by local authorities and others.

Mr. John Patten: The Government have noted the creation of the National Housing Forum and are following its evolution with interest. It is too soon yet to form a judgment on the likely value of its contribution to the development of housing policy.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take steps to provide for the payment to objectors at public inquiries of their reasonable costs on the issue of a certificate that the issues in question raise matters of sufficient public interest, and that where the objectors proposals are accepted by the Secretary of State that the objectors costs should automatically be met in full.

Mr. Tracey: The Government's response to the fifth report from the Environment Committee, Session 1985-86, (Cmnd. 53) set out in paragraphs 63-65 our reasons for concluding against any form of public funding for objectors.

Local Authorities (Housing Loans)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of interest paid by local authorities on loans for housing purposes in each of the financial years, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86, respectively.

Mr. Tracey: The total amount of interest on loans debited to the housing revenue accounts of local authorities, as reported by the authorities, was as follows:

Year	£ million
1983-84	2,327
1984-85	2,417
1985-86	2,583

Charitable Housing Associations (Tenants)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimate of the cost of paying transferable discounts to tenants with charitable housing associations in the latest two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Tracey: Transferable discounts cost £3·45 million in 1984-85 and £33·99 million in 1985-86.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Ridley: For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not possible to provide information in the form and level and detail requested by my hon. Friend.

The Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware to a number of firms and the following lists indicate where contract values have exceeded £10,000:

1986-87: Benson, DEC, DMSL, Halcyon, ICL, McDonnell Douglas, Micom Borer, Pericom, Prime, Wordplex.

Housing Renovation Grants

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many outstanding claims for housing renovation grants are now held by each of the local authorities in England; and what is the projected cost of such claims.

Mr. Tracey: The information requested is not available to the Department.

Liverpool (Rates)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the present levels of domestic and business rates in the city of Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The 1986-87 general (business) rate in the city of Liverpool is 308·36p. The domestic rate is 289·86p. Decisions about the local rate for 1987-88 are for the city council. Subject to the enactment of the Local Government Finance Bill in its present form, the joint authorities for police, fire and civil defence and transport must set their precepts within limits requiring cuts on 1986-87 precepts of 3·8 per cent. 5·4 per cent. and 36·5 per cent.

Anti-Litter Campaign

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will report progress on the Government's anti-litter campaign.

Mr. Waldegrave: A report on the progress of UK2000 is given in my answer to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on Wednesday 4 February at column 721.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed within his Department, including regional offices and branches on the latest date for which figures are available; and what were the figures for 1976.

Mr. Ridley: On 1 January 1987, the Department of the Environment (central) employed 6,439 staff. On 1 April 1976, the Department employed 28,559 staff. This figure included approximately 14,000 staff working on transport matters who formed the separate Department of Transport in September 1976.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was spent on home improvement grants last year; and what plans he has to increase the amount available to first-time buyers.

Mr. Tracey: We estimate that local authorities spent £444 million on grants last year. We are encouraging authorities to direct grants where they are most needed and substantial numbers of grants already go to first-time buyers.

Urban Regeneration Grant

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the latest position regarding urban regeneration grant.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Lawler) on 26 January at column 49.

Land

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each six-month period since 1 January 1982 and for the latest available period (a) how much underused public land was on the land registers, (b) how much land was added to the registers, (c) how much land was removed from the registers, divided between the amounts sold, the amounts brought back into use and the amounts removed in other ways, (d) how many notices he issued under section 99 of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 and how much land was involved and (e) how many directions he issued under section 98 of the 1980 Act and how much land was involved.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

Local Authority Mortgages

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to amend the regulations governing the issuing of local authority mortgages under the right-to-buy legislation in order to allow discretion to an authority to take a previous history of rent arrears into account before granting a mortgage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: No. Such a discretion would be open to abuse. A landlord may already, however, refuse to complete a sale under the right to buy to a tenant who has fallen a month behind with the rent and is still in arrears.

Football Supporters

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make a statement on the possibility of the introduction of a national membership card scheme for football supporters, following his meeting with the Football League and the Football Association on 23 February.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will report on the meeting of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) with representatives of the Football League to discuss membership cards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Together with my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office I discussed further initiatives to improve crowd control at football matches with representatives of the Football League, the Football Association and police authorities on 23 February. These discussions produced the following new measures:

The League will ask all clubs to submit detailed local plans for dealing with the management and control of their home and away supporters. These plans will be produced by the end of the current season and will be drawn up in consultation with the local police, local British Transport Police, the local authority, and other relevant organisations such as local coach operators and recognised supporters clubs.

The League, with advice and support from the Association of Chief Police Officers, will ask all clubs to develop and introduce membership schemes for specific areas of their grounds by the beginning of the 1987-88 season. The schemes will cover at least 50 per cent. of each ground's capacity as determined by the conditions of the ground's safety certificate.

A team of representatives comprising the League, the Football Trust and independent advisors will be available to help and assist those clubs in need of guidance.

The Football Association will automatically take account of club's local plans in any disciplinary hearing in the event of crowd disorder or violence.

The League, Football Association and the clubs, with advice from the local police, will consider the need for all ticket arrangements at particular matches.

The league will commission a study by independent consultants to report on the scope, costs and benefits/disadvantages of a reciprocal membership scheme embracing all 92 League clubs. The Association of Chief Police Officers has agreed to assist with and advise on this study.

As agreed, Football Trust grants will be made available to division three and four clubs for the installation of closed circuit television depending on the particular needs of individual clubs.

The League and the Football Association will support and promote the development of family enclosures and other initiatives designed to establish closer links between clubs and their communities.

This package reflects the determination of the Government, the police and the football authorities to work in partnership to tackle hooliganism in the interests of both public safety and the future wellbeing of the game.

Car Boot Sales

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to regulate car boot sales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Class IV.2 of the first schedule to the General Development Order 1977 gives permitted development rights for the use of land for markets for up to 14 days in total in any calendar year. Car boot sales benefit from this right. The local planning authority may make a direction under article 4 of the GDO withdrawing permitted development rights in any case in which it considers it expedient to do so. Specific planning permission would be required for development of the types specified in the direction and there may be a liability to pay compensation where subsequently planning permission is refused for such development. Directions which are to remain in force for more than six months require my right hon. Friend's confirmation.

Local Authorities (Political Control)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is available to him on the party political control of local authorities.

Dr. Boyson: That available in publications such as the "Municipal Year Book" and the statistical digests of local authority election results published by Plymouth polytechnic, together with that gathered by the Department from the press and in the course of its normal dealings with local authorities. In addition, research on the political organisation of local authorities was carried out for the Widdicombe inquiry into the conduct of local authority business (see Cmnd. 9798, research volume 1).

Housing Defects Act

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many owner-occupiers in the south-west region live in houses designated under the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 24 February 1987]: From local authorities' HIP returns and other reports, about 6,700 of these dwellings were in private ownership in the south-west region in April 1986.

Urban Development Programme

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on the urban development programme for all years since 1978-79, inclusive, aggregated for the standard United Kingdom regions, giving the information in absolute, indexed, and per capita forms.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 24 February 1987]: The information requested for the urban programme is as follows:

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	[1]1985-86	[1]1986-87	Population

Indexed prices relate to 1986-87. All per capita figures are calculated on the basis of the population of the whole region in 1981. These should be treated with caution since Urban Programme funding is highly concentrated within regions on the districts of greatest need.

Carsington Reservoir

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations from any organisation or body requesting that there should be a public enquiry into the future of Carsington reservoir following the publication of the Coson report.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 23 February 1987]: Following publication of the Coson report, I received a letter from Kirk Ireton parish council urging that a public inquiry be held to reconsider the Carsington scheme. There have been no other representations since then. It is for Severn-Trent water authority to decide, in the light of Mr. Coson's report, what action to take following the failure of the embankment. I understand that the authority will this year make application to the local planning authority, in respect of matters reserved for its decision, for approval of a new embankment to a revised design.

DEFENCE

Helicopters (Search and Rescue)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce arrangements, and the date of commencement, for the stationing of a military helicopter on the west coast of Scotland to be available for search and rescue work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport on 18 February 1987 at columns 627-28.

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland, 18 February, Official Report, column 687, he will state the time when (a) the alarm signal from the Guide Onward was initially received at Pentland Station, (b) information regarding the incident aboard the vessel was first logged at Edinburgh rescue co-ordination centre and (c) the rescue co-ordination centre called out the Sea King helicopter from RAF Lossiemouth.

Mr. Freeman: A distress message from the fishing vessel Guide Onward was received by the Pentland maritime rescue sub-centre at 10.13 pm on 14 February 1987. Information about the incident was then passed to the rescue co-ordination centre at Edinburgh at 10.17 pm, following which the rescue co-ordination centre called out a Sea King helicopter from RAF Lossiemouth at 10.19 pm.

Israel (Arms Embargo)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the United Kingdom continues to observe the arms embargo on Israel introduced after the invasion of Lebanon in 1982; and if it affects the training of members of the Israeli armed forces by Britain and invitations to Israel to visit British military exhibitions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We remain disappointed by the residual Israeli presence on Lebanese territory and continue to maintain restrictions on arms sales to Israel. This policy is kept under review. Proposals for military training and visits of members of the Israeli defence force are in each case considered carefully on their merits.

Western European Union

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the role to be played by Defence Ministers within the Western European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The Western European Union provides a forum for Foreign and Defence Ministers of the seven member states to meet jointly to discuss issues related to European security. Defence and Foreign Ministers play full and complementary parts in these discussions.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Defence which tasks are assigned to the Standing Armaments Committee of the Western European Union and the Independent European Programme Group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following the revitalisation of both the Western European Union and the Independent European Programme Group towards the end of 1984, the Standing Armaments Committee has helped to provide political impetus towards increased European armaments co-operation, assisting the IEPG in translating this into practical achievement; it also advises the WEU Council on these matters. The IEPG is directly responsible for the harmonisation of operational requirements and research goals, and for promoting the establishment of collaborative projects to meet these needs.

The effectiveness of these arrangements will be reviewed from time to time.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Defence what stage has been reached in the British-German-Italian programme for production of a joint armoured howitzer; if he envisages strengthening the programme in the framework of armaments co-operation in the Western European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Kingston-upon-Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 16 February at column 489. I see no reason to raise the matter in the WEU.

Exercise Brave Defender

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to repeat the national military home defence exercise, Brave Defender, last practised in 1985, during the current year.

Mr. Stanley: None.

ENERGY

Gas Supply (Report)

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has received the Director General of Gas Supply's annual report, pursuant to section 39(3) of the Gas Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Director General of Gas Supply Mr. James McKinnon, has today published his annual report and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Islington South and Finsbury on 21 January, Official Report, column 569, mentioning formal registers of accidents, incidents and untoward occurrences at licensed nuclear installations, what is the name of such registers; what are the instructions governing whether an entry is made in such a register; for what period such registers are retained in use; and what relevant copies or extracts are held either by his Department or by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1987, c. 577]: The register of incidents is called the register of site incidents. The incidents which are recorded are defined by a directive by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive under the nuclear site licence. The registers are kept on site by the licensees for 30 years or less if directed by the HSE. Copies or extracts are not held by my Department or HMNII.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Democracy

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 18 February, Official Report, column 905, in which countries, other than Nicaragua, it is an objective of Her Majesty's Government to establish a full pluralist democracy.

Mr. Eggar: It is an objective of this Government's foreign policy to uphold the right of self-determination, the rule of international law and respect for human rights, in accordance with the United Nations Charter and related international instruments. This applies to our relations with all countries, including Nicaragua. I refer the hon. Member to my speech to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva on 10 February 1987, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Industrial Support

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the per capita expenditure on industrial support for Wales for the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Estimated outturn expenditure by my Department on regional development grants and regional selective assistance in 1986-87 is £122 million; per capita expenditure will therefore be approximately £43.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many new jobs have been created, other than those on Government-funded job creation schemes, in each year since 1979 in each parliamentary constituency in Wales;

(2) how many jobs have been lost in each year since 1979 in each parliamentary constituency in Wales;

(3) how many new job vacancies have been filled in each year since 1979 in each parliamentary constituency in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is not available in the form requested.

MSC (Schemes)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are currently taking part in each of the Manpower Services Commission's schemes in each parliamentary constituency in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information is not available for individual constituencies. For adult training and the voluntary projects programme information is available only for participants over a period and not at a particular time. The latest available information is as follows:

Manpower Services Commission Area	Youth Training Scheme numbers in training at 31 January 1987	Adult Training entrants 1 April 1986 to 31 January 1987
Gwent	3,725	3,488
Mid and South Glamorgan	6,679	3,173
West Glamorgan and Dyfed	5,461	3,661
Gwynedd, Clwyd and Powys	5,542	4,302

Enterprise allowance scheme: 5,016 participants at 17 February 1987.

New job training scheme (Neath and Port Talbot pilot): 155 participants at 3 February 1987.

Voluntary projects programme: 6,601 participants between 1 April 1986 and 31 December 1986.

Information for the last three schemes is available only for the whole of Wales.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales, of those farmers who have left the dairy industry in Wales, in each county, in each year since the implementation of the milk quota scheme, what proportion formerly produced on average (a) under 240,000 litres per annum and (b) 240,000 litres per annum or more.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available.

Food (Radiation Levels)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what changes have been made in contingency plans for the testing of radiation levels in foodstuffs, in Wales, in the event of a nuclear accident following the experience of the Chernobyl disaster.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on 18 December 1986, at columns 612-13 by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Land

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each six-month period since 1 January 1982 and for the latest available period (a) how much underused public land was on the land registers, (b) how much land was added to the registers, (c) how much land was removed from the registers, divided between the amounts sold, the amounts brought back into use and the amounts removed in other ways, (d) how many notices he issued under section 99 of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 and how much land was involved and (e) how many directions he issued under section 98 of the 1980 act and how much land was involved.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The land register legislation was brought into operation in Wales on a trial basis in six districts in March 1983. It was extended to the remaining 31 districts in October 1984 and 16 land registers have now been published. Details of registrations and changes registered to date are set out in the following table:

Cancer Screening

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for developing cancer screening for women; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I have recently received the report of the United Kingdom expert working group on breast cancer screening and I should like to record our thanks to its chairman, Professor Sir Patrick Forrest and to his committee for their work.

In Wales, about 750 women die each year from breast cancer and the report shows there is potential to save a substantial number or these lives. The development of this major new service, however, can proceed only if there is widespread support. For this reason, the Department will shortly be issuing a circular to district health authorities and to the professions setting out how we propose to ensure that the service is planned in a way that secures its successful introduction.

We shall be establishing an expert group, as envisaged in the report, to advise on implementation and on future development. We propose also that there should be a national training and demonstration centre to provide a sound basis for the development of the service throughout Wales and that this should be established during the course of 1987-88. One of the first tasks of the expert group will be to advise on the location and work of this centre. The group will also advise on the location of the network of assessment centres which will be developed in fulfilment of our objective that every part of Wales should be covered by the service by 1989-90.

Turning to cervical cancer screening, in the light of the recommendations of the committee on gynaecological cytology we shall be asking health authorities to ensure that call and recall begins at age 20. All DHAs will have appointed officers to be responsible for their screening programmes and all authorities should have computerised call and recall facilities by the end of 1987.

In order to strengthen the screening programme, in June 1986 I asked the health education advisory committee for Wales to consider what health education measures were needed. I have recently received its most helpful report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. We have made available the funds needed to make possible the supply of materials developed by the committee. I intend to seek advice on health education support for breast cancer screening from the Welsh Health Promotion Authority, the creation of which my right hon. Friend announced on 16 January.

We have already provided additional recurring resources of £400,000 per annum to enable district health authorities to strengthen the screening service. Subject to parliamentary approval, we shall be providing a further £1·05 million per annum from the next financial year to continue this process and to lay the foundations for the breast cancer screening service. These initiatives are a further important demonstration of this Government's commitment to the promotion of women's health in the Principality.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service (Trainees)

Mr. Evennett asked the Attorney-General whether the Crown Prosecution Service provides articles or pupillage for (a) trainee solicitors and (b) pupil barristers; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: No. Solicitors within the Crown Prosecution Service are unable to offer the range of experience necessary for recognition by the Law Society for the purpose mentioned. Similarly, the Bar Council requires that pupillage be served with a barrister in private practice (as opposed to an employer lawyer). The Crown Prosecution Service has, however, developed its own traning programmes to ensure that its lawyers receive the necessary formal and informal training suitable for the work they undertake.

State Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General if, pursuant to the answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 619, by the Solicitor-General for Scotland, he has any plans to seek to amend section 9 of the Official Secrets Act 1911 to provide for warrants under that section to be issued by sheriffs in Scotland.

The Solicitor-General: This would not fall within the Attorney-General's ministerial responsibility.

PRIME MINISTER

Homeless Children

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about co-ordination between the Department of Health and Social Security and the Home Office of Her Majesty's Government's policy on provision for homeless children.

The Prime Minister: Local authority social service departments have a range of statutory provisions available to them to help meet the needs of homeless children. Department of Health and Social Security and Home Office officials meet from time to time to discuss matters of common concern.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Casualties

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will list the total number of fatal and non-fatal casualties for soldiers, members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and for civilians, in Northern Ireland for each year since 1969.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Housing Executive

Mr. Dicks asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay the latest accounts of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive before Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The accounts of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive for 1985-86 together with the reports of the local government auditor and of the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon were laid today (Comnd. 80). The matters raised have been discussed between the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland and the Housing Executive and the agreed follow-up action will be monitored. On this occasion the report is generally encouraging but it also identifies some weaknesses in systems in the internal control of the Executive's nursery, in housing benefit administration and financial procedures concerned with microfilm records.

I have arranged for copies of a statement by the Housing Executive in response to the local government auditor's report to be placed in the Library.

Rape

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many men have been prosecuted for rape in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland; how many men have been convicted in each of these years; of these, how many have not been sent to prison; how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of less than three years, between three and five years, between five and 10 years, and over 10 years, respectively; and what orders were made in respect of those convicted but not sent to prison.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: The information requested is as follows:—

SCOTLAND

Public Sector Housing

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many public sector dwellings in Scotland are (a) of traditional build, and (b) of non-traditional build.

Mr. Ancram: Consistent information is not available regarding the number of non-traditional dwellings across the public sector as a whole. Figures provided by local authorities indicate that in 1985 approximately 157,000 of the 858,000 local authority dwellings were of non-traditional build.

Housing Revenue Account (Income and Expenditure)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a detailed breakdown of (a) housing revenue account income and (b) housing revenue account expenditure for (1) the Scottish Special Housing Association and (2) the New Town Development Corporations for the years 1978-79 to 1985-86, inclusive, expressing this in (x) cash terms and (y) 1985-86 out-turn prices.

Mr. Ancram: The information is set out in the tables, in cash terms and at 1985-86 constant prices:

Housing (Repairs and Modernisation)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the average amount per dwelling spent on repairs and modernisation by (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association and (c) the New Town Development Corporations for each of the years 1978-79 to 1985-86, expressed in (i) cash terms and (ii) 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram: This question has been interpreted as seeking information on current expenditure on repairs and maintenance and capital expenditure on modernisation. The information is set out in the tables, in cash terms and at 1985-86 constant prices.

2. The figures for local authorities include expenditure on capital repairs which cannot be separately identified.

Rented Housing

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how many dwellings are (a) privately rented other than from a housing association and (b) rented from a housing association; and if he will provide this information for each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows. The figures in the first three columns are based on the 1981 census and are consistent with figures published by the Department of the Environment. The figures in the fourth column are based on information collected by the Scottish Development Department.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Rifkind: The expenditure of my Departments in 1985-86 and 1986-87 and an estimate of their expenditure in 1987-88 is set out in the table. Expenditure on turnkey systems has been included in the hardware figures.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Aberdeen (Leisure Centre)

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now withdraw his objections to the use of the common good fund of the Aberdeen city district council for use in the funding of a leisure centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: At no time has my right hon. and learned Friend sought to intervene in Aberdeen district council's use of the common good fund itself. He is concerned at this stage not with whether a particular item of expenditure is a legitimate use of the fund, which is a matter for the council to decide, but rather with ensuring that the total of the council's capital spending, however financed, does not exceed the limits he has laid down. The Secretary of State remains of the view that a local authority requires his consent before incurring any liability to meet capital expenses, otherwise than out of current revenue, even although such capital expenses are being met out of the common good fund.

Spittal Quarry, Caithness

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has had from the Nature Conservancy Council on the likelihood of finding further fossils on the site of special scientific interest at Spittal quarry, Caithness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The Spittal quarry area of special scientific interest is still being worked as a quarry, and the NCC expects that more fossils will be found.

Prison Staff

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list the levels of alcoholism and suicide rates for prison staff at each of the prisons in Scotland for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Companies (Headquarters Relocation)

1. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the numbers of companies who have moved their headquarters from Scotland to England in the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Such information is not centrally collected, although I am aware of certain individual cases.

Industrial Production

19. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on industrial production trends in the west midlands.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I am encouraged that total industry production in the west midlands is estimated to have grown strongly in real terms between 1984 and 1985, the most recent year for which data are available.

66. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the latest figure for industrial production in the United Kingdom using 1979 as a base of 100.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1986 Q4 output of the production industries (comprising manufacturing and the energy and water supply industries) reached a level of 102·2, based on 1979 equal to 100.

Saudi Arabia (Visit)

20. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Channon: I visited Saudi Arabia between 16 and 19 January for talks with Ministers and senior officials on a wide range of trade topics. We agreed that United Kingdom-Saudi relations were excellent and owed much to recent exchange visits culminating in the very successful tour last November by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.

In 1986 United Kingdom exports to Saudi Arabia, our largest market outside western Europe and North America, were £1,507 million, an all-time record. I believe that despite reduced oil revenues Saudi Arabia continues to offer excellent opportunities for British exporters.

Manufacturing Investment

21. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest available figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in the west midlands since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in the west midlands between 1979 and 1984 fell by 19 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy — manufacturing investment in the west midlands over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 35 per cent. in real terms.

22. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in the east midlands since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in the east midlands between 1979 and 1984 fell by 21 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy—manufacturing investment in the east midlands over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 18 per cent. in real terms.

28. Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in Scotland since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in Scotland between 1979 and 1984 fell by 28 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy — manufacturing investment in Scotland over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 22 per cent. in real terms.

68. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in Yorkshire and Humberside since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in Yorkshire and Humberside between 1979 and 1984 fell by 34 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy — manufacturing investment in Yorkshire and Humberside over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983 to 1984, grew by 16 per cent. in real terms.

Regional Aid

23. Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of his Department's expenditure on regional aid to industry in the financial year 1985-86 benefited industry in Wales.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Expenditure on regional aid to industry in Wales is almost entirely undertaken by the Welsh Office. In 1985-86 less than 1 per cent. of my Department's expenditure on regional development grants and regional selective assistance was paid to industry in Wales. Taking account of Welsh Office expenditure, however, the amount spent in Wales in 1985-86 under these headings represented some 22 per cent. of the total for Great Britain.

40. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total expenditure of his Department on regional aid to industry and selective aid to industry under section 8 of the Industry Act in the financial year 1985-86; and what were the corresponding figures for 1979-80.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Expenditure by the Department of Trade and Industry on regional aid to industry in 1985-86 was £225·3 million. This figure includes regional development grants (RDGs) and project and training grants under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act 1982. Expenditure on selective aid to industry under section 8 of the Industrial Development Act in 1985-86 was £66·6 million. The corresponding figures for 1979-80 were £391·4 million for regional aid and £75·6 million for section 8. However, it should be noted that the 1979-80 figures for regional aid include expenditure on RDGs in Scotland and Wales, responsibility for which was transferred from the DTI to the Scottish and Welsh Offices in November 1984. Expenditure on regional aid in England alone in 1979-80 was £255·2 million and in 1985-86 is estimated at £221 million.

41. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs have been created or preserved through regional aid in the northern region since 1983.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Approximately 9,800 jobs have been created in the Northern region — consisting of the counties of Cumbria, Cleveland, Durham, Northumberland and the county area of Tyne and Wear —in projects for which payments of new-style regional development grants have been made from the beginning of the scheme in November 1984 to the end of 1986; 28,600 jobs were expected to be created and 14,800 jobs preserved as a result of offers of regional selective assistance in the calendar years 1983 to 1986 inclusive. No estimate can be made of the effect of employment of payments of old-style regional development grants in this period.

72. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the change in real terms in expenditure on regional industrial assistance since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Figures for calendar years ae not readily available, but between the financial years 1979-80 and 1985-86 expenditure in real terms on regional industrial assistance fell by £262·4 million in 1985-86 prices.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the changes which have been made in the regulations regarding his Department's expenditure on regional aid to industry since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish information on central Government expenditure on the regional grant development, distinguishing between different levels of assistance and aggregating the information to the standard United Kingdom regions, for all years since 1978-79 inclusive.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: The question has been interpreted to refer to payments of regional development grants broken down by assisted area status and by standard economic region. Payments of old-style RDGs were as follows:

ECGD

24. Sir Michael Shaw asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: No changes are envisaged in the basic statutory functions of ECGD or in its financial objectives.

EC (Internal Market)

25. Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with recent progress towards removing barriers within the internal market of the European Community.

Mr. Alan Clark: Excellent results were achieved during the recent United Kingdom presidency, with agreement on 48 separate individual internal market measures. We hope that this rate of progress will be maintained under subsequent presidencies.

BT Share Offer (Vouchers)

26. Sir Kenneth Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the vouchers made available for subscribers to shares in British Telecom and to be used for reduction by that amount of subscribers' telephone accounts, were not used before the deadline date; and how much money was saved by Her Majesty's Government as a result.

Mr. Pattie: Five per cent. of the vouchers which have passed the expiry dates of 25 April 1986 and 23 October 1986 were not used. This has resulted in a saving to Her Majesty's Government of around £1 million in voucher repayments and associated administrative costs.

Consumer Protection

27. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the sums expended by Government and local authorities, respectively, in the enforcement of consumer protection legislation for each year since 1983.

Mr. Howard: The expenditure by Government and local authorities in England, Wales and Scotland on the enforcement of consumer protection legislation was £60·9 million in the financial year 1983-84; £65·6 million in 1984-85; and is estimated at £72·6 million for 1985-86.

It is not possible accurately to divide the funding for consumer protection between central and local government because the allocation of the rate support grant to services is for the local authorities to decide, but on aggregate about 46·5 per cent. of local authorities' relevant expenditure is met by Exchequer grant.

Overseas Contracts

29. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any evidence on the benefits for the United Kingdom economy of Her Majesty's Government's aid for large overseas contracts won by British companies.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department and bodies such as NEDO — as well as private companies — have commisioned reports on the economic benefits of aid and trade provision supported projects.

Post Office (Chairman)

30. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the Post Office; and what topics were discussed.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. Friend last met the chairman of the Post Office on 24 September last year to discuss the Post Office's financing needs in the context of the public expenditure survey.

Caterpillar Tractor Company

31. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's involvement in the proposed closure of Caterpillar's Tractor Company at Tannockville, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My Department was informed of Caterpillar's decision on 13 January 1987. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I met senior Caterpillar executives on 20 January to urge the company to reconsider its decision. Subsequently, officials of DTI and the Scottish Office met Caterpillar senior management for further clarification.

While I regret Caterpillar's decision, and the manner in which it was taken, following hard upon an earlier decision to modernise the Uddingston plant, it is ultimately a commercial issue for the company to resolve. However, I hope that as a result of the study of the site and factory recently put in hand by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Lang), some manufacturing and employment may be maintained.

37. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed closure of the Caterpillar factory in Scotland on component manufacturers in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that Caterpillar is working closely with its United Kingdom suppliers to help them maintain a continuing relationship through supply to other Caterpillar plants, notably to Grenoble to which production of the D6 tractor dozer is being transferred.

43. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will seek an urgent meeting with the American owners of the Caterpillar factory at Uddingston to discuss its future.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have already met senior Caterpillar executives. No further meeting involving Ministers is planned at present, but officials are in touch with the company to make a study of the site and factory at Uddingston to see whether some manufacture and employment can be maintained.

49. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department was informed about the proposed closure of the Caterpillar factory in Scotland before it was publicly announced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My Department was informed of Caterpillar's decision on 13 January 1987, the day before the announcement.

While I regret Caterpillar's decision and the manner in which it was taken, following hard upon an announcement in September 1986 that the Glasgow plant was to be modernised, it is ultimately a commercial issue for the company to resolve. However, I hope that as a result of the study of the site and factory at Uddingston recently put in hand by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, Scottish Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Lang), some manufacturing and employment may be maintained.

50. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place between his Department and the Caterpillar company about the proposed closure of its factory in Scotland.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I met senior Caterpillar executives on 20 January to urge them to reconsider their decision. Officials of DTI and the Scottish Office subsequently met Caterpillar senior management on 2 February for further clarification.

Airbus

32. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about Government support for the airbus project.

Mr. Channon: My Department has received representations about the provision of Government support for the airbus A330/A340 project from a number of hon. Members, from trade union representatives and from others with an interest in these projects, including Airbus Industrie and British Aerospace.

38. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to make a statement on launch aid for the A340 Airbus.

Mr. Pattie: Her Majesty's Government are aiming to reach a decision on British Aerospace's application for launch aid in respect of its participation in the airbus A330 and A340 programme as soon as circumstances allow, in parallel with the decision-making process of the French and German Governments and taking account of the progress of Airbus Industrie and its partners towards launching the programme. The House will be informed as soon as possible thereafter.

Japan (Trade Deficit)

33. Mr. John Townend asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the estimated United Kingdom deficit in trade with Japan for the calendar year 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1986 United Kingdom trade with Japan on an overseas trade statistics basis was estimated to be in deficit by £3·7 billion.

Leyland Trucks

34. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the long-term future of Leyland Trucks Limited.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A number of representations have been received. I myself met a delegation led by my hon. Friend on 12 February. These representations were taken into account in reaching the decisions announced by my right hon. Friend in his statement on 19 February.

44. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the future of Leyland Trucks.

61. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the future of Leyland Trucks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I have nothing to add to my right hon. Friend's statement on 19 February at column 1059-73.

69. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the trade unions concerning the recently announced redundancies at Rover.

Mr. Channon: I met a delegation including trade union representatives from Leyland Trucks yesterday, led by my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins).

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards further financial assistance to Leyland Trucks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government have, of course, already announced their intention to provide up to £750 million to write off the accumulated debts from Leyland Bus and Leyland Trucks left in the Rover Group and the restructuring costs resulting from their sale. The Government have notified the European Commission of this intention and the normal procedures are in train. The Rover Group businesses involved in the new joint venture with DAF announced on 19 February by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry are expected to be:

Leyland Trucks
Leyland Parts
Freight Rover
Freight Rover Parts
Butec
Leyland Albion Tanzania Limited
Leyland Albion (East Africa) Limited
Leyland Motors Zambia Limited
Leyland Motor Corporation (East Africa) Limited
Leyland Motor Corporation Malawi Limited
Industrie Nationale Zairoise des Automobiles Leyland
Leyland Motors (Ghana) Limited
Leyland Albion (Uganda) Limited
Leyland Zimbabwe Limited
ABM Equipment (Pty) Limited
Leyland Kenya Limited
Land Rover Tanzania Limited

As with other disposals, including those in which RG retains a minority shareholding, the Government will, following the completion of the merger with DAF of these businesses, accept no further responsibility for the obligations of these businesses or the joint venture.

Northern Regional Development Agency

35. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had on the establishment of a northern regional development agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I have had no discussions on the establishment of such an agency. I have, however, followed carefully the progress made by the new Northern Development Company, with which I have had several discussions, including its presentation to central Government this month of its first business plan. That plan is currently under consideration.

Manufacturing Industry

36. Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest productivity figures of British manufacturing industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1986, Q4 productivity (output per head) in manufacturing industry reached a level of 136, based on 1980 equal to 100. Since 1979, productivity in the United Kingdom has grown at an annual average rate of more than 3½ per cent., the fastest rate of growth of all major industrialised countries.

70. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest available figure for the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in the north-west since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: When the world recession hit a sector suffering from poor competitiveness—the result of years of high inflation, low productivity growth and poor rates of return on investment—a sharp fall in manufacturing investment in the regions occurred up to 1983. In real terms, manufacturing investment in the North West between 1979 and 1984 fell by 31 per cent. Industry is now more competitive and better adapted to the demands of a modern economy — manufacturing investment in the North West over the most recent year for which there is data, 1983-84, grew by 12 per cent. in real terms.

Power Engineering Industry

39. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards support for the power engineering industry.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My Department recognises that the power engineering sector needs further work and we therefore consider every possible support for their efforts in securing export orders and in developing their manufacturing facilities to enable them to compete more effectively. Since 1980 the sector has benefited from more than £50 million provided by the Industry Acts and has received more than £160 million from the aid and trade provision (securing more than £750 million export orders) and nearly £500 million from the bilateral aid programme.

Financial Services

42. Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received in the last month concerning regulation in the financial services sector.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend received the Securities and Investments Board's request for transfer of powers on 10 February. As required by the Financial Services Act, my right hon. Friend has sent to the Director General of Fair Trading a copy of the material submitted by the SIB. My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of letters concerning the SIB's proposals, which will be fully considered. If after considering the Director General's report and any other points put to him he is satisfied that the requirements of the Act have been met, my right hon. Friend will lay the necessary order as soon as possible.

55. Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received recent representations on the cost of authorisation under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Howard: About 50 right hon. and hon. Members have written to me about particular aspects of the cost of authorisation under the Financial Services Act. There have been a number of letters on the same topic from members of the public.

Rolls-Royce

45. Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the future of Rolls-Royce.

Mr. Pattie: Subject to market conditions, the Government intend to return Rolls-Royce to the private sector in April or May 1987.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met senior management of Rolls-Royce to discuss the proposed privatisation of the company.

Mr. Pattie: I am in frequent touch with the senior management of Rolls-Royce as the preparations for privatisation proceed.

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of the years since 1971 in which loans were made to Rolls-Royce Limited, the years in which the loans were repaid and the interest received by the Government in the relevant years.

Mr. Pattie [pursuant to his answer, 24 February 1987]: Following is the information:

Fiscal year	Loan advanced £ million	Repaid £ million	Interest £ million
1973-74	[1]62·3	27	—
1974-75	6·0		5·4
1975-76	30·0		5·9
1976-77	20·0		9·3
1977-78	3·0		11·1
1978-79	3·0	25·3	10·1
1979-80		6·0	8·3
1981-82		26·0	2·9

[1] Includes a £27 million non-interest bearing loan advanced on 23 July 1973 and repaid in full on 23 October 1973 and an additional £10 million originally paid by Her Majesty's Government in 1973-74 as part of a loan to the Company but later converted to equity.

United Kingdom-Soviet Trade

46. Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prospects for United Kingdom-Soviet trade.

Mr. Alan Clark: Despite the fall in oil prices in 1986 which will tend to restrict the Soviet ability to import from the West, there are good prospects for growth in United Kingdom-Soviet trade. There are many opportunities which are currently being pursued by United Kingdom exporters to provide technology and equipment to meet the Soviet priority of modernising its industry. The reform of the Soviet foreign trade structure is designed to develop Soviet exports of manufactured goods. Companies which are prepared to make a long-term commitment to the market and develop a close trading and co-operative relationship with Soviet organisations can expect to prosper there. The United Kingdom-USSR credit agreement concluded in January 1987 is designed to ensure that United Kingdom credit terms will be fully competitive and will, I believe, be of great help to British exporters.

Self-regulatory Organisations

47. Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made in the establishment of self-regulatory organisations under the Financial Services Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: In its application to become a designated agency, the Securities and Investments Board has indicated that, if the power to recognise self-regulating organisations were to be transferred to it, it would expect to receive applications for recognition as a self-regulating organisation from The Securities Association, the Financial Intermediaries, Managers and Brokers Regulatory Association, the Association of Futures Brokers and Dealers Limited, the Investment Management Regulatory Organisation, and the Life Assurance and Unit Trust Regulatory Organisation. Those bodies are currently preparing their applications for recognition.

Goods and Services

48. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will discuss with his European Economic Community counterparts in consultation with the European Economic Community Commission's trade departments additional measures to augment trade in goods and services between the United Kingdom and other member states.

Mr. Alan Clark: All Member States are committed to the objective of completing the Community's internal market by 1992. The 1987 presidency action programme on the internal market lists over 130 individual measures for discussion by the Council this year with a view to their agreement. Copies of the programme are available in the Library of the House.

Lloyds Act 1982

51. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to monitor the operation of the Lloyds Act 1982.

Mr. Pattie: The operation of the Lloyd's Act 1982 was considered by the committee of inquiry into regulatory matters at Lloyd's, whose report was published on 22 January 1982 (Cm 59). I have had a preliminary discussion with the chairman of Lloyd's about the implementation of the recommendations and await a detailed timetable. Lloyd's has already announced acceptance of 13 recommendations affecting its constitution. I shall follow carefully progress in this matter and the future of investment and policyholder protection at Lloyd's.

Manufacturing and Service Industries

52. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his assessment of the relative benefits to the United Kingdom economy of manufacturing as against service industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Manufacturing and services are both essential parts of the economy. They both generate output, provide employment, and earn foreign currency. They are, moreover, mutually dependent.

In terms of their contribution to the balance of payments, trade in manufactured goods is approximately two and a half times as great as trade in services. The figures for 1985 (the latest available) are given in the table:

£ billion

	Exports[1]	Imports[1]
Manufactured goods	52·3	55·3
Services	24·3	18·4

[1] SITC basis.

Civil Protection

53. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he is taking to encourage industry to create an effective civil protection capability.

Mr. Pattie: A study is in progress of the essential civil and military requirements for industrial products in time of crisis and war and industry's ability to meet them.

60. Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies have been completed on the role of industry in civil protection planning; and when these will be published.

Mr. Pattie: Progress has been made with the study, but I am not yet able to say when it will be complete. The study will remain confidential.

British Sugar Corporation

54. Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is yet in a position to say when he expects to reach a decision on the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the proposed bid for the British Sugar Corporation by Tate and Lyle and Ferruzzi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) was published today (25 February). It concludes that the proposed acquisitions by Tate and Lyle plc of S and W Berisford plc and by Ferruzzi Finanziaria of Berisford's wholly-owned subsidiary, British Sugar plc, may be expected to operate against the public interest and should not be allowed. The MMC also concluded that Ferruzzi's existing shareholding in S and W Berisford may be expected to operate against the public interest and recommends that it should be reduced. In accordance with the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has accepted those recommendations.

The Secretary of State has therefore asked the Director General of Fair Trading to consult Tate and Lyle and Ferruzzi with a view to obtaining undertakings not to proceed with their proposals to acquire S and W Berisford and British Sugar, respectively; and, in respect of Ferruzzi's existing shareholding in Berisford, to reduce that shareholding to 15 per cent. over two years, with a limitation on the exercise of voting rights in the interim period.

A copy of the report and the Secretary of State's decision has been placed in the Library of the House.

Inward Investment

56. Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total figure for inward investment into the United Kingdom for 1986; and how many jobs were created as a result.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The latest figures available relate to the first three quarters of 1986. In that period direct investment in the United Kingdom by overseas residents totalled £4·5 billion. Separately, the Invest in Britain Bureau has recorded 225 investment decisions taken by overseas companies over the same period. From the information provided by the companies themselves, those decisions are expected to create over 10,500 new jobs. Figures for the full year will be available in the Invest in Britain Bureau's annual report which will be published in April.

Share Dealings

57. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about current investigations by his Department's inspectors into share dealings.

62. Mr. George Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about current investigations by his Department's inspectors into share dealings.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of letters commenting upon various aspects of the matters under investigation.

Visible Trade Balance

58. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the visible trade balance for 1987.

64. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the visible trade balance for 1987.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his autumn statement forecast a deficit of £10½ billion on the visible trade balance for 1987.

Exports (Inspection Standards)

59. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on inspection standards for goods exported to other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am unaware of any standards related to inspections carried out in the United Kingdom on goods exported from this country to others in the European Community. Should my hon. Friend know of a specific problem, I should be grateful if he would write to me with the details.

China

63. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on trading prospects with China.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are good prospects for a steady growth in our trade with China. 1986 saw a 35 per cent. increase in our exports compared with 1985. There continue to be opportunities for future growth.

Wakefield and Dewsbury

65. Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in the light of the decline of many of the traditional industries in the area, he will grant assisted area status to the newly formed Wakefield and Dewsbury travel-to-work area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. The assisted areas map was revised just over two years ago and on the basis of the objective criteria then used the Wakefield and Dewsbury travel-to-work area did not qualify for assisted area status. As I explained in a recent answer to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on Tuesday 17 February at columns 526-27, I believe that to alter the map at this time would be to undermine the stability needed by firms in making sensible investment decisions.

Nationalised Industries

67. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by how much his Department has subsidised the losses of nationalised industries during the past year, and what was the comparable amount for 1978-79.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Of the nationalised industries now sponsored by the Department of Trade and Industry, only British Shipbuilders and the British Steel Corporation made losses in 1978-79, of £50 million and £357 million respectively. In 1985-86 (the most recent year for which information is available) only British Shipbuilders reported a loss, amounting to £125 million. The total external financing requirement of all the nationalised industries sponsored by the Department in the relevant years, including those making profits, reduced from £1,108 million in 1978-79 to £404 million in 1985-86.

Manufacturing Output

71. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the increase in manufacturing output since June 1983.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the three and a half years since June 1983 manufacturing output has increased by nearly 12 per cent.; this represents an annual average growth rate of more than 3 per cent.

Redundant Textile and Clothing Workers

73. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to establish a severance pay scheme to assist redundant textile and clothing workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to a similar question of his on 6 February [Official Report, c. 838]. The Government have no plans to introduce legislation to establish a special severance pay scheme to assist redundant textile and clothing workers.

Shareholders (Statistics)

74. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the number of individual shareholders in the United Kingdom; and what was the equivalent figure eight years ago.

Mr. Howard: Statistics on the number of individual shareholders are not kept by this Department. But it is generally accepted that the number of individual share owners has approximately trebled since 1979.

Telecommunications Services

Mr. Neale asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has completed his review of the regulations affecting the installation, connection, inspection and designation of maintenance contractors of single line call routing apparatus.

Mr. Butcher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I have given him today to his other question.

Mr. Neale asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to issue further licences liberalising telecommunication services and use.

Mr. Butcher: The Government have now concluded its extensive consultation with industry and users on the proposed telecommunication licences for the running of branch systems and for the provision of value added and data services. Our aim has been to ensure that the liberalisation of telecommunications continues to develop in a way which increases the choices available to users and the opportunities for the fast growing telecommunications sector, consistent with the policy announced in November 1983 that the Government do not intend to licence anyone other than BT or Mercury to run national public telecommunications networks until November 1990 at the earliest.

The Branch Systems General Licence

When the original branch systems general licence was issued in 1984, the Government made it clear that its operation would be reviewed in the light of experience.

The Director General of Telecommunicatons has conduted this review over the last year. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has accepted his advice that further relaxations are justified and is therefore revoking the existing branch systems general licence and replacing it with a more liberal licence. The new licence comes into force today. The main changes are:

(i) Companies will in future be allowed to carry public switched network traffic over leased lines anywhere within their own group. In order to ensure that the technical quality of telephone signals remains consistent with minimum international standards, companies wishing to take advantage of this relaxation will have to comply with the networking code of practice which has been developed by OFTEL in conjunction with the public telecommunicatons operators, industry and user organisations.

(ii) The present limit of 50 metres within which companies may use their own wiring to connect systems in different buildings is being increased to 200 metres. This will give companies greater freedom to make the commercial decision whether to install their own wiring or to lease a short private circuit from one of the public telecommunications operators.

(iii) Rules clarifying the permitted use of international leased lines. The original licence did not deal with this.

(iv) Single line apparatus will no longer be classified as call routing apparatus. This relaxation will relieve users of such apparatus from rules requiring hardwired connections, pre-connection inspection and maintenance. This will increase user choice and enable United Kingdom manufacturers to take advantage of a promising opportunity in home and export markets.

Opinion has been divided among suppliers and users about the notice period in contracts with designated maintainers. My right hon. Friend does not therefore propose to make any change in this area.

The standard and technical provisions of the old branch systems licence, which are now familar to businesses who have run branch systems since 1984, have been incorporated in a separate document. They will apply consistently to virtually all licences issued in future. This should provide greater certainty for users and suppliers of telecommunications apparatus and widen the adoption of good technical practice which has evolved since 1984.

The above changes take account of those operational needs of industry and commerce on which OFTEL has received most representations since 1984. They are designed to assist companies to improve the efficient and economic use of their corporate networks. It is also open to operators licensed under the branch systems licence to provide value added services over their systems. When they do so, however, under the authority of the branch systems licence, they will remain subject to the limitations on resale contained in that licence. For operators who wish to take full advantage of the liberalisation on the resale of value added and data services, a class licence for value added and data services has now been finalised.

The Value Added and Data Services Class Licence

The consultations with industry and users on the class licence for value added and data services, issued in draft in July, have produced a number of helpful comments, which have been taken into account in the final version of the licence referred to below. Against this background the director general has today published parallel amendments to the licences of British Telecommunications plc, Mercury Communications Limited and Kingston upon Hull city council. These amendments, which have been agreed by those public telecommunications operators, are designed to place those PTOs on an equal competitive footing with other competitors in this newly liberalised market.

Although the provision of data services is being opened to full competition, it remains important that all forms of basic telecommunication services should continue to be made available by the PTOs on a nationwide basis and in a way which gives subscribers a choice of public networks. At present the PTOs have an obligation under their licences to provide basic telecommunication services. This obligation is not being amended and so basic data conveyance, including basic packet switched services will remain subject to the obligations to provide service and Interconnect contained in the PTOs' licences. I welcome the responsible approach that the PTOs have adopted in agreeing that this should remain the position.

The Telecommunications Act 1984 requires the director to give 28 days notice for representations before making the amendments to the PTO licences. My right hon. Friend intends, therefore, formally to issue the new value added and data services class licence at the end of that period unless the director has advised him that further changes need to be made to the PTOs' licences as a result of representations received during the consultation period. In the meantime, the Government have decided to make available the final text of the class licence, to assist the industry to prepare to introduce the new services.

Two significant changes from the July draft have been made in the final version of the class licence, in the light of industry comments. First, companies will be permitted to charge within their group for the conveyance of basic voice or basic telex traffic. This relaxation permits companies to make full use of corporate networks both to offer value added and data services, and to convey voice and telex traffic for ordinary business purposes. Where companies choose to convey basic voice or basic telex traffic they will of course remain subject to the limitations on resale contained in the branch systems general licence. This reflects stated Government policy that the extent of resale of voice and telex will be limited until at least July 1989.

Secondly, the Government recognise that companies will wish to offer a mix of charged services and services for the mutual business efficiency of non-telecommunication activities in an industrial sector but for which no charge is levied. The Government are concerned to promote the widest use of value added and data services, since these can improve the competitiveness of a wide range of industries. In these circumstances, the Government have decided to exempt such uncharged services from the conditions on fair trading and OSI standards contained in the class licence.

Some commentators have proposed that major providers of value added and data services should be obliged to interconnect with, and provide services to, any other operator. The Government have considered this carefully against the balance of views expressed during the consultation process and has concluded that the arrangements should remain as those set out in the statement made on 11 March by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Information Technology. Interconnection between different service providers should at this stage be for the market to decide. The Government will continue to play a catalytic role in encouraging such interconnections and the emergence of co-operative ventures within the industry, through the £1·25 million VANGUARD project which the Government launched in October.

The class licence will not be available to the PTOs, their groups or associates. The PTOs will be able to provide value added and data services under their main licences which are being comprehensively amended by the director to ensure that in terms of fair trading and OSI obligations, they provide value added and data services on an even competitive basis with other operators in the market. The Government has concluded that it would be unduly onerous, at this stage of the market's development, to require other members of PTO groups or PTO joint ventures with other operators, all to be licensed individually. My right hon. Friend will, therefore, be issuing a separate class licence for PTO associates. This will in most respects mirror exactly the provisions of the new value added and data services class licence and will come into force at the same time. It will, however, contain provisions which empower the Government to review and, if necessary, to revoke the PTO class licence from any joint venture arrangement where the PTO's partner has at the outset a worldwide turnover in computing or telecommunications in excess of £1 billion a year, or which subsequently exceeds that figure as a result of merger or acquisition.

The Government believe that the PTOs have a full and constructive role to play in the United Kingdom value added and data services market, both in their own right and through cooperative ventures with other operators. But it is equally important that there should be adequate safeguards to prevent the emergence of dominant ventures which could distort the market. The Government believe that users will best be served by a wide range of competing operators and therefore intends to exercise this power to review in line with its declared pro-competitive policy which has been pursued consistently during and since the decision on the JOVE proposal.

The Government have asked the director to keep a careful watch on developments once the licences are issued. It is of course open to him to propose licence modifications if experience showed that to be necessary.

The arrangements that I have outlined today should greatly increase the scope for the economic use of networks to improve business competitiveness, bring benefits to users of telecommunications and increase the opportunities for service providers in a rapidly expanding sector of the economy. I am placing copies of the new licences in the Library of the House.

House of Fraser (Takeover)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of 2 February, Official Report, column 505, when he expects to reach his conclusion on material submitted on behalf of Lonrho relating to the takeover of the House of Fraser by Mr. Al Fayed.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has not yet completed his consideration of the material in question and is not in a position to advise when he will do so.

European Steel Industry

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the Eurofer proposals for an ordered restructuring of the European steel industry; what is his policy on proposals for further cuts in the British steel industry; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that Eurofer will put proposals for further restructuring of the European steel industry to the Commission on 1 March for discussion by the Council of Ministers on 19 March. As far as the United Kingdom is concerned, any capacity reductions by BSC would have to be consistent with the three-year strategy agreed with the Government and announced in August 1985 and must not prejudice decisions on strategy thereafter.

Bankruptcies and Liquidations

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he publish in the Official Report a table showing the totals of bankruptcies and company liquidations as at each January and July since July 1979.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is given in the table.

	England and Wales		Scotland
	[1]Bankruptcies	[2]Company liquidations	[1]Sequestrations	[2]Company liquidations
July 1979	354	361	10	24

January 1987[*]	555	1,443	55	35

[1] Sequestrations are the Scottish equivalent of bankruptcies. Bankruptcy and sequestration totals include administration orders and deeds of arrangement and the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions.
[2] Includes compulsory and creditors' voluntary liquidations—the two types which involve insolvency.
[3] Monthly figure not available due to Civil Service strike.
[4] The remaining provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986 were brought into force on 29 December 1986. Proceedings for bankruptcy are changed under the new Act and receiving orders are replaced by bankruptcy orders. The new Act also introduced for the first time a deposit on petitions for compulsory liquidation. However, most of the insolvencies in January were petitioned under the previous legislation.
[5] Provisions of the Bankruptcy Scotland Act 1985 which came into force on 1 April 1986 provided for public funds to be made available to compensate trustees dealing with sequestrations with no assets.

Research and Development (EC Grants)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the grants available from the European Economic Community to institutions and companies in the United Kingdom to fund industrial research and development; how much has been allocated in the United Kingdom under such grant schemes in each year since their inception; and who may make applications under each of the schemes.

Mr. Pattie: The European Economic Community programmes undertaking industrial research and development are listed in the table, together with the expected United Kingdom share of the average annual programme budget. Funding from these programmes is provided under confidential contracts between participants and the European Commission in Brussels and details of individual grants are not normally available to Government. There is no formal allocation to member states but United Kingdom organisations are active participants in all of these programmes and United Kingdom receipts are usually close to our share of the programme budget. The schemes listed in the table are open to private companies, public sector research organisations and academic institutions.

Programmes	Period	Expenditure[1] (£m)

FIMBRA

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from small firms regarding the rules laid down for membership of FIMBRA; and if he is satisfied that allowance is being made for the level of resources available to those businesses.

Mr. Howard: As I indicated in my answer today to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle), about 50 right hon. and hon. Members have written to me concerning FIMBRA, and members of the public have also made representations. The rules of bodies intending to apply to become recognised self-regulating organisations under the Financial Services Act are a matter for them but it will not be possible for such a body to be recognised unless it meets the criteria for recognition and its rules contain no anti-competitive effects greater than is necessary for the protection of investors.

Manufacturing Trade Deficit

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the deficit in manufacturing trade for 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1986 trade in manufactures was estimated to be in deficit by £5·9 billion.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the supply of steel wire fencing is to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The report is published today.

The commission found that a monopoly situation existed in favour of TWIL Limited and its subsidiaries, which in 1984 together supplied two thirds of the £42 million United Kingdom market for steel wire fencing (SWF), defined as comprising barbed wire, chain link, stock fencing, welded mesh, wire netting and plain wire fencing. the remaining third was supplied in roughly equal proportions by 19 other (independent) United Kingdom producers and by imports. SWF accounted for 25 to 30 per cent. of the wider fencing market.

The commission concluded that only one of TWIL's practices—that of paying secondary rebates to certain distributers—was a step taken to maintain its monopoly situation, but since this method of price discrimination has been discontinued the commission found that it did not operate against the public interest. The last matter apart, the commission did not find that there had been any action or omission on the part of TWIL which was attributable to the monopoly situation, nor any facts which operated or might have been expected to operate against the public interest.

The commission also concluded that in spite of its dominant position in the SWF market TWIL faced a significant degree of competition because of the availability of substitute products, persistent over-capacity, relatively easy entry into the market, and the incidence of imports.

Although they found no evidence that TWIL priced below its estimates of total costs, they found that TWIL seemed to have priced according to what the market would bear. This was reflected in its varying profit margins for the different reference products. The commission also found that TWIL had responded to rather than initiated price competition. One result of this was that it had experienced a significant loss of market share. The company had also experienced a decline in return on capital, from over 26 per cent. for SWF in the two years ended 31 July 1984, to 21·2 per cent. in the following year. This could not now, in the commission's view, be regarded as excessive. Having taken these matters into account the MMC considered that TWIL's pricing policy had not been a step taken to exploit the monopoly situation. It suggested, however, that it would be in the company's own interests to publish full details of its standard wholesale discounts and its rebates with its price lists.

The commission was disturbed by the weight of complaints about TWIL's commercial practices. The commission received and investigated 83 complaints from 38 firms, most significantly about difficulties in obtaining steel wire, aggravated by TWIL's alleged refusal to supply on reasonable terms; and about TWIL's pricing and marketing policies.

Problems over the supply of steel wire disappeared during the inquiry and the commission concluded that there is at present effective competition between TWIL and other steel wire suppliers. TWIL assured the commission of its willingness to supply the independent producers at reasonable prices. The commission attached great importance to this and said that the provisions of the Competition Act 1980 could be invoked if TWIL failed to supply steel wire on a satisfactory basis. The Director General of Fair Trading has indicated that he would be prepared to make full use of his powers under the competition legislation if these problems recurred.

The largest number of complaints which the commission received was to the effect that TWIL's policy was to deal directly only with a limited number of distributors. TWIL said that it was willing to deal on wholesale terms with any distributor which met its criteria. The commission believe that TWIL's stated criteria for selection of wholesalers are reasonable. Nevertheless, the commission suggested that TWIL should explain its reasons for refusing wholesale terms to potential customers, and TWIL has agreed to do this.

I accept the findings of the commission's report. Because the commission found that the monopoly situation under reference did not operate against the public interest, there is no statutory basis on which to take further action. However, I attach importance to the assurance given by the company to the commission that it would supply steel wire to independent producers of steel wire fencing at reasonable prices. The commission also made some suggestions about TWIL's dealings with its wholesalers which I hope the company will adopt.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Accounting Records

75. Mr. Cash asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what circumstances it is inteded to penalise traders trading within case I or case II of schedule D in respect of the maintenance of accounting records.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A recommendation that traders should be required to keep accounting records for tax purposes was made by the Keith committee, and a proposal to that effect is included in the consultative document "The Inland Revenue and the Taxpayer" published by the Inland Revenue in December 1986 in response to the committee's report. The proposal, on which comments have been invited, includes a financial penalty for failing to keep such records.

Denationalisation

76. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of Her Majesty's Government's denationalisation programme since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The programme of privatisation continues to be highly successful. Fourteen major companies, including British Gas and British Airways, and around 600,000 employees have been transferred to the private sector since 1979. The privatisation programme is a key element in our strategy for widening share ownership and as a result we have succeeded in roughly trebling the number of people holding shares since 1979. By transferring these companies to the private sector we have also increased their incentives to greater efficiency and competitiveness, thus benefiting their employees, their shareholders and the economy as a whole.

Earnings

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures for 1970, 1980 and for the latest date available, for a married man with two chidren, earning average male manual earnings, showing the length of time, after taking into account income tax liability and national insurance contribution, necessary to pay for each of one pint of fresh milk, one pint of beer, 20 cigarettes per day, the weekly rent of a three bedroomed council house and the running cost of a medium-sized car.

Mr. MacGregor: The information is not available in quite the form requested. Table 6.9 in Social Trends 17 (a copy of which is in the Library of the House) gives figures for a married man on average male (not average male manual) earnings for a variety of commodities for 1971, 1981 and 1985. Data for 1980 are available in table 6.8 of Social Trends 16.

Comparable figures for the average weekly unrebated rent of a three bedroomed council house in England and Wales are : 3 hours 56 minutes in 1971, 3 hours 27 minutes in 1980, and 4 hours 32 minutes in 1985. Data for 1985 are based on average hourly earnings of all males on adult rates of pay, while data for earlier years are based on average hourly earnings of all males aged 21 and over.

VAT

Mr. Gregory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the value added tax position in each European Community state relating to foreign language teaching.

Mr. Brooke: Under the EC sixth VAT directive, most education is exempt from VAT when provided by bodies governed by public law or by bodies with similar objects; in the latter case, the exemption may be subject to a condition that they do not systematically aim to make a profit.

Present information about the practices of member states is as follows:

Belgium: In general supervised teaching is exempt from VAT.

France: Teaching by language schools governed by the relevant public law is exempt.

Ireland: Teaching by an educational establishment —including profit making organisations—is exempt from VAT.

Portugal: Language schools approved by the Minister of Education are exempt from VAT.

Denmark, Italy, Netherlands: Language teaching provided by non-profit making establishments is exempt from VAT; otherwise it is liable to VAT at the standard rate.

Information is not currently available about Germany, Greece, Luxembourg or Spain.

In the United Kingdom, language teaching provided by a non-profit making establishment is exempt from VAT; otherwise it is liable to VAT at the standard rate.

Mr. Fisher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the net value added tax gains from the sale of tickets for arts events.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that the revenue from VAT charged on admissions to theatres, concerts and similar live entertainment was of the order of £40 million in 1985-86.

Mr. Fisher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the net value added tax gained from the expenditure of foreign tourists in the United Kingdom on the arts.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that information on which to base an estimate is not available.

Mr. Ottaway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much value added tax receipts have risen in the period 1 October 1986 to 31 January 1987; what was the comparable rise in the same period of 1985-86; and how much of the increase is attributable to penalties for the late payment of value added tax.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: The information on value added tax receipts is as follows:

Period	Net receipts £ million	Change
		£ million	Per cent.
October 1984—January 1985	6,959	—	—
October 1985—January 1986	6,893	−66	−0·9
October 1986—January 1987	[1]7,435	+542	+7·9

Receipts in the period October 1984 to January 1985 include an estimated £1 billion attributable to the changes in arrangements for collecting VAT on imports.

In so far as the effects of the introduction of penalties for the late payment of tax are concerned, I regret that I cannot at this time add to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave to the right hon. Member for Ashton-under-Lyne (Mr. Sheldon) on 18 December at column 668-69.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from value added tax on fuel sales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: Businesses registered for value added tax are not required to make returns of the tax charged on particular supplies of goods and services, and information of this kind is therefore not directly available. The figures are based on estimates of consumers' expenditure.

1976-77	325	—

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from value added tax on vehicle service and repair in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: Businesses registered for value added tax are not required to make returns of the tax charged on particular supplies of goods and services, and information of this kind is therefore not directly available. The figures are based on estimates of consumers' expenditure.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from value added tax upon motor vehicle sales in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues in the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: Businesses registered for value added tax are not required to make returns of the tax charged on particular supplies of goods and services, and information of this kind is therefore not directly available. The figures are based on estimates of consumers' expenditure on new and used cars and motor cycles, and of business expenditure on cars (the VAT on which is non-deductible).

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Brooke: The following list contains the names of companies with which the Treasury has spent more than £10,000 on computer hardware, in either of the years 1985-86 or 1986-87, with a broad indication of the amounts involved. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, I am not prepared to give details of individual contracts.

Amounts spent
Over	£1,500,000			ICL
Between	£50,000	and	£150,000	Apollo Computers Limited Comart Computers Limited IBM UK Limited Systime Limited
Between	£25,000	and	£50,000	British Telecom

Amounts spent
Between	£10,000	and	£25,000	Apricot UK Limited Casu Electronics Harrison Comp Serv. Lexi Systems Logica ROCC Computers Winslow Zygal Dynamics plc
1986-87
Between	£500,000	and	£1,000,000	ICL
Between	£50,000	and	£150,000	Compel plc Systime Limited
Between	£25,000	and	£50,000	British Telecom IBM UK Limited Logica Micronology Limited
Between	£10,000	and	£25,000	Apollo Computers Limited Cooper Armer Limited Harrison Comp Serv. Sensory INF Systems Winslow

The Treasury also purchased computer hardware worth between £25,000 and £50,000 from HMSO in 1986-87.

Dr. Hampson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what the projected expenditure is for 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The figures for the Treasury are:

Financial Year	Hardware	Software
1985-86	1,942,000	428,000
1986-87[1]	3,000,000	322,000

[1] estimate.

In 1987-88 the Treasury is planning some £5 million capital expenditure on computer systems. It is not possible in advance to split this planned expenditure between hardware and software.

Fuel Excise Duties

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from fuel excise duties in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply 24 February 1987]: The information is as follows:

Year	£ million	Percentage change
1976-77	1,964·1	—
1977-78	2,208·0	12·4
1978-79	2,213·2	0·2
1979-80	2,667·4	20·5

1984-85	5,870·5	8·4
1985-86	6,252·8	6·5

Motoring Taxes

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from car tax in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: The information is as follows:

Year	£ million	Percentage change
1976-77	218·0	—
1977-78	285·8	31·1
1978-79	380·6	33·2
1979-80	516·9	35·8
1980-81	483·8	−6·4
1981-82	507·4	4·9
1982-83	597·8	17·8
1983-84	702·8	17·6
1984-85	744·7	6·0
1985-86	863·9	16·0

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from all motoring taxes in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: Estimates are as follows:

Year	£ million	Percentage change
1976-77	3,675·1	—
1977-78	4,267·8	16·1
1978-79	4,557·8	6·8
1979-80	5,812·3	27·5
1980-81	7,133·8	22·7
1981-82	8,708·7	22·1
1982-83	9,867·1	13·3
1983-84	10,782·6	9·3
1984-85	11,690·2	8·4
1985-86	12,684·7	8·5

The figures cover all the main indirect taxes on the purchase and use of motor vehicles—vehicle excise duty, car tax, excise duty on petrol and derv, and estimated value added tax on new and used cars and motor cycles, petrol and other motoring expenses.

THE ARTS

Foreign Earnings

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts (1) what is his estimate of foreign earnings achieved by the arts in the latest financial year for which statistics are available;

(2) whether he will undertake a study to assess the amount of foreign earnings attributable to the arts.

Mr. Luce: This will be covered in the study of the economic importance of the arts which is being carried out by the Policy Studies Institute. Its results are expected to be available later this year.

Arts Council Grant

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will undertake a study of the economic payback which may result from the nominal value of the Arts Council grant.

Mr. Luce: I understand that the Arts Council has commissioned some work on this subject and that a draft report is being considered.

EMPLOYMENT

Venture Capital

77. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Paymaster General what measures he has taken to encourage provision of venture capital for small and growing enterprises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Government's economic policies have created a climate in which enterprise is encouraged and rewarded and people are willing to invest in the wide range of commercial opportunities that now exists. The venture capital market in the United Kingdom has expanded rapidly since 1979. The establishment of the unlisted securities market, the over-the-counter market and the third market have provided easier access to equity capital for small and growing companies.

Specific Government measures to facilitate the supply of finance include the business expansion scheme which offers tax relief to individuals investing in unquoted companies. The venture capital scheme enables income or corporation tax relief to be claimed on losses incurred on disposal of new shares issued by unquoted companies. My Department and the Department of Trade and Industry have also provided support for seminars, conferences and other activities to promote the supply of finance to small and growing enterprises. The small firms merit award for research and technology (SMART) run by the Department of Trade and Industry has assisted small firms to develop projects, and seminars are to be run to enhance their prospects for venture capital investment.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Strang asked the Paymaster General how many people are employed in manufacturing industry; and what was the comparable figure seven years ago.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In December 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available), there were 5,363,000 employees in employment and self employed people in the manufacturing industries in Great Britain. In December 1979 the figure was 7,206,000.

Some of the decrease in the figures will be the result of the re-classification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage, previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment.

Enterprise Agencies (West Midlands)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received concerning the success of enterprise agencies in the west midlands.

Mr. Trippier: There is increasing recognition of the widening role that local enterprise agencies are playing in the west midlands in encouraging small firm growth and job creation.

The region is well served by a network of 16 agencies. Most recently, agencies have been formed in Cannock and Burntwood, Stafford and Solihull, with impressive support from established local companies.

I am aware of the personal contribution that my hon. Friend has made to the development of the new agency in Solihull. I welcome his involvement and feel sure the agency will provide a significant contribution to the health of the local economic community.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General how many people in London are unemployed; and how many have been without work for over a year.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. On 8 January 1987, the number of unemployed claimants in the Greater London area was 398,833 of whom 156,988 had been unemployed for over one year.

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General how many young people under the age of 18 years are currently registered as unemployed.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987 the number of unemployed claimants aged under 18 years in the United Kingdom was 162,241.

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General if he will give the total numbers of men and women employed in Yorkshire and Humberside, South Yorkshire and Barnsley travel-to-work area in 1979, and each succeeding year to date.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: The figures for Yorkshire and Humberside can be given, but employment statistics for counties and smaller areas are available only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken.

The table gives the available information from censuses taken in June 1978, September 1981, September 1984. As results of the 1978 census are not available for the new ward based travel-to-work areas, the figure for Barnsley relate to the area as defined before the 1984 review.

Between censuses, employment statistics are based on small scale sample inquiries which cannot produce reliable results for areas smaller than the standard economic regions. The estimates for the Yorkshire and Humberside region are recorded on page 31 of the supplement published with the February edition of "Employment Gazette."

Mr. Mason asked the Paymaster General what is the up-to-date average unemployment figure for each of the travel-to-work areas in the United Kingdom, specifiying the male, female, long-term unemployed and youth unemployed, separately.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: I am sending the right hon. Member the information requested which is also available from the Library. The information relates to the total numbers of unemployed male and female claimants, the numbers of claimants who had been unemployed for over 12 months and the numbers of unemployed claimants aged under 25 years in each travel-to-work area of the United Kingdom on 8 January 1987.

Mr. Duffy asked the Paymaster General if he will give the total number of men and women employed in Yorkshire, Humberside, South Yorkshire and the Sheffield travel-to-work area in 1979 and each succeeding year to date.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987, c. 193]: The figures for the Yorkshire and Humberside region can be given but employment statistics for counties and smaller areas are available only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken.

The table gives the available information from censuses taken in June 1978, September 1981 and September 1984. As results of the 1978 census are not available for the new ward based travel-to-work areas, the figures for Sheffield relate to the area as defined before the 1984 review.

Between censuses, employment statistics are based on small scale sample inquiries which cannot produce reliable results for areas smaller than the standard economic regions. The estimates for the Yorkshire and Humberside region are recorded on page 31 of the supplement published with the February edition of "Employment Gazette".

Mr. Cash asked the Paymaster General (1) what comparisons are available to him of employment growth within the European Economic Community in the United States of America and Japan;

(2) what comparisons are available to him of the growth in self-employment within the European Economic Community in the United States of America and Japan.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The best comparisons available to me are published by the OECD in "Labour Force Statistics 1964-1984", a copy of which is available in the Library, but all such international comparisons must be treated with care as it is difficult to obtain a consistent basis for the data from each country.

Women Employees (Burnley and Pendle)

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General (1) how many women in (a) Burnley and (b) Pendle are employed in firms with fewer than 10 employees;

(2) how many women in (a) Burnley and (b) Pendle are employed for less than 20 hours per week;

(3) how many women in (a) Burnley and (b) Pendle are in employment; and how many began new jobs on or after 1 June 1985.

Mr. Lee: The precise information requested is not available.

Employment statistics for local areas are obtained from censuses of employment and the most recent are for September 1981; the September 1984 census estimates are not yet available for areas smaller than the standard economic regions. Analyses by size of firm or actual numbers of hours worked are not available but, at September 1981, there were 17,400 women employed in the Burnley travel-to-work area (1984 definition) of which 6,400 were working part-time and 11,600 in the Pendle travel-to-work area of which 4,400 were working part-time. Part-time workers are defined as those working not more than 30 hours a week. My Department has no information about the numbers taking up new jobs.

Youth Training

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he will publish by local area the rates for YTS youngsters getting jobs and the rates for ITeC, YTS, youngsters getting jobs; and whether the Government now intend to reduce the ITeC, YTS, places.

Mr. Trippier: The results of the Manpower Services Commission's regular surveys of young people leaving YTS (including those who leave from ITeC schemes) are placed in the Library of the House each month. I refer the hon. Member to these documents. The Commission is planning to contract for approximately 6,800 first-year and single-year places in ITeCs in 1987-88 (the same number as in 1986-87) and to provide sufficient places for all 1986-87 eligible entrants to complete their second year's training in 1987-88.

Training Scheme Courses (North-East London)

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the Manpower Services Commission's support for training opportunities programme scheme/adult training scheme courses in north-east London and in particular printing courses at the Barking college of technology.

Mr. Trippier: The Government expect the Manpower Services Commission to spend almost £5 million on helping to train around 5,000 individuals through various adult training schemes in North East London in 1986-87. The outlay on fees and allowances for the provision at Barking college, which is only one of the options open to unemployed print workers seeking retraining, is expected to be around £19,000.

Community Programme

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he will provide an estimate of those currently employed in the community programme.

Mr. Lee: On 30 January 1987, the latest date for which statistics are available, there were 248,255 people employed on the community programme.

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing the increase in adult male earnings in the manufacturing and non-manufacturing sectors since 1979 and 1973; and if he will give a breakdown by industry for the manufacturing sector;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in adult male earnings of skilled and unskilled workers in engineering since 1957, 1967 and 1977, or the nearest available dates on the nearest comparable basis, compared to adult male earnings generally.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Restart

Mr. George Howarth asked the Paymaster general how many people in Merseyside have been interviewed under the restart programme; and of those, how many have since (a) obtained jobs, (b) joined the community programme, (c) joined job clubs, (d) taken part in the enterprise allowance scheme, (e) undertaken restart courses, (f) undergone training, (g) taken part in voluntary projects, and (h) remained unemployed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Youth Training Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to the reply of 17 February, Official Report, column 528, he will specify the basis of the figure of 5 per cent. in relation to the number of YTS entrants with contracts of employment; and if he will give the scope and nature of the sample survey used.

Mr. Trippier: The YTS start certificate, completed for every young person at the outset of a YTS training programme, records whether he or she has a contract of employment. That information, together with other details from the certificate, is recorded in the Manpower Services Commission YTS management information system. The figure of around 5 per cent. for the proportion of entrants with contracts of employment refers to the period April-December 1985.

SOCIAL SERVICES

District Health Authorities

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce arrangements to enable district health authorities to be fully recompensed without delay for patients whom they treat from outside their areas; and if he will take steps to ensure that these transactions are made on the basis of the average cost per patient.

Mr. Newton: The calculation of regional health authorities' target shares of the available resources already takes account of patients flows from other areas, costed at national average specialty cost per case. These calculations in turn influence allocations year by year. Regions follow the same approach in allocating resources to their districts, but are free to adapt the formula to reflect local circumstances.

Health authorities are also free to reach formal agreements in cases where one provides an agreed level of service to another's patients at an agreed cost and with direct transfer of funds. The National Health Service management board's report on resource allocation recommends further experiments of this sort and my right hon. Friend accepts this recommendation.

Special funding arrangements exist at national or regional level for the most complex forms of treatment, provided in a small number of centres serving a wide population.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the progress being made in the provision of hospital beds and reductions in the hospital waiting lists in the National Health Service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Information on Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

It is the number of cases treated not the number of hospital beds which matters and 983,500 more in-patient cases were treated in 1985 than in 1978. Hospital waiting lists in England are now 79,000 lower than in March 1979. Nevertheless excessive waiting remains a problem in some areas and for some specialties. All regional health authorities are therefore implementing extensive plans for further progress. Over 100,000 additional patients from in-patient waiting lists will be treated in the coming year from the first year's allocations of the £50 million waiting list fund. Health Service provision is kept under constant scrutiny through the National Health Service planning and review process.

Nurses

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the number of vacancies of over three months in nursing posts in the National Health Service indicating vacancies by grade and specialty for each of the last three years; and which bodies are responsible for the collection and publication of figures on nursing staff vacancies at national, regional and district level.

Mr. Newton: I regret that detailed information of this nature is not collected centrally. It is a matter for individual health authorities to decide how to record information on vacancies and whether to publish it. However, I am aware of the annual survey of a limited sample of health authorities conducted by the regional health authority chairmen for the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives and Health Visitors. This is not a formal statistical survey but is intended to give a broad indication of the scale and incidence of vacancies. The 1984 and 1985 survey results for specific grades and specialties are given in the tables. Information for the 1986 survey is still being validated.

The percentages have been calculated on unrounded figures and then rounded to the nearest 1·0 per cent.
The information for 1984 and 1985 is not strictly comparable and therefore it would be inadvisable to attempt any comparisons between the two years information shown.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey of 30 January, Official Report, column 440, if he will provide for information about the number of nurses leaving National Health Service employment in the current and in future years to be collected centrally; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: With the implementation of the recommendations of the Körner steering group on health services information, information about the number of nurses leaving National Health Service employment and their destination on leaving will be first collected during the year ending 31 March 1988. Arrangements for the processing and publication of this information are still being finalised.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many health authorities have contracted treatment of patients out to the private sector by using the additional financial resources made available to reduce hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: Fourteen regional or district health authorities have firm proposals to make use of allocations from the waiting list fund for 17 projects involving the private sector. A further five projects are still under consideration.

Local Office Staff

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect the movement of staff from the Camberwell Department of Health and Social Security office at Blenheim grove to premises at London bridge has had upon dealing with urgent needs payments.

Mr. Lyell: Accommodation problems at Blenheim grove have led to the movement of the majority of staff to premises at London bridge. The caller service reopened at Blenheim grove from 28 January 1987. Where it is essential to make urgent payments on the same day these are in the form of food vouchers and small sums of cash. All giro payments are by post from London bridge.

Local Office (Camberwell)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Camberwell Department of Health and Social Security office at Blenheim grove will have giro writing facilities.

Mr. Lyell: The Department's office at Blenheim grove will have giro writing facilities as soon as refurbishment there is undertaken. The project has been placed at the top of the region's priority list for work in 1987-88. In the meantime, claimants with particularly urgent needs are handed food vouchers and small sums of cash and sent a subsequent giro payment by post.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, what are the most recent figures for the amount of post at the Camberwell office of his Department in Blenheim grove not yet associated with files, outstanding postal claims, single payment claims and other assessment work.

Mr. Lyell: For the four week period ended 10 February 1987 the figures for Camberwell, Blenheim grove, office were as follows:

	Number
Unlinked post	5,293
Outstanding claims	650
Cases with single payment claims outstanding	528
Other assessment work outstanding	923

(A separate figure for postal claims outstanding is not available).

Schizophrenia (Exhibition)

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to schizophrenia to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 2 March to 6 March 1987. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has agreed to open the exhibition which is designed to increase hon. Members' awareness of schizophrenia and to introduce them to a newly emerged charity in this field, SANE (Schizophrenia—A National Emergency).

Abortions

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the maximum number of weeks pregnancy by which an abortion may be carried out in each of the member states of the European Community.

Mr. Newton: I understand that abortion may be carried out in each of the member states of the European Community as follows:

Belgium
The law forbids abortion at any gestational age.

Denmark
1. On request up to 12 weeks.
2. On medical, socio-economic and eugenic grounds after 12 weeks.

Eire
The law forbids abortion at any gestational age.

France
On request up to 10th week of pregnancy.

Germany (Federal Republic of)
1. On medical grounds irrespective of the duration of the pregnancy.
2. On eugenic grounds up to 22 weeks.
3. On social/psychological grounds up to 12 weeks.

Greece
1. Up to 12 weeks in cases of risk to mental health. Up to 20 weeks for eugenic reasons.
Note: legislation to allow abortions on request is pending.

Italy
On medical and socio-economic grounds up to 12 weeks of pregnancy.

Luxembourg
Up to 12 weeks of pregnancy on eugenic, medical and ethical grounds.

Netherlands
On request prior to viability of fetus.

Portugal
On eugenic, medical and ethical grounds up to 12 weeks of pregnancy.

Spain
1. To save the life of the woman or for her psychological wellbeing.
2. If pregnancy is due to rape.
3. If fetus is not of human form, provided the abortion takes place within 22 weeks of gestation.

Benefits

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants received payment for additional requirements at Brighton and Leicester local offices, respectively, in 1986; and what was the average payment made.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that this information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average weekly payment of supplementary benefit made to claimants under the age of 25 years in Brighton, Leicester and in Britain, respectively.

Mr. Lyell: The average weekly payment of supplementary benefit made to claimants under the age of 25 years in Great Britain in December 1984—the latest figures available — was £27·72. Similar information is not available for Brighton or Leicester.

Source: Supplementary Benefit Annual Statistical Enquiry —December 1984.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount paid to social security claimants in Brighton and Leicester, respectively, for additional requirements in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether the supplementary benefit board and lodging allowance for people living in residential care homes includes a specific allocation towards each of the following (i) day care, (ii) purchase of clothing and (iii) holidays;

(2) if he is planning to introduce any extra financial help to people receiving supplementary board and lodging allowance in residential care homes;

(3) how any specific allocations within the supplementary benefit board and lodging allowance for people living in residential care homes are determined;

(4) when he is planning to announce the next increase in supplementary benefit board and lodging allowance for people living in residential care homes.

Mr. Major: The supplementary benefit board and lodging allowance for people in residential care homes contains no specific allocations for particular items of expenditure.

Proposals for increases in benefits for people in homes were announced in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 12 February at column 362.

Local Office, Birmingham (Notepaper)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when his local office at Walsall road, Birmingham expects to exhaust the supplies of incorrectly spelt A4-size headed notepaper.

Mr. Lyell: The present stock of headed notepaper is near exhaustion, having lasted six months. A new supply with the correct office address has been ordered.

Homeless People (Health Care)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that regional health authorities are made accountable for the planning of health care services for homeless people;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that his Department co-ordinates and plans health services for single homeless people;

(3) what steps the Government are taking to give attention to the health needs of homeless women;

(4) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that district health authorities, local authorities, social services and family practitioner committees through joint planning will work with voluntary agencies to develop appropriate admission, discharge and aftercare policies to ensure that (a) a homeless person will only be discharged after adequate provision has been made for convalescence and after-care, (b) a homeless person without a general practitioner will be assigned one and given appropriate information and (c) priority will be given to assessing the housing needs of this person;

(5) what steps the Government are taking to make it mandatory for family practitioners' committees to provide primary health care for all sections of the community and to ensure that single homeless people are on registers permanently with general practitioners.

Mrs. Currie: District health authorities are responsible under the Health Services Acts for planning and providing hospital and community health services for their local populations, including homeless people, and are accountable to regional health authorities for doing so. They are required to collaborate with local authorities, the family practitioner service, and voluntary organisations. The Department does not issue guidance centrally to health and local authorities on services specifically for the single homeless. Authorities are expected to plan according to their local needs and circumstances.

Family practitioner committees are responsible for providing primary health care for everyone within their area, and single homeless people are entitled to use the statutory services in the same way as everyone else. However, FPCs are asked to give special attention to those who have difficulties in obtaining general medical services. In addition, the Department is currently supporting research projects which are looking at ways of providing primary health care for vulnerable groups, and also funds a number of voluntary organisations which provide services for single homeless people. The assessment of housing needs is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. If my hon. Friend has any specific cases in mind, I would be grateful if he could write to me about them.

Allowances

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the median average period during which individual recipients are in receipt of: (a) attendance allowance and (b) mobility allowance.

Mr. Major: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. The latest available information about the periods for which attendance allowance and mobility allowance are awarded is set out in the tables.

(a) Awards of attendance allowance made during 1986

Duration of awards (years)	Number at higher rate	Number at lower rate
less than 1	547	781
1 and over but less than 2	7,312	11,943
2 and over but less than 3	12,601	19,162

Duration of awards (years)	Number at higher rate	Number at lower rate
3 and over but less than 4	4,905	6,921
4 and over but less than 5	1,641	2,632
5 and over	5,427	9,640
For life	63,955	96,425

(b) Awards of mobility allowance current at 13 February 1987

Duration of award (years)	Number
1	13,180
Over 1 and up to and including 2	24,600
Over 2 and up to and including 3	5,430
Over 3 and up to and including 4	640
Over 4 but not up to age 75	17,310
Up to age 75	379,340
For life under the Mobility Allowance (Vehicle Scheme Beneficiaries) Regulations 1977	25,300

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he proposes to seek to alter present criteria governing rules for (a) attendance allowance and (b) mobility allowance.

Mr. Major: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many are in receipt of (a) mobility allowance and (b) attendance allowance; how many mobility allowance and attendance allowance recipients receive supplementary benefit or are dependants of someone receiving supplementary benefit: and what is his estimate as to the proportion of such people who either recieve a higher rate heating addition for themselves or have one paid to the head of the household on their account for the latest available year.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 696]: The latest available information is as follows:

1. Number of recipients (thousands)
   (a) Mobility allowance 466 February 1987
   (b) Attendance allowance 585 March 1986

2. Number of supplementary benefit recipients (thousands) with:
   (a) Mobility allowance 37 December 1984
   (b) Attendance allowance 154 December 1984

3. Percentage with supplementary benefit higher rate heating addition
   (a) Mobility allowance 91·7 December 1984
   (b) Attendance allowance 81·3 December 1984

Maternity Payments

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Fulham claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Fulham constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Chelsea and Kensington although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. Claims for these offices are dealt with at Aldershot out-station. A total of 3,085 maternity grant claims were dealt with at that office during the 1986 calendar year but this number includes claims proper to other offices.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Hertfordshire, West received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,135 claims to maternity allowance were made at Hemel Hempstead, the Department's office which covers the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Ogmore constituency claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Ogmore constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at Bridgend and Rhondda West and their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at those local offices during the 1986 calendar year was as follows:

	Number
Bridgend	1,787
Rhondda West	860

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Ogmore constituency received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,217 claims to maternity allowance were made at Bridgend and 434 claims at Rhondda West, the Department's offices which cover the constituency, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which of the items previously included as essential under the single payment regulations will not be included in the new maternity payment.

Mr. Major: No items are specifically excluded. Recipients of the new maternity payment will be free to spend the money as they wish.

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Bassetlaw constituency claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987, assuming that the number of births remains constant.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Bassetlaw constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Worksop, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at the Worksop local office during the 1986 calendar year was 1,476.

It is not possible to predict how many women will qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987.

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Lincoln constituency claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women are expected to qualify for maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987, assuming that the number of births remains constant.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Lincoln constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at Lincoln (Orchard Street) and Lincoln (Newland), although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims for maternity grant received at the 2 Lincoln local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Lincoln (Orchard Street)	2,004
Lincoln (Newland)	1,254

It is not possible to predict how many women will qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987.

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Nottingham claimed maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and how many women are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987, assuming that the number of births remains constant.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

However, the number of claims for maternity grant received at the Department's four Nottingham local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Nottingham (Castle Gate)	1,486
Nottingham (David Lane)	1,749
Nottingham (Shakespeare Street)	1,830
Nottingham (Station Street)	2,340

It is not possible to predict how many women will qualify for a maternity payment from the Social Fund after April 1987.

Dr. Gilbert asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dudley received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,593 claims to maternity allowance were made at Dudley North and 1,057 claims at Dudley South, the Department's offices which cover Dudley, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Dr. Gilbert asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dudley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

However, the number of claims for maternity grant received at the Department's Dudley local offices during the 1986 calendar year was as follows:

	Number
Dudley North	2,555
Dudley South	1,616

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of the total budget of his Department is used for cervical cancer testing.

Mrs. Currie: Expenditure on cervical cancer screening is not separately identified in health authority accounts. It is estimated that the current costs to the National Health Service in England is in the range of £20-£30 milllion per year. This represents between 0·13 and 0·19 per cent. of the total annual expenditure on the NHS in England, and between 0·04 and 0·06 per cent. of the total budgets for which the Department is responsible in England.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of women of those screened for cervical cancer in the last four months in the North East Thames regional health authority, who were found to have cervical dysplasia;

(2) what is the number of women, of those screened for cervical cancer in the last four months in the North East Thames regional health authority, who were found to have cervical carcinoma in situ;

(3) what is the number of women, of those screened for cervical cancer in the last four months in Islington district health authority, who were found to have cervical dysplasia;

(4) what is the number of women, of those screened for cervical cancer in the last four months in Islington district health authority, who were found to have cervical carcinoma in situ;

(5) what is the number of women screened for cervical cancer in Islington district health authority in the last four months;

(6) what is the number of women screened for cervical cancer in the North East Thames regional health authority in the last four months.

Mrs. Currie: Information for this period is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the health authorities concerned.

AIDS

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will now provide extra funding for sexually transmitted diseases clinics in response to AIDS.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-15]: We have provided £4·4 million to the three health regions where 76 per cent. of AIDS cases have been reported, as additional funding in respect of AIDS for 1987-88. Our plans for that year provide for an increase in overall allocations to health authorities in England of £626 million, which is 2·2 per cent. above forecast general inflation. Authorities will also retain the benefit of cash released through their cost improvement programmes, which are planned to achieve £150 million in the current year. Health authorities are expected, when allocating these resources, to have regard to any pressures on STD clinics arising from AIDS. On 23 December my right hon. Friend wrote to all district health authority chairmen telling them of the importance we attach to the provision of adequate resources for these services.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what account has been and will be taken of AIDS in determing the size and distribution of joint finance.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-13]: Allocations to regions of joint finance are made on the basis of populations weighted to take account of the elderly, mentally ill and mentally handicapped. A bias is also given towards inner cities. AIDS is not at present taken into account in determining the size and distribution of joint finance, but the Government will keep under review the means of funding services for AIDS patients in the future, in the light of further discussion about the most appropriate pattern of care including care in the community.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the 10 health authorities which have experienced the most demand on their services from AIDS patients; and if he will give for each the total revenue expenditure in 1982-83 and 1985-86 and the revenue budget for 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-13]: Information is not available at district level, which is presumably what the hon. Member had in mind. The table sets out the regional distribution of AIDS cases and the corresponding figures for revenue spending, or allocations for all regional health authorities in England. For the reasons given in the notes to the table, the expenditure and allocation figures are not directly comparable.

[3] The revenue cash limits shown are the initial allocations notified to regional health authorities. They can fluctuate significantly throughout the financial year (eg due to revenue to capital transfers, inter authority transfers, central adjustments) and therefore are not comparable with outturn expenditure figures.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what financial support has been made available by his Department to the Terrence Higgins trust;

(2) what is his Department's total grant sought by and given to the Terrence Higgins trust in each year since the trust's formation.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-13]: The Department's grants to the Terrence Higgins trust totalled £35,500 in 1985-86 and £118,610 for 1986-87.

For 1985-86, the first year for which the trust sought a grant, its application was met in full. For 1986-87, the trust initially submitted a provisional application for over £600,000. The level of grant subsequently awarded was agreed following detailed discussions with the trust on the areas which could be supported within the Department's grant-making powers. We are currently considering the appropriate level of grant for 1987-88.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consultation took place with the Terrence Higgins trust before its telephone number was put on the AIDS leaflet.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512]: I regret that no consultations were held with the Terrence Higgins trust before including its telephone number in the national AIDS leaflet. However, discussions were held with the trust in December about the increasing pressure on its telephone lines as a result of greater public concern about AIDS due to the Government's public education campaign. As a result we have agreed to meet in full the costs of new telephone lines and equipment for the trust.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many health authorities have drawn up action plans on AIDS; if he will list them; and if he will place the action plans in the Library.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-13]: Every district health authority has submitted a plan of action for combatting AIDS to the Department in response to our request in January of last year. These are not intended for publication, but the hon. Member will be aware that the AIDS Control Bill currently before the House provides for publication of annual reports by health authorities concerning their work in this field.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the circumstances in which two nurses carrying the AIDS virus have been reinstated following their earlier dismissal; what is the general practice with regard to the employment of nurses carrying the AIDS virus; how many such cases are currently known to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512]: Information about the health of individual employees is confidential between that employee and the employing health authority.

Health authorities are expected to follow the advice in the leaflet "AIDS and Employment", issued by the Department of Employment and the Health and Safety Executive, in connection with the employment of staff who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what role Her Majesty's Government envisage for general practitioners in combating the spread of AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The educative role of the general medical practitioner in containing the disease by counselling his patients is an important part of the fight against AIDS. The greater part of the care of the patient who is HIV positive will be provided in the community. The Department is organising a conference on community care for AIDS sufferers to be held next month and informal discussions have been taking place with representatives of the medical profession on the contribution that general medical practitioners can make.

Life Expectancies

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the current life expectancies at birth by social class on a regional basis; and what were the comparative figures in 1977 and 1967.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Elderly People (Wessex)

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what account he proposes to take in reviewing resource allocations for the Wessex area of the proportion of elderly people in Wessex in general and East Dorset in particular, in relation to the national average, and of the continuing migration of retired people to this area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Resource Allocation Working Party (RAWP) formula, used to calculate each region's target share of the available resources, is based on each region's projected population for the year of allocation. This population is weighted to reflect the use made by different age-sex groups of different health services (and a number of further adjustments are then made). The existing arrangements therefore already reflect the circumstances of regions such as Wessex, with a higher than average proportion of elderly people in their populations. The recent report on the review of the RAWP formula recommends that the arrangements be further refined by the introduction of a separate age-band in the formula for people aged 85 and over.

The allocation of resources to district health authorities is a matter for regions, which are expected to follow the same principles as the national RAWP formula. My hon. Friend may like to contact the chairman of the Wessex regional health authority about resource allocations to East Dorset.

Unanswered Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to provide substantive replies to the questions from the hon. Member for Oldham, West of 4 February on National Health Service hospital beds, 26 January on exceptionally severe weather payments, 4 February on mobility and attendance allowances, 4 February on National Health Service treatment statistics, 30 January on community care expenditure, 21 January on death statistics, 15 January on health expenditure, international comparisons, and 12 January on National Health Service expenditure.

Mr. Newton: For the replies to the hon. Member's questions about National Health Service expenditure on 12 January, exceptionally cold weather payments on 26 January, National Health Service treatment statistics on 4 February, I refer him to the replies given to him on Monday 23 February and Tuesday 24 February.

For the replies to his questions about death statistics on 21 January, community care expenditure on 30 January, mobility and attendance allowances on 4 February, I refer him to the replies given to him today.

I regret that I cannot yet give the hon. Member full replies to his other questions about expenditure on contract services on 12 January, certain international comparisons on 15 January, and on NHS beds on 4 February. These will be provided as soon as possible.

Patents (Amendment) Bill

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what commitment has been entered into by Her Majesty's Government in relation to the passage of the Patents (Amendment) Bill, currently in Committee in the House of Lords.

Mr. Pattie: I have been asked to reply.

In April last year the Government announced their decision to remove pharmaceutical patents from the scope of the licence of right provisions in schedule 1 of the Patents Act 1977. Following an offer by Lord Northfield in November to introduce a Bill with this aim, the Government undertook to provide drafting assistance.

Mortality Statistics

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of actual deaths in each week from 1 January to 31 March each year since 1979, what was the expected number of deaths for each of those weeks based on historical experience, and what was the percentage difference between the two.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 21 January 1987, c. 623]: Monitoring of weekly deaths using the current method began in January 1983, and figures from that date are shown in the tables. I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply giving figures for the earlier years when the calculations have been completed. An explanation of the methods used to calculate the expected numbers of deaths is given in "Population Trends No. 34", a copy of which is in the Library.

Community Care

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list total expenditure on community care by (i) each district health authority, and (ii) each local authority social service department for each year since 1979, showing separately expenditure on private residential and nursing care.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1987, c. 441]: Tables giving the available information have been placed in the Library.

Hepatitis

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to which European Economic Community countries test blood for the HIV (human immunodeficiency) virus.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 9 February 1987, c. 129]: In the United Kingdom every blood donation is tested for antibodies to the human immunodeficiency virus. The World Health Organisation has advised that all countries in the European Community have taken measures to test all blood donations for HIV.

Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the per capita spending on health and personal social services in cash terms and at 1986-87 prices each year since 1979 to the latest available date for (a) all ages, (b) births, (c) 0 to 4 years, (d) 5 to 15 years (e) 16 to 65 years, (f) 65 to 70 years and (g) 75 years and over giving the amount spent on (i) personal social services, (ii) family practitioner services, (iii) hospital and community health services and (iv) total in England.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 700]: Estimates of gross current expenditure per head of population on health and personal social services, in cash and at 1986-87 prices, for each year between 1979-80 and 1984-85, the latest year for which these estimates are available are given in the table. I regret that the age breakdown which is routinely available does not exactly match that requested.

These figures are derived through successive estimations starting with the Department's programme budget analysis, details of which are provided annually to the Social Services Committee and are published by the committee in minutes of evidence associated with its report on public expenditure on the social services. Expenditure on each of the services identified is then apportioned to different age groups on the basis of usage statistics derived from a variety of sources. For the earlier years, in the absence of suitable data, the apportionments for some services were based on assumptions which were subsequently revised in the light of new information.

Royal Liverpool Hospital

Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to seek to reduce the waiting list for patients awaiting treatment at the Royal Liverpool hospital.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 510]: Liverpool district health authority is to receive £252,000 from the Mersey region's allocation from the waiting list fund for 1987-88. This will mean that 970 extra patients will be treated at the Royal Liverpool hospital, along with 80 at Broadgreen hospital and some 70 at Alder Hey children's hospital. The projects funded include the provision of a new ward and additional theatre sessions in urology and the elimination of the waiting list for paediatric spinal disorders.

Blood Products

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his Department's assessment of the total cost to date attributable to heat-treating imported blood products; if he will list the hospitals where these costs have been incurred giving in each case the costs incurred; how much of the total costs have been met by (a) district health authorities, (b) regional health authorities and (c) special allocations from his Department.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 510]: Imported factor VIII for haemophiliacs is heat-treated during manufacture. It is not possible to estimate reliably the proportion of the cost of factor VIII which is attributable to heat treatment. Estimation is made difficult because the unheated product is no longer available to provide a comparison and because regional health authorities negotiate different prices for the different products available. Our broad estimate is that heat treatment has added an additional £2 million to the cost of factor VIII purchased in 1986-87.

Health authorities are responsible for the provision of care for haemophiliacs through a national network of haemophilia centres, six of which are designated reference centres and have each received an additional allocation of £60,000 specifically for AIDS counselling. A further £280,000 has been allotted for distribution in 1987-88. Information on individual centre's costs is not held centrally.

TRANSPORT

Highway Routes (Inquiries)

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the existing planning regulations so that (a) his decision in relation to inquiries affecting highway routes and related matters should be accompanied by reasons and (b) the inspector's decision should be accompanied by reasons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The regulations governing highways inquiries procedures are the Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1976 (SI 1976 No. 721).

Under these rules, the Secretary of State is required to notify objectors and others of his decision and the reasons for it. The rules also require the inspector to report to the Secretary of State his conclusions and recommendations, if any, or his reasons for not making any recommendations. In practice, the inspector's conclusions amount to the reasons for his recommendations.

There are no plans to amend these rules.

If my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind, perhaps he will write to me.

Sunderland-Carlisle Road

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will (a) list the proposed completion date of each section of the Sunderland-Carlisle trunk road, (b) indicate the local authority areas in which each section is situated and (c) state the amount and type of funding received from the European Community for each section.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested for the A69 Carlisle-Tyneside trunk road (formerly the Carlisle-Sunderland trunk road) is as follows. The schemes listed are those recently completed; under construction; or in preparation.

(a) Scheme	(b) Completion Date	(c) Local Authority Area	(d) Amount of EEC Grant Received	(e) Type of Grant
A69 Kingsway Flyover Junction	November 1985	Gateshead MBC	£1·02M	ERDF
A69 Cross Lane Junction	March 1986	Gateshead MBC	£0·67M	ERDF
A69 Eighteen Lodge Improvement	November 1987	Gateshead MBC	[1]—	—
Newcastle Western Bypass	October 1990	City of Newcastle	[1]—	—
A69 Norsley-Corbridge Improvement Scheme	December 1988	Tynedale DC	This scheme does not qualify for ERDF because it is not in an Assisted Area
A69 Warwick Bridge Bypass	Mid 1990	City of Carlisle	These schemes do not qualify for ERDF because they are not in an Assisted Area
A69 Haltwhistle Relief Road	1992	Tynedale DC
A69 Brampton Bypass	1992-93	City of Carlisle

[1] ERDF aid for these schemes has been sought, but grant is not payable until the work has been completed.

Drink-Driving (Campaign)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the latest statistics on the effectiveness of his drink-driving advertising programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Complete statistics on the level of drinking and driving and casualties over the Christmas period are not yet available. A full analysis will be included in "Road Accidents in Great Britain 1986: The Casualty Report" to be published later this year.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the numbers of passenger and aircraft movements at Stansted airport over the last 10 years to date.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information is as follows:

Stansted airport

	Terminal passengers[1]	Aircraft movements[1]
1976-77	290,951	3,879
1977-78	291,818	4,179
1978-79	329,521	4,691
1979-80	344,351	4,937
1980-81	261,307	3,229
1981-82	273,463	6,155
1982-83	298,637	7,733
1983-84	357,180	8,593
1984-85	546,776	12,773
1985-86	504,368	14,155

Harbours (Dangerous Substances)

Sir Bernard Braine asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current position concerning the draft Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations.

Mr. Spicer: I have laid these regulations before Parliament today. They will come into force, for the most part, on 1 June 1987.

The regulations and associated code of practice will replace nearly 300 sets of byelaws made under the Explosives Act 1875 and the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act 1928 and the whole or parts of some other harbour byelaws or local Acts.

They will, along with current Merchant Shipping legislation, provide comprehensive controls over the carriage, loading and unloading of all dangerous substances in harbours and harbour areas.

Slow-moving Vehicles

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to lessen the hazard of slow-moving vehicles using high speed roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a problem that has caused concern especially on major roads. The Department will shortly be consulting interested organisations on a proposed amendment to the lighting regulations to require slow moving vehicles to use amber warning beacons when travelling on unrestricted dual carriageway roads.

EMPLOYMENT

Pay Rates

Mr. Dalyell asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received about differential pay rates in different parts of Britain.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have received a number of letters on this issue since giving my lecture at the City university and business school on 11 February.

Trade Union Reform

Mr. Evans asked the Paymaster General when he intends to publish his latest proposals for trade union and industrial relations reform.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on Tuesday 24 February at column 146.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Forth asked the Paymaster General if he will give the percentage unemployment figure for the constituency of Mid-Worcestershire for June 1983 and January 1987.

Mr. Lee: Unemployment rates are only calculated by the Department for self-contained labour market areas. The smallest such areas are travel-to-work areas.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of people registered as unemployed and available for work in St. Helens, South at the latest date available.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. On 8 January 1987, the number of unemployed people claiming unemployment benefit, supplementary benefit or national insurance credits in the St. Helens, South constituency was 7,642. Availability for work is a condition for receipt of these benefits and credits.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of people who have been unemployed for over 12 months in St. Helens, South at the latest date available.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. On 8 January 1987, the number of claimants who had been unemployed for over one year in the St. Helens, South constituency was 3,798.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of people who are presently on the Government's special employment and training schemes in St. Helens, South at the latest date available.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to give a precise total figure for the St. Helens, South constituency because of the various bases on which local information is collected. At the latest available date, the number of people participating in the employment, training and enterprise measures in the St. Helens area were:

	Number	Date
Community Programme	1231	(January)
Community Industry	83	(January)
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	821	(February)
Job Release Schemes	73	(January)
New Workers Scheme[1]	1,484	(February)
Young Workers Scheme	45	(February)
Job Splitting Scheme	5	(February)
Voluntary Projects Programme	382	(December)
Adult Training Programmes	307	(February)
YTS	2,023	(February)

[1] The New Workers Scheme figures are for Lancashire.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of 16 to 25-year-olds in Leicestershire participating in November 1986 in (a) the YTS, (b) the community programme, (c) the new workers scheme and (d) the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On 30 November 1986 the number of 16 to 25-year-olds in Leicestershire participating in YTS and the enterprise allowance scheme was 4,892 and 237 respectively. On 28 November 1986 there were 2,292 participants in the community programme in Leicestershire. Information is not available on how many of these were under 25; they were all aged 18 or over.

On 30 November 1986 there were 551 participants in the new workers scheme aged 18 and 19 in Leicestershire and Northampton. Separate figures are not available for Leicestershire.

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General how many persons resident in Newcastle upon Tyne, North constituency are at present employed on a Government scheme.

Mr. Lee: The Government operate over 30 employment, enterprise and training measures which are available to people in the Newcastle area. It is not possible to give a precise figure for the Newcastle upon Tyne, North constituency because of the various bases on which local information is collected. The schemes which people participate as employees are as follows together with the numbers on the schemes in the Newcastle area at the latest available date.

	Number	Date
Community Programme	2,386	January
Community Industry	157	January
New Workers Scheme[1]	579	February
Young Workers Scheme	138	February
Job Splitting Scheme	39	February

[1] The new workers scheme figures are for Newcastle, North Tyneside and Northumberland.

Restart

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the cost of the restart scheme in (a) Great Britain, (b) Scotland, (c) Strathclyde region and (d) Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the list of restart menu options that will be offered to unemployed 18 to 25-year-olds when the job training scheme is extended outside the current 10 pilot areas.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General how many days were lost through industrial disputes in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available in (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector.

Mr. Lee: The statistics are as follows

Working days lost through industrial disputes
United Kingdom: Thousand

Year	Public sector	Private sector	Total
1977	2,087	8,055	10,142
1978	1,433	7,972	9,405
1979	5,052	24,423	29,474
1980	9,825	2,139	11,964
1981	1,866	2,400	4,266
1982	3,378	1,935	5,313
1983	1,831	1,923	3,754
1984	23,866	3,270	27,135
1985	5,591	810	6,402
1986[1]	874	977	1,852

[1] Figures for 1986 are provisional.
Disputes are classified by sector as at the time of that occurrence.

Skillcentres

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the skillcentres in Lancashire in June 1979 and at present, and the number of places provided at each centre for both dates.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in adult male earnings in the manufacturing and non-manufacturing sectors since 1979 and 1973; and if he will give a breakdown by industry for the manufacturing sector.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987]: Estimates from the new earnings survey for manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries are as follows:

Percentage change in average gross weekly earnings for full-time adult male employees whose earnings were not affected by absence
GB April

	1973-86	1979-86
Manufacturing[1]	+400·7	+104·1
Non-manufacturing[2]	+404·4	+110·5

[2] Divisions 0, 1 and 5-9 of the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification.

Because of the change from Standard Industrial Classification 1968 (SIC 1968) to the Revised Standard Industrial Classification 1980 (SIC(R) 1980) adopted for the 1983 New Earnings Survey, figures for individual industries are not available on a comparable basis for the years requested. Part C of the New Earnings Survey Reports for 1973, 1979 and 1986 contain tables giving details of earnings within individual industries according to the prevailing industrial classifications. Additionally, the 1983 Report presents the 1982 results for individual industries on the SIC(R) 1980 basis. Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in adult male earnings of skilled and unskilled workers in engineering since 1957, 1967 and 1977, or the nearest available dates on the nearest comparable basis, compared to adult male earnings generally.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987]: I have used a variety of sources to endeavour to produce a worthwhile reply as no one source is available which covers all the information requested. The resulting discontinuities in data sources over the period in question means that any comparisons can only provide a broad indication of trends. However, estimates from the information available are set out in the table:

Percentage change in gross weekly earnings of full-time adult[1] male manual workers

	1963-85	1967-85	1977-85
Engineering (GB)[2]
All skilled employees	+819	+632	+133
All labourers	+842	+663	+120
All manufacturing[3] (UK)	+886	+679	+132

[1] Men aged 21 and over 1963, 1967 and 1977. Males on adult rates of pay 1985.
[2] Figures for 1963, 1967 and 1977 are derived from the survey into earnings by occupation in Engineering and relate to June. Figures for 1985 are based on the New Earnings Survey.
[3] Figures relate to October for all years shown.

Notes:
1963, 1967 figures cover orders III-XVI of the 1958 Standard Industrial Classification.
1977 figures covers orders III-XIX of the 1968 Standard Industrial Classification.
1985 figures covers divisions 2-4 of the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crimes of Violence

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the average figures served for life sentences imposed for offences of murder in the years 1960, 1970, 1975 and each year from 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the median average sentences imposed for mugging offences in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics do not separately distinguish offences of "mugging", a term which has no legal definition; most offences of the type often referred to as "mugging" are recorded as robbery. The most frequent sentence given to those convicted of robbery has been immediate imprisonment. Information about the distribution of the lengths of such sentences is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables Volume 2" (in table 2.4 of the 1985 volume under offence classification 34). In each of the years 1976 to 1985 the median sentence of unsuspended imprisonment for offences of robbery was about 2½ years.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to how many offenders found guilty of crimes of violence against the person, including murder, in each of the past 10 years were unemployed at the time the offence was committed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The information collected centrally on court proceedings does not include the employment status of the offender.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to how many offenders found guilty of crimes of violence, including sexual offences, relate their crimes to motivation stimulated by television programmes.

Mr. Mellor: Such information is not available. However, the Home Office research and planning unit recently published a paper, "Television Violence: A Note on Recent Research" (Research Bulletin 22/1986, a copy of which is in the Library) which reviews the studies undertaken in recent years on the relationship of television violence to aggression.

Social Security Fraud

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders found guilty of social security fraud during each of the past 10 years were immigrants from (a) the West Indies, (b) India, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, (c) South Africa, (d) Eire, (e) the United States of America and (f) European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Mellor: It is not possible from the records of the results of court proceedings to distinguish the nationality or place of birth of offenders.

Autocrime

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of cars reported stolen in each of the last three years in (a) Lancashire, (b) Greater Manchester, (c) Merseyside and (d) Cheshire.

Mr. Mellor: Numbers of recorded offences of theft or unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle in each police force area are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (Table S.3.1 in volume 3 of the issue for 1985).

Private Prisons

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the possibility of introducing a system of private prisons in Britain.

Mr. Mellor: The Government are awaiting the views of the Home Affairs Select Committee, which I understand has looked at private prisons in the United States as part of its wider inquiry into prisons and penal reform. Before finalising our policy we shall consider those views together with evidence from other countries.

Prison Officers

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of extra prison officers needed to be able to reduce to zero the average 16 hours overtime worked at present per week by prison officers.

Mr. Mellor: A straight mathematical calculation is not possible since it would have to take account not only of the effectiveness or otherwise of the working arrangements in force but also of the work at present not done in establishments. Under the group working arrangements in the Department's fresh start proposals, we envisage being able to maintain and even extend existing regimes for prisoners with existing numbers of staff working a substantially reduced average working week, with the prospect of further efficiency improvements once the new systems are in place.

Police Computers

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has of abuses of the police national computer by private detection agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney General informs me that the inquiries to which he referred in his reply to the hon. Member on 30 January (Official Report, c. 406) are continuing. We are not aware of any other allegations of abuse of information held on the police national computer by private detection agencies.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria underline the Government's decision to provide for the non accessible retention of computer fingerprint records rather than their destruction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Automatic fingerprint recognition systems rely for their efficacy on being able to search automatically a database of fingerprint images held on optical discs or other storage media. There are serious technical difficulties in trying to destroy an image held on such a database without adversely affecting adjacent images. The only practical way of ensuring that a particular fingerprint image is not accessible by an operator is by destroying the reference to it in the index to the database and this is what is proposed in clause 112 of the Criminal Justice Bill.

Fraud Investigation Squad

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he uses to assess the value for money provided by the activities of the fraud investigation squad of the Metropolitan police in the absence of information about the number of investigations which result in conviction.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. For the kind of information collected to indicate how effectively the Metropolitan and City police company fraud branch is performing I refer the hon. Member to page 45 of the report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for 1985 (Cmnd. 9790). The number of convictions is not necessarily a useful indicator because of the length of time between charge or summons and conviction.

Traffic Police (Privatisation)

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to put out to private contractors the enforcement under police supervision of traffic speed limits on motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. The responsibility for enforcement of speed limits is, and should remain, a matter for the police service.

Police (Freemasonry)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate an inquiry into the incidence of freemasonry within the police force and its implications for the efficiency of the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Fire Service

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals to extend participation of retained firemen in the fire service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Audit Commission Occasional Paper No. 1 about value for money in the fire service addressed issues relevant to the retained fire service. These, together with other issues raised by the paper, are being considered by the Department. The local authority associations, as the representatives of the employers, and the fire service trade unions will also be looking closely at the recommendations.

Police (Numbers)

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of serving police officers in England and Wales at the latest available date; and what was the comparable number in May 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were 121,550 police officers in England and Wales on 31 December 1986 and 111,493 in May 1979. This is an increase of 10,057 since May 1979.

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial, technological and service improvements attachment of his Department's computer systems to the Government data network will bring to his Department.

Mr. Hurd: The proposed Government data network would be a technological improvement, which would lead to both financial and service benefits to my Department. The cost of the network will not be known until tenders have been evaluated later this year. Economies of scale in the development, implementation and running of a shared network are expected, compared with the costs that would be incurred if each Department used public services or developed a network for its own needs.

Police Forces (Control)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in favour of placing police forces under the operational control of local authority nominees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our attention has been drawn on a number of occasions to proposals for giving local authorities control of police operations. We believe that the present arrangements provide best for effective policing and for the protection and freedom of the citizen.

Racial Incidents

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of reported cases of racial incidents in the London borough of Waltham Forest in 1986; in how many cases arrests were made; in how many cases charges were brought; and how many convictions were secured.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am informed that 66 racial incidents were reported to the police in the London borough of Waltham Forest (including that part of Epping forest in the Chingford division) during 1986. In eight of these cases arrests were made.

Further details could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Detoxification Centres

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy, following his discontinuation of funding for the experimental detoxification centres in Leeds, Birmingham and Aberdeen, on establishing similar detoxification centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government remain committed to the policy of diverting drunkenness offenders from the criminal justice system. The establishment of detoxification centres or overnight shelters at Government expense has not been found a cost-effective means to this end; but we do not exclude the possibility of approving under section 34 of the Criminal Justice Act 1972 treatment centres funded from other sources.

Alcohol and Drug Abuse

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the figures on expenditure on alcohol abuse and on drug abuse for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I regret that information is not available in the form requested since in such areas as enforcement and treatment much expenditure on alcohol and drug misuse is not separately identified.

Drink Driving Offences

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to combat the incidence of drink driving offences other than the annual advertising campaign; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The enforcement of the law on drinking and driving is a matter for the police. They appreciate the importance of effective enforcement throughout the year. The Home Office maintains regular contact with the Department of Transport about publicity and other preventive measures which complement police enforcement and is represented on the road traffic law review chaired by Dr. Peter North which is examining, inter alia, various aspects of the law relating to drinking and driving.

Missing Children

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in tabular form, by police force area, such information as is available to him on the number of children under 17 years who were reported as missing in each of the past five years, and to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The only information readily available is that from the Metropolitan police missing persons bureau. Their records are not comprehensive because cases are normally reported to the bureau only when the person has been missing for at least 48 hours and because other forces do not report cases to the bureau as a matter of course. However, I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the number of children aged 17 or under reported to the bureau as missing for each of the past five years was as follows:

	Sex	Metropolitan Police	Provincial police and Interpol	Total
1982	Boys	1,550	135	1,685
	Girls	1,823	141	1,964
1983	Boys	1,340	147	1,487
	Girls	1,534	174	1,708
1984	Boys	1,416	138	1,554
	Girls	1,733	153	1,886
1985	Boys	1,283	115	1,398
	Girls	1,699	121	1,820
1986	Boys	1,291	147	1,438
	Girls	1,586	142	1,728

Information by police force area is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Forces (Civilianisation)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from chief constables on the civilianisation initiatives in each of the police force areas, the number of posts so far civilianised, the number of further posts expected to be civilianised in the current year and the number of posts earmarked for civilianisation after the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is estimated that in provincial forces in England and Wales civilianisation resulted in the release of about 500 police officers for operational work in 1985 and about 580 in 1986. As my right hon. Friend stated on 20 May 1986 in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) Official Report, columns 124-25, following a review by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary of the manpower needs of provincial forces, we expect to see phased increases in civilian staff of approximately 1,350 over the next few years resulting in the release of at least 650 police officers to operational duty.

In the Metropolitan police in the financial year 1985-86 civilianisation resulted in the release of 162 police officers to operational duties. The estimated number for 1986-87 is 108 and for 1987-88 the estimate is 160.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the three police authority areas with the highest murder and attempted murder rates in each of the last three years;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report the three police authority areas with the highest rate of rape incidents in each of the last three years.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Theft

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest information on the incidence of theft from farm houses and buildings; and what information he has about the comparable position in 1983.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not collected centrally.

News International Plant, Wapping

Mr. Benn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to what chemical substances were used by the police at the News International plant at Wapping on 24 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner informs me that when demonstrators attempted to set fire to a lorry some police officers used halon fire extinguishers. No other chemical substances were carried or used by his officers.

Police Officers (Ethnic Minority Recruitment)

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in encouraging the recruitment of higher numbers of black and Asian police officers; and what initiatives he is taking to stimulate further ethnic minority recruitment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All police forces with substantial minority communities are anxious to increase the number of ethnic minority police officers and a variety of new initiatives have recently been taken to improve recruitment. As a result, the number of ethnic minority police officers in England and Wales increased from 386 in June 1982 to 761 in December 1985 and to 898 in December 1986. A conference of the officers in charge of recruitment in all police forces in England and Wales was held in October 1986 to consider what more might be done and this produced some useful ideas, which we are taking forward. An additional staff officer to Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary has also been appointed, with specific responsibility for co-ordinating the efforts of forces and for following up the conclusions of the conference.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes are currently operating in the north-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are more than 9,500 neighbourhood or home watch schemes in the Cheshire, Cumbria, greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside police force areas, the number having more than doubled over the past 12 months. This increase in the number of schemes indicates the increasing public awareness of the part they can play in preventing crime. Neighbourhood or home watch schemes provide a focus for action for those who wish to work against crime.

Electoral Register

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has that the electoral register is being used by criminals to identify potential victims such as women on their own.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are aware of suggestions that some criminals may use the electoral register as one of a number of possible sources of information about householders, but have not received specific information to suggest this has happened, except in two cases which have occurred in the Bristol area where the police think that the electoral register was used in this way.

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will seek to amend the Representation of the People Regulations 1986 so that people wishing to consult the electoral register should do so in the presence of the custodian;

(2) if he will seek to amend the Representation of the People Regulations 1986 so that whilst the electoral register must be freely available to the general public, people who wish to consult it should be asked for their name and address and proof of identity.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are not persuaded that such amendments should be made. Such restrictions could discourage members of the public from inspecting the electoral register, which provides an important check on its accuracy.

Rape

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on recent trends in sentencing in rape cases.

Mr. Hurd: Court sentencing figures for 1986 are not yet complete but more recent information is available on the effective length of all the sentences (including consecutive sentences) of persons received into prison for the principal offence of rape. It suggests a lengthening of sentences since the Lord Chief Justice's guideline judgment of 21 February 1986 in R v. Billam: in March-September 1986, about 45 per cent. of those entering prison under sentence for rape or attempted rape had an effective sentence length of more than five years; in the corresponding period a year earlier, the proportion was about 20 per cent.

Draize Eye Irritancy Test

Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will issue guidance on the minimisation of animal suffering in the conduct of the Draize eye irritancy test.

Mr. Hurd: Guidelines on this subject have been prepared and recently issued to establishments where this testing is carried out. Copies of the guidelines have been placed in the Library.

Because of the importance of the eye, and its vulnerability to damage, safety testing of substances which may come into contact with the eye is essential and to date no satisfactory replacement for the Draize eye test exists. None the less, there is much which can be done to minimise the use of animals in the test and any suffering which may occur. The guidelines will ensure the adoption of best practice, covering the use of prior screening in vitro and with a single animal, use of reduced doses and dilution of test materials, inspection and withdrawal of animals from study and the use of analgesics. I am sure that the guidelines—which have been endorsed by the Advisory Committee on Animal Experiments—will result in the improvement of animal welfare whilst allowing essential safety testing to continue.

Police (Wrongful Acts)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the amounts paid in out of court settlements of claims arising from the wrongful arrests by metropolitan police officers in 1986; what were the amounts paid under awards made by courts in 1986; and the number of cases concluded in 1986.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 218]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that a total of £330,332·50p was paid in settlements out of court arising from allegations of wrongful acts by Metropolitan police officers. In 1986, 126 civil actions were concluded of which 52 were settled out of court, 41 dealt with at court, 22 struck out and 11 discontinued.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for 1986 the cases involving Metropolitan police officers where civil damages have been awarded and where, following the conclusion of the case, details of the court's findings have been forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions for further action.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 218]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that of 41 civil actions dealt with at court in 1986 damages were awarded against the Metropolitan police for wrongful acts by police officers in 10 cases as follows:

Wrongful arrest	Damages awarded (£)
1. Assault	26,000
2. Unlawful imprisonment	11,000
3. Assault	3,500
4. Assault and false imprisonment	2,000
5. Assault and false imprisonment	1,836
6. Assault, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution	1,400
7. Assault and false imprisonment	750
8. Assault	200
9. Assault	100
10. Unlawful imprisonment	50

None of these cases was referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions for further action.

Mrs. Cynthia Payne

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the total expenditure on the investigation of the case of Mrs. Cynthia Payne; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 28]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the overtime and other additional costs to the Metropolitan police of the investigation of the case of Miss Cynthia Payne was £2,300

Ministerial Meeting (Bonn)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the subjects discussed during his ministerial meeting in Bonn on 25 February.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend's meetings with the Federal German Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Agriculture covered a number of topics of mutual interest in European Community and International affairs. Details of such discussions are confidential.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how soon after 31 March he hopes to be able to make the outcome of his consultations on new Welsh language legislation available to hon. Members.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I do not expect to be in a position to make any statement on this matter before the autumn at the earliest.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales are employed full-time in jobs directly connected to conservation of energy; and what was the number in each of the last seven years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available.

Football Stadiums

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available extra funding to enable Welsh football clubs playing in the English League to meet the costs of converting 50 per cent. of stadium capacity to member-only enclosures.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Football league clubs in Wales as well as England will be expected to introduce membership schemes for at least 50 per cent. of each ground's capacity at their own cost. A team of representatives comprising the League, the Football Association, the Football Trust and independent advisers will be available to help and assist those clubs in need of guidance.

Welsh Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will now announce the chairman of the Welsh Health Promotion Authority.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have asked Dr. Simon Smail, the current chairman of the Health Education Advisory Committee for Wales, to become the Chairman of the new authority when it is established. Dr. Smail has agreed. I expect to announce the membership of the authority shortly.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Sixth Form Students

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of sixth form students study at (i) state schools, (ii) independent schools and (iii) state sixth form colleges.

Mr. Dunn: The numbers and proportions of pupils aged 16 and over in school studying at maintained secondary schools, independent schools and sixth form colleges in England in January 1986 were:

	Number of pupils aged 16 and over[1]	As a percentage of total
Maintained Secondary Schools[2]	240,426	65
Independent Schools	66,634	18
Sixth Form Colleges	64,231	17
Total	371,291	100

[1] Ages at previous 31 August.
[2] Excluding Sixth form Colleges.

Students (Full-time Education)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many pupils study for GCE A-levels; and what proportion of their year group they represent;

(2) what proportion of pupils remain in full-time education over the age of 16 years; how many enter the sixth form; and how many enter further education or non advanced further education.

Mr. Dunn: The number and proportion aged 16, 17 and 18 remaining in full-time education in schools and further education colleges and those studying for GCE A-levels are as follows:

Full-time pupils/students in England, 1985-86

Numbers (thousands) aged[1]	On 'A' level courses		On all courses
	School[2]	F & HE[3]	School[4]	F & HE[3]
16	140	17	218	129
17	131	20	140	97
18	17	13	20	110
as percentage of population aged:
16	19	2	30	18
17	18	3	19	13
18	2	2	3	14

[1] Ages at 31 August 1985.
[2] The age breakdown of the number of pupils on 'A' level courses in maintained secondary and independent schools has been estimated.
[3] Full-time students on non advanced and advanced courses in further education colleges and universities. Includes those YTS trainees on full time courses on the day of the count and for a significant part of their courses; and sandwich students in further education.
[4] Numbers of pupils of these ages in maintained secondary, independent and special schools.

Local Education Authorities (Reception Classes)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities which staff reception classes with a teacher and a nursery nurse or ancillary and those which staff such classes with a teacher only.

Mr. Dunn: Information on the staffing of reception classes is not collected centrally.

GCSE

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will report on the progress with the first general certificate of secondary education examinations; what consultation he is having on this matter; and what action he is taking to respond to representations made.

Mrs. Rumbold: Last September some 600,000 pupils started courses which will lead to the first GCSE examinations in summer 1988. Direct Government funding has provided:

(i) for books and equipment, £20 million in 1986-87 and £10 million in 1987-88; and

(ii) for in-service teacher training, £9·5 million in 1986-87 and £15 million in 1987-88.

The Government's plans for the financial year 1987-88 provide for specific expenditure on GCSE non-teaching costs of £100 million.

Discussions are being held with GCSE examining groups, LEAs and teachers' associations, and the information gained will help to determine future resource needs and policy developments.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those regions and those subjects in which assessment structures for general certificate of secondary education examinations were not in operation by the end of 1986.

Mrs. Rumbold: None. All GCSE syllabuses give details of the associated schemes of assessment and examination structure, and mode 1 syllabuses in all subjects were distributed to schools before the end of 1986.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will request Her Majesty's Inspectors to carry out an immediate review of the operation of the general certificate of secondary education courses in secondary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: HMI has four main strategies for monitoring the implementation of the GCSE:

(i) through the normal programme of school visits;

(ii) through specialist subject visits;

(iii) through termly discussions with LEA officers, inspectors and advisers; and

(iv) through the annual analysis of LEAs' expenditure policies

In addition HMI is evaluating GCSE in-service teacher training.

Her Majesty's Inspectors

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 11 February, Official Report, column 219, concerning a review of procedures regarding publication of reports by Her Majesty's Inspectors, what changes have been made since December 1985 concerning ways of accelerating procedures; what are the present procedures; when he expects the current review of procedures to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Her Majesty's Inspectorate has asked a firm of management consultants to undertake a review of their procedures for the processing of inspection reports. Although some small changes have recently been introduced, and individual reports are given priority where appropriate, the procedures remain largely what they were in December 1985. The consultancy should be completed shortly after Easter. It will cover, and make recommendations about, arrangements for the preparation and clearance of reports as well as their printing and distribution.

Science Budget

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 660-61, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conway (Mr. Thomas), if he will indicate the proportion of the total amount allocated from his Department's science budget to universities in each year since 1979 which is represented by the amount allocated to the constituent colleges of the university of Wales.

Mr. Walden: The Research Councils have been asked for this information. I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 660-61, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas), if he will indicate the proportion of the total amount allocated from his Department's science budget to institutions other than universities in each year since 1979 which is represented by the amount allocated to such institutions in Wales.

Mr. Walden: The research councils have been asked for this information. I shall reply as soon as possible.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) whether the Medical Research Council is currently sponsoring any research project involving the injection of foetal cells into sufferers of Alzheimer's disease or related conditions;

(2) whether the Medical Reearch Council is aware of any existing or proposed project within the United Kingdom which involves the injection of foetal cells into sufferers of Alzheimer's disease or related conditions.

Mr. Walden: I understand that the Medical Research Council is not currently sponsoring any such research, nor is the Council aware of any existing project within the United Kingdom. However the MRC is aware that a number of United Kingdom research workers are discussing the possibility of collaborating with a Swedish group which proposes to graft foetal cells into patients suffering from Parkinson's Disease.

School Librarians

Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many chartered librarians are employed as school librarians in England; what is the percentage of school librarians in England possessimg chartered status; and what is the equivalent figure in Scotland.

Mrs. Rumbold: I understand that in Scotland some 160 chartered librarians are employed in school libraries and about 70 per cent. of school librarians possess chartered status. Equivalent figures for England are not available. However the report of the Working Party on School Library Services, "School Libraries: The Foundations of the Curriculum" (published in 1984), estimates for England and Wales that some 600 chartered librarians work in primary and secondary schools and that 7 per cent. of secondary schools have chartered librarians.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid-trade Expenditure

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report the proportion of overseas aid expenditure from each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development member state routed through aid-trade provisions or similar arrangements for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Chris Patten: The debate within OECD over aid for commercial purposes has focused on mixed credits and less concessional tied aid loans (those with a grant element of less than 50 per cent.). Figures for these transactions by OECD countries are available on a commitment but not an expenditure basis. The figures below are an annual average for 1982-85: as commitment figures vary considerably from year to year, depending on the timing of contract and aid agreement signatures, the figures for any one year may not give a representative picture.

Aid used in mixed credits and less concessional tied aid loans as a percentage of gross bilateral aid commitments

Country	Per cent.
United States	2·5
Canada	5·5
Germany	9·0
France	19·0
Italy	39·0
Japan	11·0
United Kingdom	17·0

Source: Development Assistance Committee of the OECD.
Notes:
(1) a mixed credit is a combination of aid and commercial finance (usually export credit).
(2) tied aid includes any aid that is in effect tied to procurement of goods and services from the donor country, or from the donor country and a restricted number of other countries.

"Women and Development"

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what respresentations he has had regarding the Overseas Development Agency's booklet, "Women and Development".

Mr. Chris Patten: None. Most of the few comments we have had have been favourable.

Nicaragua

Mr. Ground asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has anything to add to the answer from the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) of 10 February, Official Report, column 172, regarding the award of aid to Nicaragua; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I regret that the reply by my hon. Friend was incorrect in respect of the aid provided by the European Community to Nicaragua. The figures should read:

1981	5,010,000
1982	4,150,000
1983	4,520,000
1984	10,990,000
1985	9,760,000

Gibrepair Shipyard, Gibraltar

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money has been paid to the Gibraltar Government for the purposes of refurbishing and maintaining the Gibrepair shipyard in Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: So far we have paid £29,845,175 to the Gibraltar Government out of the £30·4 million development aid grant for the conversion of the former naval dockyard into Gibrepair Ltd.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in view of the report by Price Waterhouse on Gibrepair Ltd., it is his intention to provide some of the additional finance required to retain this shipyard as the major employer in the dependent territory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Price Waterhouse report on Gibrepair Ltd. was commissioned and financed by the Gibraltar Government who are responsible for any follow up action on it. As I told the House on 3 November 1986 at column 685, we agreed in 1983 to provide up to £28 million towards the establishment and initial working capital of Gibrepair Ltd. In 1986 we agreed to allocate a further £2·4 million for increased capital costs as a final contribution to the project. This position is unchanged by the Price Waterhouse report.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money has been paid out of Her Majesty's Government's funds to Appledore Ltd., managing agents at Gibrepair Ltd. shipyard in Gibraltar, since July 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Fees payable under the management contract between Appledore International Ltd. and Gibrepair Ltd. are not financed from Government funds. The costs of previous and separate consultancy arrangements since July 1983 between the Government and Appledore for the necessary groundwork before commercialisation of the shipyard are a matter of commercial confidence.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether, during the recent meeting in London with Sir Joshua Hassar, Chief Minister of Gibraltar, he discussed the financial difficulties of Gibrepair; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what discussions he has had with the Gibraltar Government on the future funding of Gibrepair Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend did not discuss this matter during the recent meetings in London with the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. The future funding of Gibrepair Ltd. is a matter for the Gibraltar Government, the owners.

Palestine Police Force (Pensions)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of retired members of the former British Mandate Palestine Police Force currently in receipt of pensions from Her Majesty's Government; how many widows of former Palestine policemen are receiving a pension; what is the current level of such widow's pension; and what steps have been taken to maintain its level.

Mr. Chris Patten: There are at present 700 overseas officers and 747 local officers in receipt of a Palestine pension. The number who served in the police force could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Seven widows of former Palestine policemen are in receipt of a pension. The current level of these pensions ranges from £367 to £1,928; they are uprated in accordance with the provisions of the United Kingdom pension increase legislation.

Expatriate Public Servants (Pensions)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of former expatriate public servants currently in receipt of pension under the Sierra Leone Order 1960 (S.I. 2415); how many of them are in receipt of indexation; and in how many cases are discretionary payments to individuals envisaged in schedule 1(1) being made under the instructions of the former governor.

Mr. Chris Patten: 131 expatriate officers are in receipt of a pension under the Sierra Leone Order 1960 (S.I. 2415). All but two are in receipt of an index-linked supplementary pension. It is not known how many, if any, of these pensions were awarded in accordance with the discretionary provision of schedule 1(1) of the scheme. The information could be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made by his Department's demountable rack off-loading pick-up system selection team in 1983 about the effect on the size of storage areas of the ability to stack loaded flatracks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware ad (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987;

(2) to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information is not kept in the form requested. Many computer purchases form part of larger Defence projects, and are not separately identifiable. In addition, software is frequently included in what are essentially hardware procurements. Details of individual contract values are commercial in confidence.

Territorial Army

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 5 February, Official Report, column 798, what percentage reductions in vehicle holdings and the use of ammunition are being considered in his Department's review.

Mr. Freeman: It is not normal practice to reveal detailed changes which may be made to our vehicle and ammunition holdings as a result of regular reviews designed to make the most cost-effective use of available resources.

Winston and Ritchie Camps

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of Winston camp, Larnark, and Ritchie camp, Kirknewton.

Mr. Freeman: We have recently agreed in principle to make these sites available to the United States forces for use as peacetime medical storage facilities and as hospitals which would be activated in the event of war.

Exports

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 686-7, if he will give the corresponding figures for the number of jobs estimated to be supported by United Kingdom defence exports for each year since 1978.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The numbers of jobs estimated to be supported by United Kindom defence exports are as follows:

	Number
1978	130,000
1979	120,000
1980	140,000
1981	140,000
1982	140,000
1983	[illegible],000
1984	120,000
1985	110,000

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 686-7, if he will give (a) a regional breakdown and (b) a breakdown by type of job of the jobs estimated to be supported by United Kingdom defence exports.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not possible to break down the figures in the ways requested.

Gibrepair Limited

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the type of contract and the individual value of such contracts awarded to Gibrepair Limited of Gibraltar since July 1983, listing each contract individually.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Gibraltar Shiprepair Limited did not come into being until 1 January 1985. Since that time, contracts have been awarded for the following Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessel refits: RFA Sir Lancelot, RFA Sir Caradoc, RFA Engadine, RFA Bayleaf, RFA Appleleaf, RFA Brambeleaf and RFA Blue Rover.

It is not our practice to detail individual contract prices which are commercial in confidence. However, the total value of this work amounts to over £11·5 million.

In addition, period contracts have been awarded since 1 January 1985, the first for 15 months and the second for 12 months, each valued at about £1 million, for work on small naval support craft based at Gibraltar. The current contract expires on 31 March and it is expected that it will be renewed.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether Gibrepair in Gibraltar has sufficient skilled labour to carry out its 1987 programme of frigate modernisation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will consider placing the 1987 frigate modernisation programme work with British shipyards; if he will consider Gibrepair Limited for the 1988 programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Modernisation of warships (including frigates) is undertaken continuously as a minor part of their refit programmes. It is not practicable to undertake modernisations as a separate entity as this would involve an increase in non-operational time. All warship refit work is planned to be undertaken at Devonport and Rosyth and it is not intended to place any of it with Gibraltar Shiprepair Limited.

Libya (Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration Her Majesty's Government gave, when examining the United States request for the use of United Kingdom bases for the raid on Libya in April 1986, to the capability of the United States of America to carry out the raid from aircraft carriers.

Mr. Stanley: I have nothing to add to what was said by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in her statement on 15 April 1986 at columns 729-30.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the options being studied for the disposal of low, intermediate and high level nuclear waste arising from the dismantling of redundant submarines;

(2) if he will list those parliamentary constituencies within which options for the disposal of low, intermediate and high level nuclear waste arising from the dismantling of redundant submarines are being studied.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

War Medals

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current delay between application for, and award of, 1939 to 1945 war medals.

Mr. Freeman: The celebration of world war 2 anniversaries in 1984 and 1985 resulted in greatly increased public interest in claiming world war 2 campaign medals. Currently the period between application and award of medals normally varies between 12 and 16 months.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many soldiers were on guard duty when the Coleraine Ulster Defence Regiment base was raided during the weekend of 21 to 23 February;

(2) whether guard dogs patrol the Ulster Defence Regiment barracks at Coleraine;

(3) whether closed circuit television is used on the perimeter fence of the Ulster Defence Regiment base at Coleraine;

(4) whether any regular soldiers supervise or are employed in guarding the Ulster Defence Regiment base at Coleraine;

(5) whether alarm systems are used at Coleraine barracks to prevent unauthorised opening of the armoury;

(6) whether closed circuit television is used to observe the armoury at Coleraine Ulster Defence Regiment base.

Mr. Stanley: It is not our practice to disclose details of security arrangements at particular military establishments.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he intends to take to improve security at Ulster Defence Regiment establishments.

Mr. Stanley: Security procedures at military establishments in the Province are regularly assessed. A review of security measures at all UDR bases is now taking place and appropriate action is being, and will be, taken as necessary.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the theft of arms and ammunition from the Ulster Defence Regiment base at Coleraine.

Mr. Stanley: During the early hours of 22 February a number of armed and masked men gained access to the 5 UDR base at Coleraine. They overpowered the guards and stole a large quantity of arms and ammunition from the armoury. Shortly after they made their escape in a military Transit van. The alarm was raised and the vehicle was later stopped by a police patrol on the M2 motorway near Templepatrick. The RUC arrested the driver and recovered all the stolen weapons and ammunition. Seven other men were also later arrested by the RUC. One was subsequently released. Further police investigations are in hand. A military board of inquiry has been established.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers were at Coleraine Ulster Defence Regiment barracks at the time it was raided during the weekend of 21 to 23 February.

Mr. Stanley: For security reasons I cannot disclose numbers of the security forces personnel at given locations.

Trident

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the level of Trident spending in each year up to 1985-86 using 1986-87 prices and the exchange rates involved in the payments in question.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: The level of Trident spending in each year up to 1985-86, using 1986-87 prices and the exchange rates involved in the payments in question, is as follows:

	£ million
1980-81	4
1981-82	41
1982-83	88
1983-84	112
1984-85	184
1985-86	285

United States Forces

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those military installations used by United States forces in the United Kingdom at which there is no Royal Air Force station commander.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: There is an RAF station commander responsible for every military installation made available to the United States forces in this country with the exception of the Holy Loch, which falls within the sea area controlled by Commodore Clyde, and the NATO armament depots at Glen Douglas and Broughton Moor.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the functions of the Royal Air Force station commanders at United States bases in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: The primary duties of the RAF station commander and liaison officer at an RAF station made available to the United States forces are as follows:

a. The RAF commander is the senior RAF representative at the station and has the status, powers and responsibilities of a commanding officer under Queen's regulations for the Royal Air Force in respect of all RAF personnel and in respect of civilians except members of the Ministry of Defence police.

b. The RAF commander advises the United States commander on all RAF matters and maintains close liaison with all British authorities, including local government, Service and civilian authorities and with local residents generally. He also maintains regular contact with the senior RAF liaison officer at HQ Third Air Force.

c. The RAF commander attends United States staff meetings and keeps himself informed of any major changes in the base task or organisation as well as major building programmes and future building plans. He makes arrangements where necessary for the transfer or demolition of surplus RAF buildings, convening and presiding over siting and takeover boards.

d. The RAF commander is responsible for authorising the use and control of buildings housing hazardous substances. He advises the United States commander on RAF regulations governing the handling, storage and transportation of explosives within the United Kingdom.

e. The RAF commander provides guidance and all possible assistance to the community relations adviser and resolves with the United States commander any difficulties that the community relations adviser may encounter. He is responsible for receiving, investigating and replying to all complaints from British civilian sources.

f. The RAF commander is responsible for seeking security assistance if required at the station and ensuring that measures to secure the station are closely coordinated with the United States commander.

g. Where the United States commander is responsible for subsidiary stations, the authority and responsibility of the RAF commander at the station extend to those stations.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Secrets Act

90. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will set up an inquiry into the guidelines to be followed by Law Officers in consulting ministerial colleagues about the basis for warrants and prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act.

The Prime Minister: No.

Teaching Company Scheme

97. Mr. Rathbone asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Departments of Trade and Industry, the Department of Education and Science, and the Treasury regarding the funding of the teaching company scheme; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Government funding for the very successful teaching company scheme is provided through the budgets of the Department of Trade and Industry, the Science and Engineering Research Council, the Economic and Social Research Council and the Northern Ireland Office. Each is responsible for determining its overall financial commitment, whilst approval of individual programmes is co-ordinated by the teaching company management committee within the Science and Engineering Research Council. The Treasury is not directly involved in the co-ordination of funding for the scheme.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

Mr. Janner asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Vegetable Oilseeds and Oils

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will make it her policy to veto the European Commission's proposal to impose a tax on vegetable oilseeds and oils; if she will publish in the Official Report an assessment of the effect of such a tax on public health, the nourishment of those on social security, and on output and employment in (i) agriculture and (ii) the rest of the economy including the effect on imports from and exports to non-European Economic Community countries, and on the seed-growing, seed crushing and margarine industries.

The Prime Minister: We have made no detailed forecasts of the dietary or trade effects of the Commission's latest proposal for an oils and fats tax. The Government remain firmly opposed to the principle of solving the budgetary problems of the oils and fats sector by taxing consumers and exacerbating problems of international trade.

Libya (Air Raid)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Prime Minister what information she received, prior to the United States air raid on Libya in April 1986, about the precise targets of the United States planes.

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my statement to the House on 15 April 1986, we supported action directed against specific Libyan targets demonstrably involved in the conduct and support of terrorist activities.

Mr. George Robertson asked the Prime Minister if she has received any further information from the American Administration since she gave clearance for F1-11 bombers to fly from United Kingdom bases to Libya in April 1986; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We remain in regular contact with the United States authorities about Libyan involvement in terrorism.

Mr. George Robertson asked the Prime Minister what information was made available to her by the United States Administration as to the whereabouts of Colonel Gaddafi at the time of the United States air raid on Libya of April 1986.

The Prime Minister: None.

ENERGY

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Peter Walker: Expenditure recorded by financial years is as follows:

	Hardware inc. maintenance £000	Software £000
1985-86	603	192
1986-87[1]	490	190

[1] Estimate.

Provisional plans for 1987-88 envisage expenditure of £800,000 on hardware and £180,000 on software. Supply Estimates for 1987-88 will be presented to Parliament in due course.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Energy to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department has awarded contracts of £10,000 or more for computer hardware to the following companies:

Financial year 1985-86:
Apricot Computers PLC
Case Communications Limited
Hewlett Packard
IBM United Kingdom Limited
Memorex United Kingdom Limited
Prime Computers (UK) Limited.

Financial year 1986-87:
Apricot Computers PLC
Case Communications Limited
DPCE Products Limited
Equinox Computer Systems Limited
IBM United Kingdom Limited
Prime Computers (UK) Limited

For reasons of commercial confidentiality I am unable to disclose the value of individual contracts.

British Coal (Houses)

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list the number of British Coal house properties sold since 1979 to other than sitting tenants, local authorities or housing associations; and if he will list the purchasers of these properties;

(2) if he will list the number of British Coal house properties sold since 1979 to local authorities; and if he will list the purchasers in each case;

(3) if he will list the number of British Coal house properties sold since 1979 to housing associations; and if he will list the purchasers in each case.

Mr. David Hunt: This is a management matter for British Coal. I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Coal Liquefaction

Mr. Raffan asked the Secretary of State for Energy if the Government has yet been able to attract private investment for the Point of Ayr coal-to-oil liquefaction project.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand that British Coal is making good progress in finding private sector participation in this important project and I hope to make an announcement shortly. I welcome the considerable progress already made in the construction of the plant. The Department stands by its commitment to meet the £2.5 million balance of its contribution on condition that a suitable private sector participant is found.

National Energy Management Conference

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he plans to hold a national energy management conference in 1987.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have today announced that following the tremendous success of the national energy management conference and exhibition in 1986, we have decided to organise a major international exhibition and conference at the national exhibition centre in Birmingham on 28-30 June 1988. This will be the largest event of this nature ever planned in this country and will afford an excellent opportunity to exchange expertise in energy efficiency with other countries. The conference will include top level international speakers and we will aim to attract delegates from throughout the world. The exhibition will provide a major new platform for British Industry, enabling our companies to put their world-leading energy efficiency products and services before an international audience.

During 1987 there will be an extensive programme of regional energy conferences and exhibitions. We will ensure that the message of energy efficiency reaches every corner of this country in 1987 as in 1986, and build on this programme for the major new event—Energy Efficiency International—in 1988.

ENVIRONMENT

Electricity Generation

63. Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will remove the impost of rateable value from wind generators and water-powered generators of electricity for industrial and domestic use.

Mr. Chope: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave my hon. Friend on 17 December 1986 at column 579.

London Residuary Body (Transfer of Assets)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a further statement concerning the transfer of assets from the London Residuary Body to Thamesmead Town Limited.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 3 February.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce legislation to privatise the Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope: The feasibility of privatising the Crown Suppliers, in whole or in part, is still being examined by consultants who will report soon.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what decisions he has reached concerning the future of the Crown Suppliers; and if he will place a copy of the report of the central unit on purchasing in the Library.

Mr. Chope: I have reached no decisions concerning the future of the Crown Suppliers; I await the consultants' report mentioned to the hon. Member today in another answer. As the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) stated in reply to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) on 21 July 1986 the report of the central unit on purchasing is not in a form suitable for publication.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the Property Services Agency trade union side on the future of the Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope: The trade union side has made representations to the controller of the Crown Suppliers and to the consultants who are considering the feasibility of privatisation.

Local Government Act 1974

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the provisions of section 21 of the Local Government Act 1974 which prevent an amendment of valuation where an increase would be less than £30.

Mr. Chope: No. We have announced our intention of abolishing domestic rates, and section 21 with them.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will be making a formal response to the Forestry Commission's report "Forest Health and Air Pollution."

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 11 February to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), Official Report, c. 234. A formal response would not be appropriate in view of the continuing discussions on further work between my Department, the Forestry Commission and other interested bodies.

Housing (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses are planned to be built by local authorities in each Hampshire district in 1987-88, based on information contained in the housing investment programmes.

Mr. Tracey: In their housing investment programmes submitted to the Department in July 1986 district councils in Hampshire listed 1,187 dwellings which they planned to start in 1987-88 if resources were available. Of these, 679 were to be specially designed for the elderly or disabled. The figures for each district are given in the table:

Authority	Dwellings for the elderly and disabled	Other dwellings	Total
Basingstoke and Deane	42	16	58
East Hampshire	27	93	120
Eastleigh	0	30	30
Fareham	55	12	67
Gosport	32	60	92
Hart	40	0	40
Havant	0	30	30
New Forest	22	58	80
Portsmouth	60	18	78
Rushmoor	0	40	40
Southampton	215	56	271
Test Valley	93	77	170
Winchester	93	18	111

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each local authority district in Hampshire, the number of council homes sold in the last two years.

Mr. Tracey: The numbers of council house sales in the first half of 1986-87 reported by the local authorities, are as follows:

	Number
Basingstoke and Deane	177
East Hampshire	91
Eastleigh	65
Fareham	52
Gosport	72
Hart	22
Havant	94
New Forest	99
Portsmouth	253
Rushmoor	86
Southampton	248
Test Valley	97
Winchester	117

For the 1984-85 and 1985-86 figures, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction, on 18 December 1986 at column 683.

Regional Development (North-West)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish the regional development plans for the north-west of England.

Mr. Tracey: I will answer this question shortly.

Local Government Act 1986

Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will make it his policy in the proposed code of practice under the Local Government Act 1986 to draw a distinction between the impartial supply of political materials by public libraries and the promotion of political viewpoints by local authorities;

(2) what steps he is taking to consult public library interests concerning the possible effect of the proposed code of practice under the Local Government Act 1986 in order to ensure that the Act and the code do not impede the provision of a comprehensive supply of political materials by public libraries.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Arts on 18 February at column 673.

Water Authorities

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation in respect of uniform connection charges by water authorities.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

Local Authorities (Housing Subsidy)

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has decided what deemed rent increase, and what increase in reckonable expenditure on management and maintenance, should be used in calculating the entitlement of local authorities to housing subsidy in 1987-88.

Mr. John Patten: We have considered carefully the views of the local authority associations on the consultation papers about calculation of entitlement to housing subsidy for 1987-88 which were sent to them in October.

My right hon. Friend has decided, jointly with the Secretary of State for Wales, that the increase in the local contribution for 1987-88 should be 65p per dwelling per week. The purpose of this figure is to determine entitlement to housing subsidy on a common basis. It is for local authorities to decide how large a rent increase they need to apply in order to meet their requirements for expenditure. It has been decided to increase the notional allowance for management and maintenance by 3¼ per cent. over the level assumed for 1986-87. As I announced on 17 February in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, West (Mr. Jones), the calculation of subsidy entitlement will be based on an authority's actual relevant expenditure on management and maintenance in 1987-88, rather than the notional amount referred to above, if the authority's actual relevant expenditure is lower than the notional amount.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Police Inquiries (Seized Material)

Mr. Cohen asked the Attorney-General what is the practice of the police, when submitting to the Director of Public Prosecutions papers on a case concerning possible criminal offences, towards the inclusion amongst such papers of material, or copies of material, seized as a result of search warrants granted to the police during the course of their inquiries into those offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

When submitting a case to the Crown Prosecution Service the police practice is to forward all statements and documentary evidence obtained by them in the course of their investigation. This would include material, or copies of material, seized by them as a result of executing a search warrant.

CIVIL SERVICE

Relocation

Mr. Favell asked the Minister for the Civil Service how many civil servants have been relocated outside Greater London since May 1979.

Mr. Luce: Under the dispersal programme and location policy, more than 6,000 posts have been moved outside Greater London since May 1979 of which about half have involved the transfer of civil servants.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Wheat Prices

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the average ex-farm selling price of wheat in the United Kingdom for each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 and also at constant prices, showing the 1979 price as 100.

Mr. Gummer: The information is as follows:

	Ex-farm price of home-grown wheat[1] (£ per tonne)	Price index in real terms[2] (1979 = 100)
1979	95·92	100·0
1980	99·30	86·4
1981	108·92	85·0
1982	113·74	82·3
1983	124·80	86·1
1984	114·58	75·9
1985	112·23	70·3
1986	[3]112·18	67·4

[2] Deflated by price deflator of GDP at market prices.
[3] Forecast.

Beef and Butter (Bradford)

Mr. Madden asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he is satisfied with the arrangements in Bradford to distribute free beef and butter; how many needy people, to date, in Bradford have received beef and butter; what guidance was issued for the distribution of beef and butter in Bradford; what complaints he has received about the distribution of beef and butter in Bradford; what improvements or changes in the procedures for distributing beef and butter in Bradford have been introduced; how many officials in his Department were responsible for the arrangements for distributing beef and butter in Bradford; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has as to what arrangements have been made to distribute free beef and butter to needy people in Bradford; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: As I made clear on 29 January in my reply to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes), distribution of these products is for the charitable organisations concerned, who are making the appropriate arrangements in individual areas.

I know of no complaints relating to Bradford, nor have I received any requests from the organisations for changes in the overall arrangements. Figures of individual recipients either nationally or in individual geographical areas are not recorded.

THE ARTS

Children's Librarians

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts how many specialist children's librarians are employed by public library services in England; and what steps he is taking to ensure more specialist support to combat illiteracy.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Personal Equity Plans

5. Mr. Lawrence asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the most recent evidence he has of the latest response to personal equity plans.

31. Mr. Stevens asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the most recent evidence he has of the response to personal equity plans.

Mr. Lawson: The response to the new personal equity plans has been most encouraging. Latest available figures suggest that in the first month of the scheme, people invested in personal equity plans at the rate of over 2,000 a day.

Public Expenditure

16. Mr. Couchman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a further statement on the value for money achieved in public expenditure by local and central Government.

38. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the value for money achieved in public expenditure by local and central Government.

Mr. MacGregor: We must continue to get better value for taxpayers' and ratepayers' money. The public expenditure White Paper illustrated the substantial savings made so far through better management and efficiency in Government Departments.

27. Mr. Ottaway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the amount of planned public expenditure accounted for by local authorities in the year 1987-88.

52. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the amount of planned public expenditure accounted for by local authorities in the year 1987-88.

Mr. MacGregor: The planned amount for public expenditure by local authorities in 1987-88 in Great Britain is £39,520 million. This is shown in Table 4.1 of the Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmd. 56). It is 3·9 per cent. more than the estimated outturn for 1986-87 given in the White Paper and 4·6 per cent. more than the latest estimate of outturn for 1986-87.

29. Mr. Soames asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further correspondence he has had with political parties about proposals for increased public expenditure.

54. Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has had any further correspondence with political parties on proposals for increases in public expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend)

41. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the level of public expenditure.

42. Mr. Merchant asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the level of public expenditure.

58. Mr. Terlezki asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the level of public expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: None directly. But there has been a number of comments.

53. Mr. McLoughlin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure improved value for money in public sector expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley).

25. Mr. Hind asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the amount of public expenditure accounted for by local authorities in the current financial year.

59. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the amount of planned public expenditure accounted for by local authorities in the current financial year.

Mr. MacGregor: The current estimate for total public expenditure in 1986-87 by local authorities in Great Britain is £37·8 billion. This is an increase of 9 per cent. upon 1985-86 but a slight reduction from the estimate given in Table 4.1 of the Government's Public Expenditure White Paper as estimates of capital receipts have been increased.

Mr. Watts asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further correspondence he has had with political parties about proposed increases in public expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend) earlier today.

British Airways

18. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on the public sector borrowing requirement of the revenue raised by the sale of British Airways.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Proceeds from the sale of British Airways will reduce the public sector borrowing requirement by approximately £415 million in 1986-87 and by £410 million in 1987-88.

Married Man's Allowance

19. Mr. Michie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received seeking the abolition of the married man's allowance.

Mr. MacGregor: I have received a number of representations about the married man's allowance from organisations and individuals.

European Monetary System

20. Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next proposes to have discussions with the European Community Council of Ministers about the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor discusses aspects of the European monetary system with European colleagues from time to time.

Balance of Payments

21. Mr. Weetch asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his latest projections for the balance of payments in 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The next forecast for the current account of the balance of payments will be published at the time of the Budget.

Earnings Statistics

23. Mr. Gregory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many hours work it took a worker on average industrial earnings to earn sufficient to purchase basic foodstuffs in 1979 and 1986.

Mr. MacGregor: Figures for the amount of time at work needed to purchase a selection of foodstuffs in recent years are shown in table 6.9 of the 1987 edition of "Social Trends".

37. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what study his Department has conducted on the effect of wages and earnings increases which exceed the rate of inflation on employment prospects.

Mr. MacGregor: A review by Treasury officials entitled "The Relationship between Employment and Wages" was published in January 1985. Copies are available in the House of Commons Library.

56. Mr. Ashley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase since 1979 in earnings after tax, in real terms, for (a) the top decile of earners and (b) the bottom decile of earners.

Mr. Lawson: The increases, from April 1979 to April 1986, in real earnings after income tax for the highest and lowest decile of male earners are estimated at 26 per cent. and 6·8 per cent. respectively. Comparable figures for the period April 1973 to April 1979 are 0·8 per cent. and 3·6 per cent. for the highest and lowest deciles respectively. The calculations are based on a married man in full time work paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence whose only tax relief is the married man's allowance and apply the tax regimes of 1973-74, April 1979 and 1986-87.

World Debt

24. Mr. Skinner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with other Finance Ministers regarding world debt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: World debt was among the matters discussed at the annual meetings of the IMF and World Bank in Washington last September in which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer took part.

Latin America

26. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy to alleviate the financial burden of debt interest borne by countries in Latin America.

Mr. Stewart: We are continuing to work constructively with other Governments to reduce international interest rates and with international financial institutions on the provision of additional resources to countries in Latin America in support of adjustment. Together these will help to alleviate the interest cost on external indebtness owed by Latin American countries.

Pay Variations

28. Mr. Eastham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of pay variations on the United Kingdom economy.

Mr. MacGregor: The Treasury paper "The Relationship between Employment and Wages" published in January 1985, indicates that a reduction of 1 per cent. in the rate of growth of real earnings would lead in time to between 110,000 and 220,000 new jobs.

Copies of this paper are available in the House of Commons Library.

Asset Sales

30. Mr. Cabora asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest estimate of the total revenue that will be raised from special asset sales by the end of 1987.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Since 1979, privatisation proceeds accruing directly to the Exchequer have been over £11 billion. No forecasts are made for calendar years. The central estimate for 1987-88 is £5 billion.

Privatised Companies

32. Mr. Bellingham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the extent of employee participation in privatised companies.

39. Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the extent of employee participation in privatised companies.

43. Mr. Ward asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the extent of employee share ownership in privatised companies.

Mr. Norman Lamont: About 90 per cent. of employees in privatised companies floated on the stock market have become shareholders.

Mr. Amess asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will outline the further proposals of the Government's privatisation policy in this Parliament.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Preparations are now well in hand for the privatisation of Rolls-Royce, Royal Ordnance and BAA (formerly the British Airports Authority). The National Bus Company's programme to dispose of its subsidiaries will also continue.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

33. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the public sector borrowing requirement for the current financial year.

Mr. MacGregor: Both the 1986 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" and the "Autumn Statement" (Cm 14) envisaged a PSBR for 1986-87 of around £7 billion. It is now clear that the PSBR will undershoot this figure. A further estimate will be published next month in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Share Ownership

34. Mrs. Roe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the current extent of direct share ownership by individuals.

40. Mr. Leigh asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the current extent of direct share ownership by individuals.

44. Mr. Gale asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the current extent of direct share ownership by individuals.

50. Mr. Wood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the latest estimate of the scale of direct share ownership by individuals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Our stategy of widening shareownership through employee share schemes, privatisation, and now personal eqity plans, has reversed the previous trend away from direct shareownership by individuals, with the result that the number of individual shareowners may now have roughly trebled since 1979.

Banks (Supervision)

35. Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next plans to meet representatives of the Bank of England to discuss official supervision procedures for authorised banks operating in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 17 February at columns 545.

Interest Rates

36. Mr. Redmond asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the present level of interest rates.

45. Mr. Latham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a further statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Howarth).

Retired People

46. Mr. Hirst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of retired people who are paying income tax on incomes which amount to less than half the average national wage.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that in 1986-87 about 950,000 single people and married couples aged 65 or over pay income tax on total income for income tax purposes of less than half average male full time earnings.

Value Added Tax

47. Mr. Straw asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding a rise in the rates of value added tax.

57. Dr. Marek asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding a widening of the base of value added tax.

Mr. Brooke: A few.

62. Mr. Amess asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the late payment of value added tax from small businesses.

Mr. Brooke: A number, mainly in conjunction with complaints about delays on the part of business customers in settling accounts and the default surcharge on persistent late payment of VAT which was introduced on 1 October 1986. As announced in "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9793) there will be a full review of the operation of the surcharge, in the light of a full year's experience before the 1988 Budget.

Mr. Evans asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current estimate of revenue to be raised this financial year from value added tax.

Mr. Brooke: The next forecast for VAT revenue in 1986-87 will be made at the time of the Budget.

Economic Policy Co-ordination

48. Mr. Duffy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will initiate an early meeting of the Group of Five Finance Ministers with a view to greater economic policy co-ordination among the leading industrial countries.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Finance Ministers of the group of Five nations meet from time to time to discuss a range of international economic issues.

Economic Growth

49. Dr. Godman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next plans to meet his colleagues on the National Economic Development Council to discuss the prospects for growth in the economy.

Mr. MacGregor: The next meeting of the national Economic Development Council is on Wednesday 4 March. The prospects for economic growth are regularly discussed in the Council.

Budget

51. Mr. Canavan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has now received about his forthcoming Budget statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations.

Tobacco Duty

55. Mr. Roger King asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received concerning the level of tobacco duty.

Mr. Brooke: My right hon. Friend has received numerous representations from a wide range of bodies and individuals, which will be carefully considered.

Manufactured Goods

60. Mr. Strang asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the likely balance of trade in manufacture of goods for the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The next forecast for the balance of trade in manufactures will be published at Budget time.

Higher Rate Income Tax

61. Mr. Maples asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in real terms in the yield from higher rate income tax between 1978-79 and 1985-86.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The total tax liability resulting from the difference between the higher rates of income tax and the basic rate rose by about 30 per cent. in real terms between 1978-79 and 1985-86. The increase in real terms has been calculated by reference to the movement in the retail prices index.

FIMBRA

Mr. Hardy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on the participation of building societies in FIMBRA; and if he will review the minimum capital requirement for membership of this regulatory body.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Building societies which wish to undertake investment business will have to be authorised to do so under the Financial Services Act. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has received the Securities and Investment Board's request for the transfer to it of powers under the Act. If powers are transferred, it will be for the board to decide what self regulatory organisations are to be recognised. The rules of SROs are a matter for the bodies concerned, not for me.

Unemployment (Cost)

Mr. Haynes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 376, he will take steps to prepare estimates of the cost to the Exchequer of the recent level of unemployment in the east midlands.

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 376, he will take steps to prepare estimates of the cost to the Exchequer of the current level of unemployment in the north-west.

Mr. Dixon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 376, he will take steps to procure estimates of the cost to the Exchequer of the current level of unemployment in the northern region.

Mr. Boyes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 376, he will take steps to procure estimates of the cost to the Exchequer of the current level of unemployment in the northern region.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 376, he will take steps to prepare estimates of the cost to the Exchequer of the current level of unemployment in Scotland.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) earlier today.

Output Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the output per head of the working population, excluding the extraction of oil and gas from both the numerator and the denominator, in each year since 1972.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing total output in the production industries less the extraction of oil and gas in each year since 1980 divided by the working population in manufacturing, including the unemployed.

Mr. MacGregor: I regret that it is not possible to compile estimates in the way requested.

Land and Buildings (Sales)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount raised by the sale of land and buildings since May 1979.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on 27 January 1987 (Official Report, c. 229-30).

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Christopher Hawkins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest relief claimed in respect of marginal rates of income tax above the basic rate;

(2) if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of raising the limit for mortgage interest relief by steps of £1,000 from £30,000 to £40,000 in respect of relief at basic rate only.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 748, concerning transferable allowances, he will set out the numbers gaining and losing by income level, and the average gain and loss per individual or tax unit at each income level.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to Annex 4 of the Green Paper "The Reform of Personal Taxation", in particular table 5.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Defence Exports

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas) of 18 February, Official Report, column 631, if he will give the corresponding percentage for each year since 1978 of total visible exports accounted for by defence exports.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

Defence exports as a percentage of United Kingdom total visible exports

Years	Percentage
1978	1·1
1979	0·9
1980	1·1
1981	1·2

Regional Aid

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list, by region, the amount granted in regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act 1982 (a) in each financial year since the scheme's inception and (b) planned expenditure to 1989-90, providing figures for each at current and outturn prices.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested by region for the years 1972-73 to 1986-87 is as follows:

	Scotland	Wales	North East	North West	Yorkshire/ Humberside	East Midlands	West Midlands	South West	Great Britain

[1] 1986-87 data is provisional and for the first three quarters of the year only.
[2] Expenditure on a 1986 price basis for each year is calculated by applying the appropriate deflator to expenditure at current prices.

The figures for 1972-73 to 1986-87 exclude expenditure on the exchange risk guarantee scheme and aid for small and medium-sized firms under specific European regional development fund non-quota measures, as it is not possible to provide a breakdown of these items by English region.

For 1987-88 to 1989-90 it is not possible to provide a breakdown by English region as estimates of regional assistance are produced for England as a whole. The provision for regional selective assistance in England, Scotland and Wales, as incorporated in the public expenditure White Paper, is as follows:

	England	Scotland	Wales	Great Britain
At current prices (£ million)
1987-88	124	53	45	222
1988-89	145	54	46	245
1989-90	126	44	47	217
At 1986 prices (£ million) [1]
1987-88	118	50	43	211
1988-89	133	50	42	225
1989-90	113	39	42	194

[1] Expenditure on a 1986 price basis for each year is calculated by applying the appropriate deflator to expenditure at current prices.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the changes which have been made in the regulations regarding his Department's expenditure on regional aid to industry since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987]: The information is as follows:

Date	Change	Authority

Date	Change	Authority
17 February 1987	Simplified procedures and applications forms announced for RSA applications of £25,000 or under.	Announced by the Minister of State for Industry in a written answer on 17 February 1987.

Note:
Changes resulting from European Community regulations are not included.

Foreign Consignee Status

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, he will list the foreign countries operating a system based on foreign consignee status.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am not aware of any country other than the United States which operates a system of export licensing involving foreign consignee status for some companies.

Securities and Investment Board

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish the statement of assumptions on which the Securities and Investment Board based chapter 7 of its draft rules, and the Securities and Investment Board paper intituled "Proposals for Charging Fees"; and whether he will extend the time for investment counselling practitioners to comment to him upon the draft rules until they shall have had reasonable time to consider the assumptions on which the draft rules are based.

Mr. Howard: The paper entitled "Proposals for Charging Fees" outlines the assumptions on which the board's fees proposals are based. It was made publicly available in December and comments were invited. The board took the comments it received into account before submitting its application to the Secretary of State to become the designated agency. I do not consider that it is necessary to extend the time for investment counselling practitioners to comment to the Secretary of State on the draft rules.

Leyland-DAF

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees of Rover Group and its subsidiaries will become employees of the proposed Leyland-DAF joint venture.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Approximately 7,000 United Kingdom employees of Rover Group and its subsidiaries will become employees of the proposed Leyland-DAF joint venture.

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the value of the assets of Rover Group to be transferred to the Leyland-DAF joint venture.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is envisaged that net assets valued at £179 millions will be transferred to the Leyland-DAF joint venture on completion.

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many directors of the Leyland-DAF joint venture will be appointed by Leyland and how many by DAF.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davies) on Monday 23 February 1987 at column 14.

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will deposit a draft of the proposed Leyland-DAF joint venture agreement in the Library.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The essential elements of the proposed Leyland-DAF joint venture were given to the House in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement on 19 February 1987 at columns 1059-73. The detailed contractual negotiations are commercially confidential and therefore I am unable to place a document in the Library.

Internal Market Council

Sir Philip Holland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report on the Internal Market Council held on 24 February.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Internal Market Council, at which I represented the United Kingdom, discussed directives on a general system for the recognition of higher education diplomas for the purposes of professional qualifications, on a right of residence for EC nationals in the Territory of another member state, and on controls and formalities applicable to EC nationals when crossing intra-Community borders; a Council Decision on extending the Community's programme for the Transnational development of the supporting infrastructure for innovation (the SPRINT Programme); and the entry into force of the Community Patent Convention.

Extraterritoriality

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report each occasion on which he has made an order or given directions under the Protection of Trading Interests Act 1980; if he will specify in each case the section or sections of the Act under which the order was made or the directions were given, the person or persons to whom they applied, and their purpose and their effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 20 February 1987; c. 879]: The information requested is as follows:

On 3 March 1981 a section 2 direction was issued to a United Kingdom company to prohibit compliance with a demand by the United States Commodity Futures Trading Commission to provide it with commercial information located outside the United States.

On 30 June 1982, a section 1(1) Order, (S.I 1982 No. 885) was applied to the United States West Siberian pipeline re-export controls. Such an Order brings into operation the Secretary of State's powers under sections 1(2), 1(3) and 2 of the Act.

On 2 August 1982 section 1(3) directions were issued to AFF Ltd., Baker Oil Tools (United Kingdom) Ltd., John Brown Engineering Ltd., and Smith International (North Sea) Ltd., to prohibit compliance with the United States West Siberian pipeline re-export controls.

On 10 September 1982 section 1(3) directions were issued to Andrew Corporation and the Walter Kidde Company Ltd., to prohibit compliance with the United States West Siberian pipeline re-export controls.

On 2 November, 1982 a section 1(3) direction was issued to Seaco Sales and Services (North Sea) Ltd. to prohibit compliance with the United States West Siberian pipeline controls.

On 23 June 1982 a section 1(1) Order, (S.I. 1983 No. 900) was applied to sections 1 and 2 of the United States Sherman Act and sections 4 and 4A of the United States Clayton Act in cases where United Kingdom airlines designated under the Bermuda 2 Agreement concerning air services are parties to agreements, or other acts, concerning tariffs or which otherwise relate to the operation of an air service athorised under the Bermuda 2 agreement.

On 23 June 1983 a section 1(3) general direction was issued prohibiting any person in the United Kingdom carrying on business from complying with the United States anti-trust measures in relation to the cases described in the section 1(1) order of 23 June 1983.

On 23 June 1983 a section 2 general direction was issued prohibiting any person in the United Kingdom from complying with any requirement from the United States Department of Justice or the grand jury to produce commercial documents located in the United Kingdom or any information concerning possible violations of sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act by United Kingdom designated airlines. The direction also applied to any requirement from the United States District Court of Columbia concerning similar matters, which were subject to civil anti-trust proceedings.

On 1 July 1983 a further section 2 general direction was made to clarify the scope of the section 2 general direction issued on 23 June 1983.

On 16 July 1984 a general direction under section 2 was issued prohibiting any person in the United Kingdom from complying with any requirement from the United States District Court of Columbia to produce commercial documents in the United Kingdom, or any commercial information in respect of further United States civil anti-trust proceedings against United Kingdom designated airlines.

On 29 March 1986 a general direction under section 2 was issued prohibiting any person in the United Kingdom from complying with any requirement from the United States District Court of Columbia to produce commercial documents in the United Kingdom, or any commercial information, in respect of further United States civil anti-trust proceedings against United Kingdom designated airlines.

Machinery Investment

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures to show how much was invested in new machinery per worker in 1975, 1980, 1985 and at the latest available date; and what comparative information he has for the United States of America, Germany, France, Japan and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development average for the same years.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: Data on new investment in plant and machinery are not readily available for all countries. The available information on investment in machinery and transport equipment is given in the following table:

Investment in machinery and transport equipment per worker[1]

	United Kingdom	United States	Federal Republic of Germany	France	Japan	OECD[2]

NORTHERN IRELAND

Restart Programme

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the restart programme in Northern Ireland, indicating how many people have been interviewed and giving a breakdown on how these interviews have been followed up.

Mr. Viggers: By 8 January 1987 34,523 people had received a counselling interview under the restart programme in Northern Ireland, 2,376 subsequently ceased to claim benefits as unemployed but we have no means of knowing how many of them found jobs or training places; 83 per cent. of those interviewed received offers of available opportunities. The immediate outcome of these offers was:

304 were placed directly into jobs.
311 were placed into training.
120 were placed directly on the Enterprise Allowance Scheme and so became self-employed.
1,342 were placed on Restart Courses.
85 were placed in Jobclubs.
127 were placed in voluntary work.
4,684 were referred to other specialists and services.

The above figures for placing reflect only those arising directly from referrals made during the Restart interview. They do not reflect people who later find jobs, or other solutions to their unemployment, wholly or partly as a result of advice given by counselling staff or Restart Courses. The Department of Economic Development does not follow the progress of individuals once they have been counselled under Restart.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advertising or public information proposals there are to ensure that people in Northern Ireland are aware that the backdated claims for invalid care allowance by married women can be made up until August 1987 in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The announcement on 19 January 1987 about the extension of the deadline to 31 August 1987 for backdating claims for invalid care allowance by married women received widespread coverage in the media. A notice giving details of the extension is being issued with each ICA leaflet and claim form and further publicity will be given to the extension by means of press advertisements during the spring and early summer. All persons receiving attendance allowance were supplied in September 1986 with a notice informing their carers that they might be eligible to receive ICA and since that date a similar notice has been issued to each new attendance allowance beneficiary.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the proposals on the draft Public Orders (Northern Ireland) Orders 1986 and the Flags and Emblems (Display) Act (Northern Ireland) 1954 put forward by the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference at its meeting in Belfast on 8 December 1986; and what response was made by the British side.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Remands

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons were remanded in custody before trial for scheduled, non-scheduled offences and both together in 1986;

(2) how many prisoners were remanded in custody prior to trial for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, in 1986.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 462]: In 1986, 1,214 persons were remanded-in-custody for scheduled offences and 779 for non-scheduled offences.

SCOTLAND

Schoolchildren (Learning Difficulties)

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children there are in primary and secondary schools in each education authority in Scotland; and of these how many have been identified as having specific learning difficulties at the most recent convenient date for which figures are available.

Mr. John MacKay: The latest available information for education authority schools is set out in the table:

	Primary (1984)		Secondary (1983)

Inverclyde Initiative

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has now received the Scottish Development Agency's report on the Inverclyde initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received the report on the Inverclyde initiative which he requested from the Scottish Development Agency. He is considering the report in light of all the representations to him about the economic problems of the area, and hopes to announce his conclusions shortly.

Argyll and Clyde Health Board

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many chiropodists are currently employed by the Agyll and Clyde health board; and what is the equivalent funded establishment number of chiropodists for the Argyll and Clyde health board.

Mr. John MacKay: The number of chiropodists in post at 30 September 1986 was 28·9 whole-time equivalent. The funded establishment number at the same date was 36·9 whole-time equivalent.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current waiting list for chiropody treatment in each of the health board areas in Scotland; and how many of those on the lists are (a) men and (b) women aged 65 years and over.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not available centrally.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the numbers employed within Argyll and Clyde health board by main staff group; and what are the equivalent figures for 1981.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows and relates to whole time equivalent staff employed by the board as at 30 September of each year:

	1981	1986[1]
Medical/Dental	352·6	342·3
Nursing/Midwifery	4,525·3	4,694·9
Scientific/Professions Allied to Medicine	2482	280·7

All Staff	8,603·4	8,607·5

[1] Provisional.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many effective blood donors there have been in Argyll and Clyde health board in each year since 1980; and how many blood donations were made in each year.

Mr. John MacKay: The west of Scotland region of the Scottish national blood transfusion service covers the areas of six health boards. In the area of Argyll and Clyde health board, the total number of donors and donations taken are:

	Donors	Donations
1980	9,285	8,720
1981	10,852	9,878
1982	11,435	10,342
1983	11,465	10,383
1984	12,862	11,536
1985	14,297	12,215
1986	14,499	13,621

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many smears for cervical cytology examinations have been taken in Argyll and Clyde health board area in each of the past five years; and what proportion were positive in each year.

Mr. John MacKay: The numbers of cervical cytology examinations carried out in the Argyll and Clyde health board area for the years 1981 to 1985 inclusive are shown in the following table. Data for 1986 are not yet available.

Year	Number of examinations	Percentage positive
1981	25,990	n/a
1982	23,829	0·176
1983	27,151	0·195
1984	28,946	n/a
1985	35,195	0·224

Disabled People (Assistance)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish information for (a) Strathclyde region and (b) Greenock and Port Glasgow for each year since 1981 showing the number of disabled people receiving assistance with telephone installations, telephone attachments, telephone rental, television supply, television licence, radio supply, other personal aids, assistance with holidays; and how many places there were for the mentally ill at day centres and adult training centres.

Mr. John MacKay: Local authority statistical returns of persons in need who have been provided with assistance do not distinguish disabled persons from others. Returns for Strathclyde region identify recipients of assistance by districts defined for local management purposes.

The available information for persons assisted and places provided in Strathclyde region is as follows:

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986[1]
(a) Persons Assisted
Telephone Installation	179	190	208	269	294	281

Restart

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish figures showing for each of the district wards in the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency the number of people taken off the unemployment register as a result of the restart programme, the proportion of those people who have found full-time jobs, and the number of people currently on Government training schemes.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested. A total of 524 people from the Greenock and Port Glasgow jobcentres have ceased to claim benefit since being identified under the restart programme. It is impossible, however, to determine how many of these left the unemployment register as a direct result of either the invitation to attend or the counselling itself. Between 1 July 1986, the date on which the restart programme commenced, and 12 February 1987, the numbers of people from the Greenock and Port Glasgow jobcentres who were placed in employment or in one of the Government's employment, enterprise or training schemes as a consequence of restart interviews were as shown in the table below.

	Number
Commenced employment	6
Placed on community programme	27
Placed in jobclub	81
Started own business under enterprise allowance scheme	12
MSC training course	6
Employment rehabilitation	9
Restart courses	265

In addition a number of people were referred to other specialist services — professional and executive recruitment, disablement resettlement officer, careers service, et cetera.

No statistics are available to indicate how many of those placed on restart courses have subsequently obtained employment or other forms of training.

Caledonian-MacBrayne (Ferry)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to give approval for the ordering of a new Caledonian-MacBrayne ferry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Caledonian MacBrayne has submitted a proposal to build a new passenger/car ferry and my right hon. and learned Friend hopes to give them his decision soon. The ordering of any new vessel will, as is normal, be subject to competitive tender.

Unemployment (Economic Implications)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has made an assessment of the implications for the Scottish economy of the current level of unemployment in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The increase in unemployment in Scotland over the past year can largely be explained by the fall in oil-related employment. Based on the results of the latest MSC survey, it is estimated that employment in wholly oil-related firms in Scotland fell by over 14,000 between December 1985 and December 1986, and total Scottish employment by some 1 per cent. It is important to preserve as much as possible of our oil-related capacity to take advantage of any upturn in demand.

The Government's economic policies, by creating the conditions for sustained economic growth and low inflation, offer the best hope of a lasting reduction in unemployment. Scotland benefits from regional policy and the activities of the SDA and HIDB, as well as a wide range of employment and training measures.

Manufacturing Investment

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow since 1980.

Mr. Lang: The percentage fall in the real value of manufacturing investment in Scotland between 1980 and 1984 (the latest year for which information is available) is estimated to have been 25 per cent. Information about changes in this period is not available for individual regions and areas within Scotland.

Theft

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest information on the incidence of theft from farmhouses and buildings in Scotland; and how this compares with the position in 1983.

Mr. Lang: This information is not collected centrally.

Prisoners (Police Stations)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners are being held in police stations during the Scottish prison officers' industrial action; how many are in designated cells; and how many convicted prisoners are being held in cells other than designated cells.

Mr. Lang: At 6 pm on 25 February, 121 prisoners were being held in police stations, none in legalised police cells. Of that number 68 were convicted prisoners.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 23 February, at what time on Friday 30 January a Strathclyde police officer telephoned his official about the intended police raid on the British Broadcasting Corporation's premises in Glasgow; what was the grade of the official concerned; in what division of the Scottish Office he worked; and what reason was given to him for the telephone call.

Mr. Rifkind: A grade 7 officer in the police division of the Scottish Home and Health Department was telephoned between 11 am and 12 noon. As regards the reason for the telephone call, I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 19 February.

Health and Social Services (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the per capita spending on health and personal social services in cash terms and 1986-87 prices each year since 1979 to the latest available date for (a) all ages, (b) births, (c) 0 to four years, (d) five to 15 years, (e) 16 to 64 years (f) 65 to 74 years and (g) 75 years and over, giving the amount spent on (i) personal social services, (ii) family practitioner services, (iii) hospital and community health services and (iv) total in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 709]: The information most closely available to that sought is as follows:

Notes:

1. Information about expenditure on personal social services by age group is not maintained.
2. An analysis of total expenditure by age group on health services in Scotland (which include a number of servces financed centrally) is not available.
3. Details of health service expenditure by age group for 1979-80 and for 1982-83 are not available.
4. Per capita spending at 1986-87 prices has been calculated by application of the appropriate GDP deflator factors at market prices.
5. The hospital and community health services figures given include spending on the ambulance and blood transfusion service which are financed through the Common Services Agency.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Consultants

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to increase the number of consultants.

Mr. Newton: At 30 September 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 13,785 consultants in post in England. The average rate of expansion since 1981 has been 2·15 per cent. per annum.

The proposals in the consultative document "Hospital Medical Staffing: Achieving a Balance" recommend that this basic rate of expansion should be maintained. In addition, the document proposes a pump-priming scheme for 100 extra consultant posts over two years. Funding for this scheme, amounting to £8·6 million over the next three years, was announced on 5 February and health authorities have been invited to submit bids for the posts. "Achieving a Balance" also contains proposals to further increase the number by converting surplus registrar and senior registrar posts to consultant.

Local Office Staffs

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many of the trained staff at the Department of Health and Social Security office in Blenheim grove, Camberwell, have been in post for more than 12 months;

(2) if any extra staff have been allocated to the Department of Health and Social Security office at Blenheim grove, Camberwell, as a result of the office being located on two sites;

(3) how many staff are allocated to the Department of Health and Social Security in Blenheim grove, Camberwell; and how many are currently in post at the Department of Health and Social Security office in Blenheim grove.

Mr. Lyell: The number of staff currently allocated to the Department's office in Blenheim grove, Camberwell is 135. Within this allocation is one post given because the office is located on two sites. On 1 February 1987, the latest date for which information is available, there were 133 staff in post. Of these, 99 have more than 12 months experience in the Department as a whole. Ninety-four have been in post at Camberwell for more than 12 months.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Hornchurch on 8 December 1986, Official Report, column 67, when he expects to have received all the likely accommodation in Hornchurch capable of housing under one roof his Department's staff serving the constituents of the hon. Member for Hornchurch.

Mr. Lyell: As soon as the review of the Department's local office accommodation requirements in the Hornchurch area has been completed, action will be taken to seek suitable premises.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Hornchurch on 8 December 1986, Official Report, column 67, whether he is now in a position to finalise the accommodation requirements for the Department of Health and Social Security staff currently working in separate buildings in Hornchurch and Romford.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the statistical information required to complete the review of the accommodation requirements is not yet available. As I promised in my earlier reply, I will let my hon. Friend have a full reply as soon as the review has been completed.

Benefits

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in the London borough of Southwark have been in receipt of (a) supplementary benefit and (b) housing in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: The numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit in the London borough of Southwark in the years 1981—the earliest figures available—to 1985—the latest figures available—were:

	Number
1981	24,000
1982	29,000
1983	30,000
1984	32,000

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in (a) Burnley constituency and (b) Pendle constituency have been in receipt of (i) supplementary benefit and (ii) housing benefit in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: The constituencies of Burnley and Pendle are covered by the Department's local office at Burnley. The table shows the number of people receiving supplementary benefit from that office on 10 February 1987 and on comparable dates since 1979. Separate figures for the Burnley and Pendle constituencies cannot be provided.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants received payments for additional requirements at local offices in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the past five years.

Mr. Major: In 1984 (the latest year for which this information is available) 298,000 supplementary benefit claimants in Scotland were receiving an additional requirement. A comparable figure for 1983 is not immediately available but I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply with this information as soon as possible. The information for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I regret that the other information requested is not available.

Source: 1984 Annual statistical inquiry.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many new claims for supplementary benefit were registered in local offices in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow in each year since 1980 by claimants aged under 25 years.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average weekly payment of supplementary benefit paid to claimants aged under 25 years in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not immediately available about the average weekly payment of supplementary benefit paid to claimants aged under 25 years in Scotland but I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply as soon as possible. Information about Strathclyde region and Greenock and Port Glasgow is not available.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount paid to social security claimants in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow for additional requirements in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: In 1984 (the latest year for which this information is available) supplementary benefit claimants in Scotland received additional requirements amounting to about £50 million. A comparable figure for 1983 is not immediately available but I shall give the hon. Member a further reply as soon as possible; however, those for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I regret that the other information requested is not available.

[2] Figures for 1986-87 are provisional and cover the period to 10 February 1987 only.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many appeals against decisions relating to single payments for those people on supplementary benefit are currently being dealt with by the local officer serving (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow; and what were the comparable numbers for one year ago.

Mr. Lyell: National administrative statistics for social security appeals are not disaggregated below regional level. The most recent figures available are for the quarter ended 30 June 1986, when the total number of appeals relating to supplementary benefit single payments awaiting a decision in Scotland was 10,303, compared to 7,617 for the quarter ended 30 June 1985.

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons resident in Newcastle upon Tyne, North constituency are at present in receipt of social security benefits.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not available in the precise form requested. Newcastle upon Tyne, North constituency is covered by the Department's local office of Newcastle St. James but its boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency.

On 10 February 1987—the latest figures available—the numbers of people receiving locally administered social security benefits from that office were:

	Number
Sickness and Invalidity Benefit	3,714
Maternity Allowance	293
Severe Disablement Allowance	779
Supplementary Benefit	16,987

Information is not available in respect of centrally paid benefits (for example retirement pension) showing the number of beneficiaries in any particular locality.

Housing benefit is administered by the local authority and the number of recipients in the city of Newcastle in the autumn of 1986—the latest date for which information is available—was 62,950.

Separate figures for individual parts of the local authority cannot be provided.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of people in receipt of unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit in St. Helens, South at the latest date available.

Mr. Lyell: The information is not available in the precise form requested. St. Helens South constituency is covered by three unemployment benefit offices at St. Helens A and B, and Widnes, and by the Department's local office at St. Helens. The boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency. The number of persons receiving unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit from these offices were:

At 14 August 1986

	UB only	UB and SA	SA only
St. Helens 'A' UBO	1,219	275	3,593
St. Helens 'B' UBO	1,150	218	3,225
Widnes UBO	941	228	2,688

At 10 February 1987

	SA	SP
At 10 February 1987
St. Helens DHSS office	5,534	5,534

Notes:
SA = Supplementary Allowance
SP = Supplementary Pension

12:

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total amount of supplementary benefit paid out to Welsh claimants in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Lyell: The information is as follows:

Financial Year	£ million[3]
1979-80	125
1980-81	170
1981-82	275
1982-83	358
1983-84	[1]334
[2]1984-85	374

Notes:
[1]Reduction because, with the introduction of housing benefit, most financial support for housing costs is now provided through that scheme.
[2] Latest available date.
[3] Estimate.

Mr. Winnick: asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number and percentage of those of working age in receipt of supplementary benefit in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the borough of Walsall in May 1979 and at present.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to his reply, 19 February 1987, c. 823]: The black country area of the west midlands is covered by eight of the Department's local offices at Dudley North and South, Smethwick, Walsall East and West, West Bromwich and Wolverhampton North and South. The borough of Walsall is covered by the two Walsall local offices.

The number of people of working age receiving supplementary benefit in (a) the west midlands region, (b) the black country area of the west midlands and (c) the borough of Walsall, on 15 May 1979 and 10 February 1987—the latest available figures—and the percentage of all supplementay benefit recipients in those areas on those dates were:

	1979	Percentage of all supplementary benefit recipients	1987+	Percentage of all supplementary benefit recipients
West midlands	126,331	44·1	379,680	69·4
Black country	26,623	38·9	83,647	68·1
Walsall	6,381	40·9	21,967	70·5

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

The west midlands region was merged with part of east midlands and East Anglia region in 1982 to form the present midlands region. But for the sake of consistency, the table shows, for 1987, the total figures for those offices which were formerly part of west midlands region.

NHS (Pay Comparability)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what research he has done into the effect on the National Health Service of the ending of comparability of pay between medical academic staff and National Health Service staff.

Mr. Newton: The Government remain committed to the principle that the pay of clinical academic staff should be linked to that of doctors and dentists in the National Health Service. The clinical academic staff salaries committee has notified universities of increases in pay for clinical academics in line with those made to National Health Service doctors following the report of the Doctors and Dentists Review Body. I therefore see no need for research of the kind suggested by the hon. Member.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to visit the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale health authority to look at the hospitals at present under threat of closure.

Mr. Newton: I plan to visit Hartley hospital on 6 March.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide the number of households in Scotland in receipt of housing benefit for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive, showing the numbers of (a) public sector tenants in receipt of rent rebates only, (b) public sector tenants in receipt of rate rebates only, (c) public sector tenants in receipt of both rent and rate rebates, (d) private sector tenants in receipt of rent allowance only, (e) private sector tenants in receipt of rate rebates only, (f) private sector tenants in receipt of both rent allowances and rate rebates and (g) owner-occupiers in receipt of rate rebates.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he has taken to implement the recommendations of the committee of inquiry into unnecessary dental treatment.

Mrs. Currie: I am pleased to announce that 32 of the committee's 52 recommendations have been or are in the process of being implemented. Active discussions are taking place about the implementation of a further 15. Progress on the major proposals is summarised as follows.

The Dental Estimates Board was supplied with a new more powerful computer last year and work to develop better control systems is at an advanced stage. A statistician has been seconded from my Department to assist the board with this work. To improve liaison between the board and the dental profession, the board has started publishing occasional newsletters, which will inform dentists of the board's views on certain treatments including those requiring the board's prior approval.

The prior approval requirements themselves are under review and proposals will be discussed with the profession in the near future. As already announced a committee has begun work to consider methods of assisting the board in the assessment of the need for orthodontic treatment.

To improve standards of treatment a new vocational training scheme for dentists wishing to enter general dental practice is to be introduced on 1 January 1988. This voluntary scheme is being introduced with the co-operation of the dental profession which we welcome.

Information to patients on dental treatment has been revised in a leaflet issued in July last year. It includes details of the complaints procedure (which is also the subject of separate consultations as part of the consultations in progress on the complaints procedure for family practitioner services as a whole.) Advice has been issued to family practitioner committees on their role in monitoring and detecting unnecessary treatment. Consultations have begun with the FPCs and other interested bodies on amendments to the legal procedures which provide sanctions against dentists who are providing excessive treatment.

The staffing of the Department's dental reference services has been increased and a study has been started with the objective of improving the effectiveness of the DRS.

In these ways I am satisfied that considerable progress has been, and is being, made.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of part-time and full-time employees in the National Health Service in Great Britain in (a) 1960, (b) 1970, (c) 1980, (d) 1981, (e) 1982, (f) 1983, (g) 1984, (h) 1985 and (i) 1986; and if he will show the increase in each year.

Mr. Newton I am sorry that I am unable to provide all the information my hon. Friend has asked for. Figures for 1960 and 1970 are not available on a comparable basis to those for the other years. Figures for 1986 are not yet available to the level of detail requested. The other figures are shown in the table.

Health Services (Statistics)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many people are employed in the health services in the United Kingdom, the United States of America, France and West Germany; and what percentage of the population these figures represent.

Mr. Newton I am sorry I cannot provide all the information my hon. Friend has asked for. Figures for other countries are not available centrally. The figures for the United Kingdom are shown in the table.

Total NHS Directly Employed Staff:[1] 30 September 1985

United Kingdom	Numbers

Health Care (North-West)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the national average cost of health care per man, woman and child; and what is the comparable figure for the north-west region.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Family Credit

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the number of families in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow who will be entitled to receive family credit; how many of them will be entitled to continue receiving free school meals; and what is the likely take-up of this award in each of the three above.

Mr. Major: I regret that it is not possible to make reliable estimates on such a localised basis. Overall, family credit is expected to reach about double the number of families now helped by family income supplement. This is consistent with a take-up rate of 60 per cent. Only families receiving income support will be entitled to free school meals, but the rates of family credit will be set at a higher level so as to give extra cash help instead.

Family Income Supplement

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many families in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow currently receive family income supplement; what is the average weekly sum received by each family; and how many children in these families are entitled to free school meals as a result.

Mr. Major: I regret that information is not available relating to Strathclyde nor to Greenock and Port Glasgow. However, in Scotland at April 1986, the latest date for which information is available, there were a total of 24,000 families in receipt of family income supplement and the average weekly amount in payment was £13·50. The number of school age children, all those over five years, was 33,000 and they would be eligible for free school meals.

Social Fund

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the change in expenditure by his Department from the introduction of the social fund in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow; how many payments he estimates will be made from this fund in each of the three; and what is the estimated average amount of payment.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins) 23 February at column 123.

Pensioners

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners were in receipt of social security payments in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Greenock and Port Glasgow in 1986; how many of these will be required to pay 20 per cent. of their rates bill; what will be the average weekly payment by such citizens towards rates on the assumption that their rates liabilities will remain unchanged from 1986-87; and how many such citizens will be paying rates for the first time when the new requirement comes into force.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the average waiting time between diagnosis and treatment for those women found to have severe cervical dysplasia over the last four months in North-East Thames regional health authority;

(2) what is the average waiting time between diagnosis and treatment for those women found to have severe cervical dysplasia over the last four months in Islington district health authority;

(3) what is the average waiting time between diagnosis and treatment for those women found to have cervical carcinoma in situ over the last four months in the North-East Thames regional health authority;

(4) what is the average waiting time between diagnosis and treatment for those women found to have cervical carcinoma in situ over the last four months in Islington district health authority;

(5) what is the number of women in the Islington district health authority area who are on the waiting list for treatment for cervical carcinoma in situ, broken down by hospital;

(6) what is the number of women in the North-East Thames regional health authority who are on the waiting list for treatment for severe cervical dysplasia;

(7) what is the number of women in the North-East Thames regional health authority area who are on the waiting list for treatment for cervical carcinoma in situ;

(8) what is the number of women in the Islington district health authority area who are on the waiting list for treatment for severe cervical dysplasia, broken down by hospital.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry that I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. Waiting list information is held centrally by the specialty of treatment and not by diagnosis. On waiting time, the numbers in the central data sample are too small for reliable estimates to be made below regional level or for part of a year. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairmen of the Islington district health authority and North East Thames regional health authority for the information required.

Asthma (Deaths)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he has taken to reduce deaths from asthma since 1978.

Mrs. Currie: There are many causes of asthma requiring different forms of treatment. Despite improvements in these treatments deaths from asthma continue to increase. This emphasises the need for research. The Department supports a research project in prevalence and treatment in asthma at St. Thomas's hospital at an estimated cost of £65,000. The Medical Research Council also supports research in this field. In 1985-86 MRC expenditure on projects with relevance to asthma totalled £599,000.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give (a) the daily mean temperature and (b) the weekly mean temperature for the 64 Department of Health and Social Security weather stations for the weeks beginning 1 February and 8 February 1987.

Mr. Major: The Department receives information from the Meteorological Office for 63 weather stations in respect of seven-day periods beginning each Monday. The information requested for the weeks commencing Monday 2 February and 9 February is as follows:

Pharmacists

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of registered pharmacists employed in National Health Service hospitals in the East Anglian, and the four Thames regional health authorities; and how many of the established pharmacist posts in each region are currently unfilled.

Mr. Newton: The latest available figures for staff in post are shown in the table.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what treatment is available under the National Health Service which involves the injection of foetal cells as a treatment for Alzheimer's disease or related conditions.

Mrs. Edwina Currie: I understand that no such treatment is available. There has been some research which suggests that implantation of embryo brain cells relieved symptoms in animal models of Alzheimer's disease. There is no guarantee that this will lead to the development of effective treatment for humans.

Treatment (Foetal Tissue)

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement outlining any treatment which is currently available under the National Health Service which involves the use of human foetal tissue.

Mr. Newton: While amnion from the placenta is sometimes used in the preparation for skin grafting, I am not aware that foetal tissue is used in treatment provided under the National Health Service.

Children in Care

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the 10 local authority districts with the highest rates of children in care.

Mrs. Currie: Based on information available centrally, the 10 local authorities with the highest number of children and young persons in care per thousand population aged under 18 are shown in the table.

Meningitis

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the National Meningitis Trust concerning the incidence of meningitis (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Stonehouse, Gloucestershire.

Mrs. Currie: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State visited Stonehouse on 7 August 1986 and spoke at a public meeting concerning meningitis in that area. My noble Friend also met members of the meningitis trust during a later visit to Gloucester. At the request of my noble Friend the secretary of the trust and a small delegation will be meeting her on 5 March to discuss these matters.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what initiatives he has already taken and intends to take to combat the rising incidence of meningitis, especially in Stonehouse, Gloucestershire;

(2) what funds have been allocated to research into meningitis in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 23 February 1987, c. 128]: The Department provided funds totalling £57,000 for the Stonehouse meningococcal survey, which commenced last November and is proceeding. It is not possible to quantify precisely the funds allocated to other continuing work on meningitis, particularly in the public health laboratory service; this includes monitoring of incidence by the communicable disease surveillance centre, development of a vaccine against the B15 strain of meningococcal meningitis at the centre for applied microbiological research at Porton Down, and investigation of the causes of the disease at the PHLS's Manchester laboratory.

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Christopher Hawkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each year since its introduction (a) the value of the Christmas bonus for pensioners and (b) the cumulative increase in the retail price index.

Mr. Major: The level of the Christmas bonus has been £10 in each year since its introduction in 1972, except in 1975 and 1976 when it was not paid. The cumulative percentage increase in the retail price index for each year since December 1972 is shown in the table.

AIDS

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he is taking to give advance notification of Government publicity concerning AIDS to local voluntary groups to enable organisers to be prepared for any increasing demand for their services.

Mr. Newton: It is not possible for Government to give advance warning of Government initiatives to every local voluntary organisation. However, the main elements in the Government's public education campaign have been widely publicised in advance; and health authorities, who were given full details of our plans in December last year, have been asked to work with voluntary organisations in prevention, health education and counselling in support of AIDS sufferers. The need to act quickly to educate the public about AIDS and counter the spread of infection has been paramount in our considerations.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what improvements have been agreed as a result of discussions between his Department and British Telecom to enable the public to obtain information about voluntary and public agencies giving information and counselling about AIDS; whether local directory inquiry services now hold the numbers of such local voluntary and public agencies; and whether they have been instructed to issue these numbers to callers on request;

(2) what action he is taking to promote local voluntary agencies, including Aidslines and gay switchboards, to assist those seeking information and counselling about AIDS to obtain such help locally.

Mr. Newton: As part of the national AIDS campaign, the Government have set up a national telephone advisory service on AIDS. Counsellors manning the service maintain lists of local voluntary agencies to which callers may be referred for further help and advice. It is, of course, for local organisations themselves to ensure that their telephone numbers are available through local directory inquiry services.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he has taken on matters raised in a letter sent to him on 9 January by Adam M. Mitchell-Christie, liaison officer with the West Yorkshire AIDS information exchange.

Mr. Newton: The letter raises a number of points which need to be considered in detail. A reply will be sent as soon as possible.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to issue national information leaflets about AIDS in languages other than English; in what languages such leaflets will be printed; if he will place advertisements about AIDS in British ethnic minority publications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We are urgently considering how best to ensure that essential information about AIDS reaches people from ethnic minorities, particularly those who have difficulty reading and understanding English, in ways that are sensitive to the needs of each community. On 5 February I attended a meeting with representatives of the ethnic press at which it was apparent that straight translation of existing leaflets may not be appropriate in all cases. We will consider carefully all the views expressed in devising a strategy for carrying forward this important aspect of its public information campaign.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines have been issued to nursing staff regarding the treatment of AIDS sufferers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 513]: The following guidance has been issued, under cover of letters from the Chief Nursing Officer (CNO).

1. Children at School and problems relating to AIDS. (Draft) (CNO(86)1).
2. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome—AIDS—Booklet 3: Guidance for Surgeons, Anaesthetists, Dentists and their teams in dealing with patients infected with HTLVIII. April 1986 (CNO(86)7).
3. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome—AIDS—General Information for Doctors (May 1985) (CNO(86)7).
4. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome—AIDS—Booklet 2. Information for Doctors concerning the introduction of the HTLVIII Antibody Test. (October 1985) (CNO(86)7).
5. Children at School and problems related to AIDS (revised version). Department of Education and Science and Welsh Office. (CNO(86)12).
6. Information on the guidance issued by the Royal College of Nursing, entitled AIDS Nursing Guidelines—Royal College of Nursing November 1986 (CNO(86)17).
7. Information about the latest stage of the public information campaign, to explain the current AIDS situation in the UK and to give further information about advice on testing. (CNO(86)18).

Private Hospitals (Admissions)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of all admissions were made to private hospitals for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not available. There is no requirement on private hospitals to report the number of patients admitted.

Suicides

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the 10 district local authority areas with the highest suicide rate in each of the last three years.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the full information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However the number of suicides by local authority area of usual residence is published in table 5 of "Mortality Statistics, area. Series DH5 no 12", a copy of which is in the Library.

Diabetics

Mr. Cormack asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to complete his review of policy on the provision of free needles to registered diabetics.

Mrs. Currie: Shortly.

Health Authorities

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will state, for each regional health authority, the difference between the amount requested and the amount actually spent on capital expenditure, broken down by new building and repair to existing capital stock, for each year from 1979 to date.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 February 1987, c. 696]: Cash allocations to regional health authorities are not made in response to bids.

Since 1979-80 the distribution of total capital resources between regional health authorities has been based on a formula recommended by the Resource Allocation Working Party. The formula uses regions' populations weighted to take account of age and sex distribution and mortality rates, and the value of capital stock in relation to the weighted population as indicators of relative need. From 1991-92 weighted population factors alone will be used.

Regional health authorities have the flexibility to transfer up to one per cent. of their revenue allocations to capital and up to 10 per cent. of the capital allocation to revenue in any one financial year.

Total capital expenditure by each region from 1979-80 to 1985-86 is shown in the table. The annual accounts of health authorities, from which the figures are derived, do not distinguish between expenditure on entirely new buildings and that on the reconstruction, extension or adaptation of existing buildings. Expenditure on building maintenance and on repairs to other capital stock is charged to revenue.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply of 23 January, giving the average number of available beds in National Health Service hospitals, if he will give the estimated saving to the National Health Service of cutting available beds for the mentally ill by 14·8 per cent and for the mentally handicapped by 17·1 per cent. between 1979 and 1985; and what proportion of this saving has been transferred to developing community services for the mentally-ill and handicapped for (a) children (b) adults and (c) both.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 4 February 1987, c. 701-2]: It is not possible to answer the hon. Member in the terms of his question. The reduction in the numbers of beds in NHS hospitals has been more than compensated for by patients' transference to care in the community, by the avoidance of inappropriate admissions, and by more rational use of beds.

Gross current expenditure in 1984-85 on hospital and community health services for mentally ill people is estimated to have been £1,029 million, representing an increase in real terms of some 14 per cent. over 1979-80; the comparable figure for mental handicap is £462 million, representing a real increase of 10 per cent. During this period, personal social services expenditure on residential and day care services for these groups increased by some 40 per cent. in real terms.

Health authorities have taken advantage of the fall in in-patient numbers both to improve existing hospital provision and to invest in community provision. The changes which have been taking place in services are complex and figures are not available to give an accurate overall picture distinguishing community developments as a whole, or for children and adults respectively, from other improvements. There have, for example, been increases in hospital and community based nursing staff and in the number of mentally handicapped people resident in small NHS units in the community.

Social Workers

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the number of whole-time equivalent (a) home helps and (b) social workers in each local authority, and per 1,000 population over 65 years each year since 1982.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1987, c. 623]: The numbers of whole-time equivalent home helps and social workers in each authority are published in table1 of "Staff of Local Authority Social Services Departments, 30 September" for 1982, 1983, and 1984 (S/F 83/1, S/F 84/1, S/F 85/1 respectively), copies of which are in the Library. The figures for 1985 are given in table 1.

The whole-time equivalent home helps and social workers per thousand population aged 65 years and over in each local authority for 1982-85 are given in tables 2 and 3.

[1] The numbers of social workers relate to the position at 30 September each year.
[2] The rates are based on the estimated population aged 65 years and over at 30 June each year.
[3] The 1985 figures are provisional.
[4] Estimated from information for earlier years.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the 10 local authority districts with the highest number of social workers per head of population.

Mrs. Currie: Based on information available centrally, the 10 authorities with the highest number of social workers per thousand population are shown in the table.

TABLE

Social workers, expressed as whole-time equivalents, at 30 September 1985 per thousand population: the 10 authorities with the highest rates.

Local authority	Number per thousand population[1]
City of London	[2]4·37
Camden	[3]1·77

Local authority	Number per thousand population[1]

[1] The numbers of social workers per thousand population are based on the population as at 30 June 1985 in each authority.

[2] The rate for City of London is based on very small numbers.

[3] In calculating the rates for Camden, Lambeth and Southwark the numbers of social workers were estimated from information for earlier years.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Telephones, (Interception of Calls)

Mr. Dickens asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will take steps to engage a specialist company to ensure that there is no illegal interception of or interference with the telephone calls of hon. Members.

Mr. Biffen: No, I do not think this would be justified.

Members' Group Accident Insurance

Mr. Corrie asked the hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what changes have been made to hon. Members' group accident insurance arrangements.

Mr. Beith: The death and capital benefits available under the terms of the policy have been increased to £93,000 as from 1 January 1987. The memorandum by the Accountant, which gives details of the cover and exclusions, is held in the Library.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Campuses (Security)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what new steps are being taken to ensure freedom of speech and greater security regarding the protection of visiting speakers on university and polytechnic campuses.

Mr. Walden: Section 43 of the Education No. 2 Act 1986, which places a duty on all concerned in the government of institutions of further and higher education in England and Wales to take all reasonably practicable steps to secure freedom of speech within the law for members, students and employees of the institution and for visiting speakers, is to be brought into force on 1 September 1987. By then governing bodies should have issued the codes of practice required by the section to facilitate the discharge of the duty imposed on them. The Department and the Welsh Office will be writing to institutions shortly to offer some guidance on these provisions. The Government will continue to seek reports from institutions on any incidents before the section comes into force in which visiting speakers are prevented from speaking or in which violence occurs.

Open University

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has for the Open university, regarding (a) the inquiries for undergraduate study by region (b) the applicants for undergraduate study by region (c) the offers made to applicants for undergraduate study by region and (d) the initial registration for undergraduate study by region, for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Walden: The following information is on the basis of the university's academic (calendar) year.

(a) The Open university does not record inquiries on a regional basis. The total number of inquiries each year was as follows:

Dyslexia (Surrey)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied that Surrey county council is making adequate provision for the educational needs of dyslexic children.

Mr. Dunn: The Education Act 1981 imposes duties on all local education authorities to identify, assess and make appropriate provisions for all children including dyslexics in their areas with special educational needs. Any parents within Surrey, as in any other part of the country, who are not content with the arrangements proposed by a local education authority for their child, may appeal to the Secretary of State either under section 5(6) of the Act, if the authority decides that it is not required to maintain a statement determining the special educational provision to be made for the child; or under section 8(6), if the parents are not satisfied with the educational provision specified in the statement and their appeal to a local appeal committee has failed. The Secretary of State considers each individual case on its own merits.

GCSE

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has to the subjects and the syllabi for which there are no suitable text books available for schools providing General Certificate of Secondary Education examinations.

Mrs. Rumbold: The introduction of the GCSE does not require the wholesale replacement of existing textbooks: the need is rather for these to be supplemented and updated over time. The GCSE examining groups have given the Educational Publishers' Council every possible assistance to enable a full range of GCSE text books to be produced, and many have already been published. The Government have, of course, provided substantial resources to ensure that schools are able to purchase additional books and equipment for GCSE courses.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is now taking to ensure that General Certificate of Secondary Education examinations are satisfactorily funded.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 26 February 1987.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many companies have been approached by his Department to fund city technology colleges; and how many companies have expressed a willingness to provide funding.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Preliminary approaches were made to over 1800 companies. Earlier this week, Hanson Trust PLC made public their decision to contribute £1 million in sponsorship of the first city technology college. Several other companies have expressed a willingness to provide funding, but some of these offers are conditional or subject to discussion and I am not prepared to confirm offers until sponsors are ready to make their decision public.

Student Fees

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recommendations he has made about fees for students on courses of further and higher education in the academic year 1987-88.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information is as follows:

Home and European Community Students

For the academic year 1987-88 I have recommended the following fee levels for home students and for students from other European Community countries. (fees for 1986-87 are shown in brackets):

Postgraduate courses	1,730	(1,680)
First degree and diploma courses	556	(536)

Other fees for home and European Community students are the responsibility of the local education authorities. I understand that the Council of Local Education Authorities has recommended fees for 1987-88 as follows (fees for 1986-87 are shown in brackets):

	Advanced further education[1]		Non-advanced further education
	£	£	£	£
Full-time	556	(536)	360	(342)

	Advanced further education[1]		Non-advanced further education
	£	£	£	£
Sandwich/block release (weekly rate)	15·50	(14·90)	10	(9·50)
Part-time per course hour	0·52	(0·50)	0·34	(0·32)
Part-time annual fee for one session per week	55·60	(53·60)	36·00	(34·20)

[1] other than first degree and diploma courses

Overseas Students

The Government's policy is that students from outside the European Community should pay fees that cover the cost of their education here. It is for institutions and local authorities to determine the fees to be charged to overseas students in the light of this policy and of their own circumstances.

For the universities, the University Grants Committee has recommended minimum fee levels for overseas students on undergraduate and postgraduate courses in 1987-88 as follows (recommended minima for 1986-87 are shown in brackets):

Arts courses	3,690	(3,480)
Science courses	4,840	(4,570)
Clinical courses in medicine dentistry and veterinary science	8,960	(8,450)

For local authority institutions the Council of Local Education Authorities has recommended minimum fee levels as follows (recommended minima for 1986-87 are shown in brackets):

Advanced courses	3,720	(3,540)
Non-advanced courses	2,055	(1,947)

TRANSPORT

Road Accidents

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Transport what statistics are available to him concerning the number of road accidents in which (a) learner drivers and (b) drivers who have recently passed their driving test are involved.

Mr. Moore: Information on driver licence status is not included in road accident reports.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate the number of claimants in Northern Ireland of severe weather payments in respect of the weeks beginning 12 January and 19 January who are on fuel direct.

Mr. Needham: No figures are available and they could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Fuel Costs

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the prices in Northern Ireland of (i) a bag of coal, (ii) a bag of anthracite, (iii) a unit of electricity, (iv) a cylinder of gas and (v) a litre of central heating oil; and on comparable prices in each region of Great Britain.

Mr. Viggers: Regional prices of a bag of house coal (Group 2), a bag of anthracite and a unit of electricity are as follows:

Town	Group 2 house coal £	Anthracite/ grains £
Newcastle	4·30	6·50
Leeds	4·30	6·91
Nottingham	4·40	7·20
Belfast	5·04	7·77
Glasgow	5·10	7·70
Liverpool	5·30	7·62
Ipswich	5·70	7·65
Cardiff	5·70	7·30
Inverness	5·90	8·20
London district	6·10	7·75
Bournemouth	6·40	8·32
Exeter	6·40	8·40

There is no published information on regional prices of domestic central heating oil and LPG, but on the basis of spot checks carried out in response to this question I am satisfied that prices in Northern Ireland of both these fuels compare closely with prices prevailing in Great Britain.

Privatisation

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the catering and other services carried out by private enterprise for (a) the Northern Ireland Electricity Service, (b) the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, (c) hospitals, (d) education and library boards, (e) Government training centres and (f) other public establishments; and what other services are to be put out to contract.

Mr. Scott: Services now carried out by private enterprise include the following categories:

(a) Northern Ireland Electricity
Catering
Cleaning services
Security
Maintenance

(b) The Northern Ireland Housing Executive
Catering
Cleaning services
Maintenance
Security

(c) Hospitals
Maintenance
Cleaning services
Maintenance of vehicles

(d) Education and Library Boards
Catering
School transport
Maintenance and repair of musical instruments
Maintenance of vehicles

(e) Government Training Centres
Catering

(f) Other Public Establishments
Security
Cleaning services
Laundry
Catering
Maintenance
Printing
Specialist conservation services
Maintenance of vehicles
Grounds maintenance
Courier services

Putting services out to contract is always an option where it is appropriate and cost effective.

Security Forces (Offences)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of those cases where members of security forces have been charged with offences causing (a) the death or (b) injury to civilians for each year since 1969, indicating the branch of the service involved Royal Ulster Constabulary, Ulster Defence Regiment, Army, Marines and soon, the charge originally brought the charge for which each person was tried the verdict and, where appropriate, where the sentence was served.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Member giving the available information as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details for 1986 of the number of members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, their respective reserves, and the British Army, who have been charged with offences and who have been convicted of offences, giving details of custodial sentences imposed, and separately for charges and convictions concerning: murder, attempted murder, membership of illegal organisations, conspiracy to cause explosions, withholding information concerning terrorist activities, possession of explosives, possession of explosives with intent to cause bodily harm, possession of firearms, possession of firearms with intent to cause bodily harm and other offences classified as scheduled offences.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Member giving the available information as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Servants

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Prime Minister what was the number of persons, full and part-time (a) in the Civil Service and (b) in local government in the United Kingdom for the years 1979, 1984,1985 and 1986; and, in each case, what was the reduction of persons employed in percentage terms and numerically.

The Prime Minister: The figures are as follows (thousands):

	1979	1984	1985	1986	1979 numerical change	1986 minus percentage change
Civil Service[1]
Full-time	717	613	588	582	135	(-18·9)[2]

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her answers to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 15 April, Official Report, column 330 and 18 April 1986, Official Report, column 525, she has received any new information in the past 10 months about the uses to which plutonium produced by the reprocessing of spent fuel from any British civil reactor was put under previous Administrations and in particular about whether such plutonium has ever been used for a nuclear weapons programme.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) of 15 April, Official Report, column 330, and 18 April 1986, Official Report, column 525.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Soviet Prisoners

Mr. Ames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, following the release of 140 Soviet political prisoners, he will estimate the number of political and religious prisoners still held in the Soviet Union in prisons and labour camps.

Mrs. Chalker: A further 600-700 names are known. It is likely that there are many hundreds more of whom we have no record.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mrs. Chalker: The usual forecast was deposited in the House earlier today. At present, eight meetings of the Council of Ministers are planned for March.

The Agriculture Council is expected to meet on 2-3 March and 30-31 March to discuss the 1987 price fixing proposals, which will include reviews of the green currency system and the oils and fats regime. It may also discuss socio-structural proposals, intervention in dairy produce, milk quotas and French national aid for small milk producers.

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 9 March to consider the Commission's quarterly review of the economic situation in the Community, and the European Court of Auditors annual report on the 1985 financial year. The Council may also discuss the budget reference framework for 1988; a proposed directive on prospectuses to be published when securities are offered for subscription or sale to the public, and amendment to directive 80/390 on listing particulars for admission of securities to official stock exchange listing.

The Foreign Affairs Council will meet on 16-17 March. The Council will discuss EC-Japan relations. It will also discuss the EC student mobility programme (ERASMUS). The Council may consider a draft negotiating mandate for an EC-Hungary trade and economic co-operation agreement; and Commission proposals for a new generation of financial protocols for some of the Community's preferential partners.

The Industry Council will meet on 19 March and will consider the next steps in European steel policy.

The Environment Council will meet on 19-20 March and will discuss large combustion plants; vehicle emissions; sulphur content of gas oil; the fourth environment action programme; export of dangerous chemicals; and regular leaded petrol.

The Transport Council will meet on 23-24 March. Discussion is likely to concentrate on the aviation package, but the Council will also discuss road haulage liberalisation, infrastructure spending and vehicle taxation.

The Research Council is scheduled to meet on 24 March. The agenda includes discussion on the Community's Framework Programme for Research and development in the period 1987-91. Three individual research programmes — RACE (Telecommunications), Science and Technology for Development and Medical and Public Health — may also be discussed, although final agreement may not be possible in advance of agreement on the framework programme. The Council may also consider the report of the industrial panel on the future role and organisation of the Community's joint research centre.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the level of income tax in the Falkland Islands; what information he has as to the levels of banking and commercial secrecy; if he has any evidence of use of the Falkland Islands as a tax haven; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: In the current financial year, personal income tax in the Falkland Islands is chargeable as follows:

	Per cent.
On the first £500 of chargeable income	20
On the next £500 of chargeable income	25
On the next £6,500 of chargeable income	30
On the next £2,500 of chargeable income	40
On the remainder of chargeable income	50

Deductions that may be claimed:	£
Personal income	2,100
For wife	1,200
Wife's earned income relief	[1]2,100
Dependent relative	650
Insurance premium or pension fund contribution	[2]

[1] Maximum.

[2] Up to one-sixth of total income after deducting wife's earned income relief.

Banking in the Falkland Islands is regulated by the 1972 Ordinance no. 7 for the licensing and control of banking in the colony. A copy and subsequent amendments have been laid in the Library of the House. We have no evidence of the use of the Falkland Islands as a tax haven.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Paymaster-General if he will make a statement on the future funding of the numbers involved in the community programme.

Mr. Lee: Expenditure on the community programme is planned to rise from about £1,038 million this year to about £1,120 million in 1987-88. The programme will continue to provide worthwhile opportunities on work of value to the community for some 300,000 long term unemployed people in a year.

Work Creation

Mr. Wilson asked the Paymaster General if he will list the various work creation schemes introduced by this Government or inherited and continued from the previous Administration; if he will show against each the amount of central Government funding in all its forms; and if he will show the estimated numbers of people who have participated in each scheme in each year since its inception.

Mr. Trippier: Information in the form requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The employment, enterprise and training measures which were operating in 1979 together with those introduced since are listed below. Details of expenditure on and coverage of these measures are published each year in the public expenditure white paper.

Small Businesses

Mr. Wilson asked the Paymaster General if he will list the legislative measures introduced by this Government designed to assist directly the small business community; if he will show against each the amount of central Government funding in all forms of advice and assistance; and if he is able to show the estimated increase in small business formation associated with each measure.

Mr. Trippier: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Unemployment Benefit (Claimants)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Paymaster General what is the present number of quarterly signers signing on at unemployment benefit offices in Cleveland at (a) Stockton: Bayheath house, Prince Regent street, (b) Stockton: Daryl house, Park terrace, (c) Billingham: Kingsway house, West Precinct, (d) Guisborough: Morgan drive, Guisborough: Loftus market place, (f) Hartlepool: Raby road, (g) Middlesbrough: 36 Grange road and (h) Middlesbrough: Crown house, Wilson street.

Mr. Trippier: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Skillcentre (Irvine)

Mr. Lambie asked the Paymaster General when will the proposed new skillcentre at Irvine be given the go-ahead, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to the reply, 23 February 1987, c. 88]: We have asked the Manpower Services Commission to review its skills training agency's capital expenditure policies and arrangements. This follows upon a review last year of the agency's personnel policies and practices in the light of its experience as a trading organisation. Until the further review is completed, the agency has decided that the Irvine skillcentre should continue at its present site.

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the skillcentres in Lancashire in June 1979 and at present: and the number of places provided at each centre for both dates.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987]: There are two skillcentres in Lancashire; East Lancs skillcentre in Hyndburn and Preston skillcentre. Both were in operation in 1979. As I stated in my reply to the hon. Member's question on 25 June 1986 at column 339, statistics on skillcentre training volumes have, since 1983, been kept in terms of training weeks available rather than places available. In January 1987, East Lancs provided 697 training weeks, and Preston provided 639 training weeks. Figures for 1979 are not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Homosexuality

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many males aged between 16 years and 21 years were, respectively, prosecuted, convicted and imprisoned for consensual sexual acts with other males aged 16 years to 21 years in 1985; and, in the case of those imprisoned, what were the maximum, minimum and average sentences served by such men.

Mr. Mellor: Information is not available in exactly the form requested. However, records available to me for England and Wales, which may be incomplete, show 10 males aged 16-20 proceeded against in 1985 for buggery or attempted buggery with another male person aged 16 or over with consent and six defendants found guilty: 42 males aged 16-20 proceeded against for indecency between males; and 43 defendants found guilty some of whom may have initially been proceeded against for a more serious offence or in a previous year. Of the 49 found guilty for these offences, two were given custodial sentences, each receiving 18 months' custody.

Electrical Wiring Defects (Fires)

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deaths occurred in the United Kingdom in the latest year for which figures are available from fires caused by electrical wiring defects.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In 1984 there were 20 deaths in fires attended by local authority fire brigades in the United Kingdom for which a fault in electrical wiring was recorded by the brigade as the source of ignition.

Lieutenant Narendra Sethia

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the reasons why a copy of the statement taken by the police from Mr. Narendra Sethia in connection with alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Act has not been made available to Mr. Sethia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hurd: It is not the normal practice of the police to provide copies of statements to those who make them. A copy would only be provided upon written request by the person making the statement and with the approval of the prosecuting authority, in this case the Director of Public Prosecutions. In March 1985 Mr. Sethia wrote to the Metropolitan police requesting that copies of the record of questions and answers be sent to his solicitors. The police forwarded the request to the Director of Public Prosecutions, who consulted the Ministry of Defence. No further correspondence on the matter was received from Mr. Sethia or his solicitors, nor has any fresh request been received from them.

SCOTLAND

Capital Allocations

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the capital allocation in Scotland for (a) the housing revenue account for local authorities, (b) the non-housing revenue account for local authorities, (c) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (d) the new towns and (e) the Housing Corporation for the years 1978-79 to 1987-88, inclusive, showing all figures at (i) cash prices and (ii) estimated 1987-88 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram: The information at cash prices and estimated 1987-88 constant prices is as follows:

Notes:

1. The estimated 1987-88 figures are produced by applying the GDP deflator (base year 1987-88).
2. The Scottish Special Housing Association did not receive an annual block capital allocation until 1979-80.
3. Capital allocations to the bodies listed have, since 1982-83, been made on a net basis; the Secretary of State provides a net allocation in addition to which the bodies can spend the actual net capital receipts realised in the year in question. However, for ease of comparison the figures in the above table for 1982-83 and subsequent years are given on a gross basis. They include actual receipts for the years from 1982-83 to 1985-86 (although some figures within the 1985-86 totals for the HRA and non-HRA are still subject to audit). They include forecast receipts for the years 1986-87 and 1987-88. If actual receipts in those years are higher or lower than the forecast level, the level of gross spending permitted to authorities will be higher or lower by a corresponding amount. All figures for 1987-88 are based on provisional net allocations, in addition to being subject to the relationship between forecast and actual receipts.
4. The figures given may not correspond exactly to the public expenditure outturn for each year under these various headings because there may have been overspending or underspending of allocations.

Housing

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report, for each district and island council area, his estimate of the housing surplus or deficit.

Mr. Ancram: The table below gives a crude measure of housing surpluses, by areas, obtained by subtracting the estimated number of households at 30 June 1985 from the numbers of domestic subjects on the valuation rolls at 1 April 1985. It is not possible to give figures for both series on the same day. Moreover, definitional differences between the two series mean that estimates of housing surpluses in any authority obtained by the subtraction must be considered to be very approximate.

	Estimated households at 30 June 1985	Domestic subjects on valuation roll at 1 April 1985	Crude surplus
SCOTLAND	1,913,430	2,036,180	122,750

Diabetics (Disposable Syringes)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the possible provision of disposable syringes to sufferers from chronic diabetes; what estimate he has of the cost of such a provision to these patients alone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of letters on this matter both from members of the public and hon. Members on behalf of their constituents. He has also had correspondence with representatives of the British Diabetic Association and some members of the medical profession. The additional cost to the NHS in Scotland for the provision of disposable syringes and needles to diabetics through the general practitioner service is estimated at £0·7 million per annum.

ENVIRONMENT

Secondary Mortgage Market

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to make a statement on the secondary mortgage market.

Mr. John Patten: I hope to receive a report from the working group on the secondary mortgage market within the next few weeks.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps his Department takes to encourage local councils to reduce their level of rent arrears;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the local authorities whose level of rent arrears have exceeded (a) 1 per cent., (b) 2 per cent., (c) 3 per cent., (d) 4 per cent. and (e) 5 per cent. or more of total rentals at the latest available date.

Mr. John Patten: I have nothing to add at present to the answer I gave my hon. Friend on December 10 at column 188-89.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the number of schemes for which derelict land grants were paid in Staffordshire for the last five years, the amount of the grant paid, and the value in each respect.

Mr. John Patten: In the period 1982-87, 292 grants were paid totalling £19,782,125. Total value of these schemes was £20,240,910.

Sport (Illegal Substances)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Sports Council on the problems of the use of illegal substances in sport.

Mr. Tracey: I met representatives of the Sports Council on 26 January to discuss the work of the council's drug abuse advisory group. We reviewed progress made since this issue was raised at the Conference of European Sport Ministers in Dublin last year and discussed what further measures could be taken now by the United Kingdom and European Governments and the governing bodies of sport.

Housing

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the effect of the Housing and Planning Act 1986 on the flow of applications for the purchase of their homes by secure tenants.

Mr. John Patten: The provisions of the Housing and Planning Act which concern the right to buy came into operation on 7 January. Statistics on applications received from that date are not yet available, but I expect to see an increase in the number of flats sold.

Rates

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now seek to make it mandatory for local authorities to allow commercial property owners to pay their rates by instalments in the same way as domestic ratepayers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Since 1 April 1985, all business ratepayers have been entitled to pay their rates by instalments.

Local Authorities (Financial Interests)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is proposing to write to all local authorities with a questionnaire seeking detailed information on their interests in any Companies Act companies.

Mr. Ridley: Yes. My Department has consulted the English local authority associations about such a questionnaire to provide a firm, factual basis for consideration of the recommendations of the Widdicombe committee on local authority companies. The four associations which have so far replied see no objection in principle to what is proposed.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce regulations to require unregistered residential care homes to be inspected by the local environmental health and fire prevention officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer this question shortly.

Water Authorities

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation in respect of uniform connection charges by water authorities.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 26 February 1987]: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. However, proposals for modifications in the present arrangements for requisitioning of sewers and water mains were set out in the Department's consultation paper 'Water and Sewerage Law' published in March 1986.

Land

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each six-month period since 1 January 1982 and for the latest available period (a) how much underused public land was on the land registers, (b) how much land was added to the registers, (c) how much land was removed from the registers, divided between the amounts sold, the amounts brought back into use and the amounts removed in other ways, (d) how many notices he issued under section 99 of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 and how much land was involved and (e) how many directions he issued under section 98 of the 1980 Act and how much land was involved.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 25 February 1987]: Following is the information:

THE ARTS

Children's Librarians

Mr. Fisher: asked the Minister for the Arts how many specialist children's librarians are employed by public library services in England; and what steps he is taking to ensure more specialist support to combat illiteracy.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply 26 February 1987]: There are no statistics readily available on this. My Office has commissioned research into statistics and patterns of service delivery for public library services to children and young people. The results should be available shortly.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Corporation Tax

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what approximate amount the yield of corporation tax 1986-87 would be increased had there been no agreed losses, excluding the public sector, available for offsetting profits.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Use of accumulated past losses is estimated to reduce corporation tax receipts in 1986-87 by £1 billion to £2 billion.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 12 February, why he is unable to quantify the total of losses, excluding the public sector, agreed for corporation tax purposes by the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Where a company has an amount of loss to carry forward against profits in subsequent accounting periods, agreed or estimated figures are available within the tax district, but they are not formally recorded on a tax assessment form and full details of such losses are not available centrally. The estimates in my reply of 12 February were therefore based on a projection from a small sample of tax district records.

Losses (Public Sector)

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 12 February, for what reason he excludes the public sector from the total estimate of losses.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Because the circumstances of the public sector organisations are such that, in the main, there are no implications for corporation tax receipts.

EC Commission (Cash Flow)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 20 January, Official Report, column 467, whether he expects the EEC Commission's cash flow problem to continue during 1987-88.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Forth) on 20 February, Official Report col. 880, concerning the European Commission's current cash position. The adoption on 19 February of a budget for the European Economic Community for 1987 will provide the Commission with additional revenue which will ease its cash difficulties, although the pressures on available resources are likely to continue. The Government's public expenditure plans for 1986-87 and 1987-88 assume that an advance of £130 million will be required from April to March 1987 (Cm. 56-II, page 70, paragraph 11).

Capital Gains Tax

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional revenue in 1987-88 of taxing all real capital gains, after allowing for inflation, at 40 per cent. but with separate taxation of husband and wife, excluding gains arising on disposals of a person's only or main residence.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The present yield of capital gains tax would be reduced by about one-third.

Budget Council

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the definition of the term "negative reserves" as used in his statement on the outcome of the February Budget Council, Official Report, 17 February, column 542.

Mr. Brooke: A negative reserve is a provision in the Reserve Chapter 100 for unspecified reductions in expenditure elsewhere in the Budget. It involves the Commission proposing transfers from this reserve on to substantive budget lines during the budgetary year, thereby cancelling equivalent amounts of unused expenditure.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table like that published in a written answer on 27 January columns 229-30, showing for the years 1974-75 to 1978-79 the actual proceeds of public sector sales of assets outside the central privatisation proceed.

Mr. John MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Privatisation

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the opening and closing price on the first day of trading of the shares sold in the privatisation share issues, together with, in each case, the number of shares sold.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Lady Maybray-King

Sir Phillip Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the arrangements that have been made for the payment of a pension to Sheila, Lady Maybray-King, the widow of the former Speaker, Lord Maybray-King pending the approval of the Parliamentary and other Pensions Bill.

Mr. Brooke: The Parliamentary and other Pensions Bill which my right hon. Friend the Lord Privy Seal introduced yesterday includes provision for a pension to be paid as a charge on the Consolidated Fund to Sheila, Lady Maybray-King when that Bill comes into force. In the meantime an advance of £4,903·66 has been sought from the Contingencies Fund to provide for the gross payment of this pension in respect of the period between Lord Maybray-King's death on 3 Sepember 1986 and 31 March 1987. Repayment of this sum to the Fund will be made by means of the special omnibus Vote (Other Services: repayments to the Contingencies Fund). A further small advance may be necessary from the Contingencies Fund, to be repaid by the same means, for the period from 1 April 1987 until the Parliamentary and other Pensions Bill comes into force.

Imports

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the marginal propensity to import for each additional increment of consumer demand for each year since 1979.

Mr. John MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 19 February 1987, c. 829]: The marginal propensity to import is defined as the ratio of the change from the previous year in the volume of imports of consumer goods to the change from the previous year in the volume of consumers expenditure. Imports of consumer goods (including passenger motor vehicles) along with imports of food, drink and tobacco. The table gives the figures for 1979 to 1986:

	Marginal propensity to import
1979	0·28
1980	3·13
1981	8·78
1982	0·63
1983	0·16
1984	0·28
1985	0·05
1986	0·23

Tax Revenue

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from the taxation of cars of benefits in kind in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such revenues on the preceding year in each case.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987]: The table gives the estimated income tax liability from the taxation of cars (and fuel from 1983-84) and all expenses and benefits provided by employers. The percentage changes from the previous year are given in brackets.

£ million

Year	Cars provided by employer (including fuel from 1983-84)[2]		All expenses and benefits
1977-78	60		75
1978-79	70	(+17%)	100	(+33%)
1979-80	75	(+ 7%)	125	(+25%)
1980-81	85	(+13%)	140	(+12%)
1981-82	115	(+35%)	190	(+36%)
1982-83	130	(+13%)	250	(+32%)
1983-84	240	[2]	370	(+48%)
1984-85[1]	280	(+17%)	420	(+14%)
1985-86[1]	340	(+21%)	500	(+19%)
1986-87[1]	410	(+21%)	580	(+16%)

[1] Provisional

[2] The method of taxing car fuel benefit changed from 1983-84 when a scale charge was introduced: from 1983-84 the tax liability from the scale charge is included in the first column; so those figures are not comparable with the figures for earlier years. Liability on car fuel benefit is included in the second column for all years, but the amounts for years prior to 1983-84 cannot be separately identified.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Schanschieff Report

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many recommendations of the Schanschieff report on dentistry have been implemented; what progress is expected on the remaining proposals; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Conway) on 26 February.

Single Payments

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments for maternity items were made to women in Sheffield in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefits

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the net cost of a £5 a week increase in child benefit for all children under five years; and what would be the net cost if the supplement for one-parent families were withdrawn.

Mr. Major: The gross annual cost of a £5 a week increase of child benefit for children under 5 would be £920 million. The gross annual cost of one parent benefit is £148 million. Individual net costings could be provided only at disproportionate expense. The effect of such a change is not clear cut because a substantial number of single parent families and families with children under 5 are entitled and would continue to be entitled to supplementary benefit.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate, for all welfare and national insurance benefits and allowances, the percentage change in value each year since 1979 and the comparable change in national average earnings for each of those years.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987 c. 598]: The information requested is shown in the tables. Table 1 gives the percentage increase in the major social security benefit rates at uprating dates in each year from 1979 to 1986. Table 2 gives the percentage increase in average earnings at uprating dates.

Table 1 - Percentage increase in benefit rates since previous uprating at uprating dates

All benefits increases apply to weekly rates unless otherwise stated. Small variations in the increases in rates to which the same percentage increase was originally applied are due to rounding. Earnings figures are for whole economy average earnings, seasonally adjusted.

[1] Replaced non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension from November 1984.

[2] Fully introduced only in April 1979, therefore not uprated in November 1979.

[3] These are not rates of benefit.

[4] Supplemetary benefit scale rates were restructured in 1980 and separate long-term and ordinary rates for non-householders age 16-17 were introduced. Previously there had been only a single rate for this group.

[5] Before the restructuring of the scale rates in 1980 there were separate scale rates for children aged 11-12 and under 5.

[6] Housing benefit was fully introduced only in April 1983. The figures used to calculate percentage increases in years prior to this are the most closely comparable figures from the previous rent and rates rebate scheme. Housing benefit needs allowances are not rates of benefit. The way in which they are constructed means that a comparison of increases with increases in other benefits, with price inflation using the RPI or with increases in average earnings, is inappropriate. A fuller explanation of the reasons for this is given in the reply to the hon. Member for Pontefract and Castleford on 4 December 1986 at columns 729-730.

[7] Pensioner additions were introduced in 1982 and first increased in 1984.

[8] Child dependency additions with short-term benefits were abolished in 1984.

[9] Increase since April 1979.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for maternity allowance have been made in the county of Derbyshire at the latest available date.

Mr. Major: In the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover the county, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Derby (London Road)	1,551
Derby (Beckett Street)	1,233
Derby (Heritage Gate)	1,071
Chesterfield	1,860
Ilkestone	928

Mr. Garrett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in North Tyneside received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover North Tyneside although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Newcastle (East)	983
Wallsend	624
North Shields	807

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Pontefract, Castleford and Knottingley received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Pontefract, Castleford and Knottingley although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Pontefract	658
Castleford	784

Health Education Authority

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is yet in a position to announce the names of the members of the new Health Education Authority.

Mr. Fowler: I am pleased to announce that, in addition to Sir Brian Bailey, Miss Ann Burdus and Mr. Alastair Service, whose appointments I announced on 18 February, the following have agreed to serve as members of the new Authority:

Professor Anthony Clare — Professor of Psychological Medicine, St. Bartholmew's Hospital
Mr. Sebastian Coe—Vice-Chairman, Sports Council
Miss Carey Dennis—Director of Products and Consumer Services Department, Tesco Stores Ltd.
Professor Alastair Geddes — Professor of Communicable Disease, Birmingham University
Mrs. Pat Marshall — Director of Nursing Services (Community), City and Hackney Health Authority
Mr. Robin Moss — Head of Independent Broadcasting Association Educational Programme Services
Mrs. Ann Parker—Director of Social Services, Berkshire
Mr. James Pease-Watkin—Personnel Director, the Bowater Corporation
Mr. William Rhodes — Assistant Secretary, the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain
Dr. Colin Waine—General Practitioner
The Hon. Mrs. Caroline Waldegrave—Managing Director, the Leith School of Food and Wine
Mrs. Kate Wood — Schools Curriculum Development Committee

Orthopaedic X-Rays

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update his guidance to health authorities in England and Wales on the retention of orthopaedic X-rays.

Mrs. Currie: We have at present no plans to do so.

Abortions

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of girls under 16 years upon whom abortions were performed, with only their own consent, during each of the years for which records exist.

Mr. Newton: The table shows the numbers of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 to women aged under 16 years of age in England and Wales from April 1968 to September 1986. Information on consent is not available centrally.

NHS Hospital and Community Services

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide figures for the change in real expenditure on National Health Service hospital and community health services for each year between the earliest year after 1974 and the most recent year for which comparable figures are available as measured using (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) the National Health Service pay and price deflator, by Greater London district health authorities in total, and by Inner London district health authorities in total.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Young People (Hearing)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what research is being sponsored by his Department on the effects upon young people's hearing by excessive noise through loudspeakers or earphones.

Mr. Newton: The Department is not currently supporting any research in this field. The Medical Research Council, which receives grant-in-aid from the science budget of the Department of Education and Science, is the main Government funded body dealing with medical research.

Hospital Wastes

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) which National Health Service hospitals have facilities for the incineration of all wastes produced from the clinical functions carried out therein; and what is the total weekly tonnage incinerated;

(2) if he will list the companies which have contracts for the removal of clinical wastes from National Health hospitals; and what is the weekly weight of clinical waste removed.

Mr. Newton: Information on the disposal of clinical waste in NHS hospitals is not collected centrally.

Nurses

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the source for the statement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 17 February, Official Report, column 867, about the number of nurses in the National Health Service; what action he proposes to take in the light of representations from the hon. Member for Brent, South about shortages of nurses in Brent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The source of the statement was the increase of 62,000 whole time equivalents (from 428,000 to 490,800 WTEs) in the total nursing and midwifery staff (including agency staff) in Great Britain between September 1978 and September 1985. Of these an estimated 29,200 WTEs were needed to compensate for the reduction in the working week in 1980-81.

The provision of nursing services in Brent itself is a matter for the Brent Health Authority. However the NHS Management Board has commissioned a study into the nursing services in London. The Steering Group is currently processing the information obtained and is aiming to complete its study and report to the Management Board by late Spring. We will then consider what local or national action may be required to remedy any problems revealed.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when awards of family income supplement will terminate as a result of the introduction of the provisions of the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Major: I have today laid regulations[1] providing for awards of FIS to terminate not later thaan 11 April 1988, when it is proposed that the new Family Credit scheme should take effect under the Social Security Act 1986. Transitional arrangements for existing FIS recipients will be made under separate regulations to be made under that Act. A commencement order for the relevant provisions of the 1986 Act will be introduced in due course.

General Practitioners (Computers)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about his Department's refusal to finance the computer-based advice systems for general practitioners being established by Dr. Roger Brittain and colleagues at the University of Warwick.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 500]: We have not refused to fund Dr. Brittain's system. We have written to him asking for a more detailed and costed protocol setting out the aims and methodology of the proposed research. When this is received, it will be considered for funding on its scientific merits, together with other research applications submitted to the Department.

AIDS

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence there is from other countries of AIDS victims developing a dangerously infectious state such as would justify use of the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1985.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512-13]: There is no evidence that AIDS overseas is more readily infectious than AIDS in this country.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to decide whether to extend practice of handing out free syringes to drug addicts; if he will list the hospitals where the trial is being conducted; and how he will assess the impact of the practice on the spread of AIDS.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 513]: My right hon. Friend announced in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley) on 18 December 1986 at column 703 the establishment of a small number of schemes where drug misusers will be able both to receive counselling and exchange used needles and syringes for sterile equipment. Discussions about the operation of these schemes are currently under way in a number of locations and we hope to approve the first schemes shortly.

Independent research will be commissioned to monitor changes in the attitudes and behaviour of those using the schemes with regard to the sharing of injecting equipment, misuse of drugs and sexual practices. We hope to receive preliminary findings towards the end of the year and that these will help us assess the efficacy of such schemes in combating the spread of HIV infection.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what grounds HIV infection has not been made a notifiable disease.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 513]: We already have a system of voluntary reporting in confidence of AIDS cases and HIV antibody positive cases to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre and the Communicable Disease for Scotland Unit. This system is working well and there appear no advantages at present in replacing it by a statutory system.

WALES

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what provision has been made, within the current year's rate support grant to the Welsh counties, specifically to meet expenditure on bilingual education; what are the corresponding figures for each financial year since 1976-77; and what are the projected figures for 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Central Government support towards billingual education comes from two main sources. Specific grant supports expenditure on certain local authority schemes approved by the Secretary of State. Any further spending by local authorities on bilingual education is eligible for rate support grant but information on expenditure supported in this way is not held centrally.

Since 1981-82 the level of specific grant estimated in the main Rate Support Grant reports has been as follows:

1981-82	729
1982-83	566
1983-84	600
1984-85	622
1985-86	950
1986-87	1,000

Support for bilingual education prior to 1981-82 was provided entirely through rate support grant, and is not separately identifiable.

Our intention for the rate support grant settlement for 1987-88 is that the specific grant for bilingual education should be £1,075,000. No decisions have yet been taken for the years 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) primary schoolchildren and (b) secondary school students attend Welsh-medium schools, or units, in each local education authority area in Wales; what proportion of the total they represent in each case; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1977.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is not readily available, and I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of schoolchildren (a) entering secondary education and (b) leaving secondary education in each local education authority area in Wales in each year since 1977 were (i) fluent in the Welsh language, (ii) had some working knowledge of the Welsh language but were not fluent or (iii) had little or no knowledge of the Welsh language.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information in the form requested is not available. Figures given in the following tables show, however, the numbers and percentages of pupils in their final year of primary school who were assessed by headteachers as being fluent in Welsh.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to be able to make a statement on the funding of the new Welsh language education development committee of the Welsh Joint Education Council.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I have told the Welsh Joint Education Committee that the Government are prepared to meet the necessary administrative expenses of the new Welsh Language Education Development Committee.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will outline in detail the proposed work of the new Welsh language education development committee of the Welsh Joint Education Council.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has said that he looks to the new Committee to provide a forum for discussion of policy by those responsible for the provision of Welsh medium education; to co-ordinate activities in Welsh language education, thereby ensuring the best and most economical use of available resources; to disseminate information; and to identify areas for further research and development. It will be for the Committee itself to consider in detail the work necessary for it to discharge this role.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Attorney-General what the Lord Chancellor's Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what the projected expenditure is for 1987.

The Solicitor-General: The answer is as follows:

	Hardware £	Software £
1985-86	639,000	80,000
1986-87	1,831,000	153,000
[1]1987-88	2,060,000	130,000

[1] projected

Dr. Hampson asked the Attorney-General, to which firms the Lord Chancellor's Department have awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

The Solicitor-General: Major (in excess of £10,000 worth of business) suppliers of computer hardware to the Lord Chancellor's Department in the years 1985-86 and 1986-87 have been as follows:

Apricot (UK) Ltd.
British Olivetti Ltd.
Burroughs Machines Ltd.
CASU Electronics Ltd.
Cybertek Computing Ltd.
Data General Ltd.
Electronic Business Systems Ltd.
Farnell International Instruments Ltd.
International Business Machines Ltd.
McDonnell Douglas Information Systems Ltd.
Rank Xerox (UK) Ltd.

The value of each contract is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Lieutenant Narendra Sethia

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General why he did not prosecute Lieutenant Narendra Sethia under the Official Secrets Act prior to his leaving the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General announced on 10 June 1985 at cols. 299-300 that the Metropolitan police had submitted their report on this matter to the Director of Public Prosecutions who had concluded that it was not possible for him to institute proceedings against any person on the evidence then available. It was also his view that there was insufficient prospect that further investigations would enable him to come to a different conclusion for it to be in the public interest for him to ask the police to pursue their inquiries any further. The Attorney-General agreed with the Director of Public Prosecutions in all respects.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General (1) whether, in the light of the return to the United Kingdom of Lieutenant Narendra Sethia, he will now prosecute him under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act for revealing to others classified information in his naval diary; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will prosecute Mr. David Leigh of the Observer Newspaper under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act for revealing information from the naval diaries of Narendra Sethia, knowing that information to be classified; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: No. I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his previous question.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy concerning the use of his Department's generic acronyms by suppliers of trials equipment in describing their equipment; what action his Department generally takes to implement this policy; and if he will make a statement about how this was applied in the context of the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence does not normally seek to restrict the use of acronyms which it has originated, and there are accordingly few rights which MOD possesses in respect of its acronyms including copyright. One right the Ministry does retain is that of free use of an acronym it has coined in the face of third party attempts to use and to register the acronym or similar word as a trademark. The use of the acronym DROPS is not restricted in any way.

Sir Ian Gilmour: asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the changes in concepts, requirements or understanding which led his Department to purchase from Boughtons demountable rack off-loading pick-up system trials equipment identical to the equipments they had rejected when they were first offered by Boughtons two and a half years earlier; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no record in currently available papers of the equipment referred to as having been offered by Boughtons at the time in question.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's normal practice with regard to the stage in the procurement process at which a general staff target is formulated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A staff target is the first formal definition by the Defence Staff, expressed in broad terms, of the functions and desired performance of a new weapon or equipment. Approval of a staff target will normally be followed by a feasibility study, if warranted by the size and complexity of the project in question.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the principal differences between the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system concept which emerged in 1979-80 and the ampliroll concept which preceded it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No "Ampliroll concept" as such was formulated comparable with the DROPS concept which emerged in 1979-80. The DROPS requirement involved a range of separate equipment elements to provide a complete bulk load handling system. The Ampliroll equipment purchased for trail purposes in 1976 and 1977 was relevant to part, but not all, of that requirement.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what priority was attached in the 1983 selection of the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system trucks to assessments of legality for use on roads; what consideration was given in the selection of the offroad MMLC truck configuration to its road-legality; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The ability of all equipment proposals to meet peacetime construction and use regulations was an important but not paramount consideration in the 1983 assessments. There is no separate offroad MMLC truck configuration.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence which demountable rack off-loading pick up system contractors selected in 1983 included among their range of solutions and options for low mobility demountable rack off-loading pick up system detailed designs of demountable rack off-loading pick up system trailers; if these contractors recommended the trailer option to his Department as the correct choice for LMLC demountable rack off-loading pick up system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Both selected main contractors provided and recommended trailer options and designs to meet the LMLC requirements.

Frigates and Destroyers

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of frigates and destroyers that are currently fully operational in the fleet; and what were the comparable figures one and two years ago, respectively.

Mr. Stanley: The Royal Navy currently has 51 frigates and destroyers in service of which the number currently operational or engaged in preparing for service or trials or training is 46 compared to 47 on 1 April 1986 and 46 on 1 April 1985.

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many frigates and destroyers have been removed from the active fleet for each of the last three years; and how many were added to it over the same period.

Mr. Stanley: The information requested is as follows:

Calendar year	Withdrawals from the active fleet	Acceptances
1984	3	1
1985	4	3
1986	2	1

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the future size of the total operational fleet of frigates and destroyers in the next three years.

Mr. Stanley: As my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement said to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on 1 March 1985 at column 299 it is not the practice to give details of the forecast operational availability of warships for specific years. It remains our intention to maintain a force level of about 50 frigates and destroyers.

Radioactive Waste, Devonport

Dr. Owen asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to move radioactive waste from Devonport and store it in Chatham dockyard.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No decision has been taken on whether to move radioactive material from Devonport and no firm plans have been drawn up.

Lieutenant Narendra Sethia

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will place in the Library a copy of the certificate dated 2nd May 1986 he issued prohibiting Lieutenant Narendra Sethia from revealing in court classified information contained in his diary on the grounds of national security.

Mr. Younger: No. The document to which the hon. Member refers is not a public document. Its consideration by a judge in chambers is still pending.

Royal Marines (Inquiry Report)

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to receive the report of the inquiry into the recent public disclosure of a letter between the honorary Captain General and the Commandant General of the Royal Marines concerning a former Royal Marines officer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: Investigations are still continuing.

DEFENCE

Airborne Early Warning System

251. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if any of the airborne warning and control system offset work being offered by the Boeing company will be carried out under the terms of the Export Administration Act of 1985 of the USA; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has received any guarantees regarding application of the United States of America Export Administration Act to offset orders in connection with the Boeing airborne warning and control system contract; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his answers, 18 December 1986 c. 693 and 12 January 1987, c. 93-4]: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in the House on 18 December 1986 at column 1350 the order for AWACS was subject to satisfactory completion of contractual negotiations with Boeing. The purchase also involves an element of direct acquisition from the United States Government, and is the subject of a memorandum of understanding between the two Governments. As is normal in projects of this size and complexity, negotiations took place for some weeks after the initial announcement of our intention to purchase.

We have now reached agreement with Boeing on a contract which has been negotiated against the background of existing United Kingdom and US law. The agreements reached with Boeing and the US Government are free from any acceptance by the United Kingdom Government that US laws can be applied to encroach on United Kingdom sovereignty. Equipment exported from the USA forming part of the United Kingdom AEW system or needed for its subsequent through-life support will, of course, be subject to controls on its export from the USA. Control of re-export from the United Kingdom will be enforced exclusively by the United Kingdom Government, and this will also apply to the defence articles and services forming part of the United Kingdom AEW system arising from contracts placed by Boeing or its US subcontractors in the United Kingdom.

The other individual work packages to be generated by the procurement will not be fully identified for a number of years, and will be the subject of separate contracts placed on United Kingdom companies. Her Majesty's Government have long stated their rejection of any claims that US laws and regulations can be applied to encroach upon United Kingdom jurisdiction, and United Kingdom companies will negotiate these contracts in this light.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Protein Crops

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has considered granting incentives to farmers to grow more protein crops in the more fertile land areas and leave the growing of other crops to the less favoured areas.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are existing support arrangements for the protein sector and for less favoured areas. I am in favour of farmers diversifying out of products in surplus towards those in deficit and am pleased to see that this is already taking place.

Archaeological Sites

Mr. Amess asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he proposes to take to protect archaeological sites affected by increases in woodland plantings as a result of his recently announced proposals for the rural economy and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It will be a condition of every entry to the proposed farm woodland scheme that planting is approved by the Forestry Commission for the purposes of the existing forestry grant schemes. Under these schemes applicants are expected to clear afforestation likely to affect archaeological sites on their land with the appropriate authorities.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he hopes to arrange for an inspection of Court Gate Farm, Harbourneford, South Brent, South Devon, for hill livestock compensatory allowance, in view of the letter of 27th February 1986 from Mrs. V. Large of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Exeter, stating she was arranging for a Ministry surveyor to inspect the land in the near future (ref. 10/279/18 HY).

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Seal Cull

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for a seal cull this year.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Intervention Food Stores

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of quantities and type of food held within EEC intervention food stores and their location in (a) Sunderland, (b) Gateshead, (c) Newcastle-upon-Tyne, (d) North Tyneside and (e) South Tyneside.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Oils and Fats (Tax)

Mr. Craigen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposal by DS VI of the European Commission to introduce a tax on oils and fats; and what is his estimate of the likely increase in consumer costs on food and drink if the proposal is approved.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 2 March 1987

PRIME MINISTER

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Prime Minister what specific measures she has taken to ensure that computer purchase records relating to the Cabinet Office are not made subject to audit by United States Government inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made it clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member for Leeds, West at columns 751-52 that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit.

The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would only be permitted on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister (1) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the extent to which the restrictions on Ministers, set out in clause 2 of the Channel Tunnel Bill, regarding the approval by them of funds to the concessionaires of the Channel tunnel project should be observed before the enactment of the Bill; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards payment of compensation to persons who suffer loss in consequence of any approval by Ministers acting in their official capacity of funds for the concessionaires of the Channel tunnel project before the enactment of clause 2 of the Channel Tunnel Bill; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government have no intention of providing funds or financial guarantees to the Channel tunnel concessionaires for the construction of operation of the Channel tunnel either before or after the enactment of clause 2 of the Channel Tunnel Bill. The question of compensation to persons suffering loss as a consequence of such payments or guarantees does not therefore arise.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister to what extent the restrictions placed on Ministers under clause 2 of the Channel Tunnel Bill regarding the granting of funds to the concessionaires of the Channel tunnel project affect their activities and decisions when acting as trustees or directors of multinational or international financial institutions to which they are appointed solely because of their Governmental capacities, and to which Government funds are contributed; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Clause 2 of the Channel Tunnel Bill would, if enacted, prohibit any Minister of the Crown from providing funds to the Channel tunnel concessionaires, or guarantees of a financial or commercial nature, for the construction or operation of the Channel tunnel. This prohibition would apply whether or not such Government funds for the tunnel concessionaires were to be provided through such multinational or international financial institutions.

Minister for Sport (Responsibilities)

Mr. Pendry asked the Prime Minister if she will list the areas of responsibility of the Minister for Sport.

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey), Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment has special responsibility for sport and recreation and, in addition, supports his colleagues on planning, regional affairs, housing, inner city and gipsy issues.

Voluntary Bodies (Grants)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Prime Minister if she will list the total amounts paid in grants by Government Departments to voluntary bodies during the financial year 1985-86; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The figures are shown in the table. The total amount provided in 1985-86 represents a cash increase of 19·1 per cent. (in real terms 12·3 per cent.) on the level of provision in 1984-85. In the period between 1979-80 and 1985-86 the level of Government support to voluntary bodies has risen by about 208 per cent. (or in real terms 91 per cent.). These percentage increases take account of revised figures for Northern Ireland Departments in 1979-80 and 1984-85.

Sports Council for Wales	1,061,077
Health Education Council grants	810,000
payments	54,000
Health Education Council—Northern Ireland	278,000

[1] £573,000 of this amount was for the purchase of nature reserves.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Photocopying Facilities

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will investigate the continued misuse of the photocopier in Upper Committee Corridor North by some research assistants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: The authorities of the House will continue to investigate any allegations of improper use of the photocopying machines provided for the use of right hon. and hon. Members, which are drawn to their attention.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal what records there are of the paper used in the photocopier in Upper Committee Corridor North; how the quantity of paper used compares with similar machines located in other parts of the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: Monthly records are maintained of the numbers of copies made on each of the photocopying machines provided for the use of right hon. and hon. Members. There is no significant difference in the quantities of paper used in the Upper Committee Corridor North photocopying machine and similar models situated elsewhere in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will indicate how many hon. Members have entered their names in the payment book at the photocopying machine in Upper Committee Corridor North for having more than 12 copies of one sheet; what is the latest date of entry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: Seven right hon. and hon. Members have entered their names in the payment book provided at the photocopying machine in Upper Committee Corridor North. Two of them have done so more than once. The latest date of entry is 12 February 1987. I welcome the co-operation of right hon. and hon. Members in ensuring compliance with the existing regulations.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will place in the Official Report the amount of money paid by hon. Members for having in excess of 12 copies of one sheet at the photocopier in Upper Committee Corridor North; when the last charge was made upon hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: The records to provide this information in the form requested prior to June 1986 are no longer available. Since that date, £9 has been recovered from hon. Members in respect of the photocopying machine on the Upper Committee Corridor North. The last account rendered to an hon. Member was on 3 July 1986. Accounts are not rendered until the sum due exceeds £1·00, which accounts for the delay in charging Members for copies entered in payment books.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal if he has any plans for a photocopying central pool in the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: There are no plans for the establishment of a central pool of photocopying machines in the Palace of Westminster. Machines are sited at a number of different locations throughout the Palace of Westminster and Parliamentary outbuildings for the convenience of right hon. and hon. Members and their staffs in carrying out their parliamentary duties. The conditions, recommended by the Services Committee, under which they may be used are displayed on notices by each machine. The authorities of the House will continue to investigate specific instances of abuse which are drawn to their attention.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal how many times the photocopying machine in Upper Committee Corridor North has required repairs; what has been the cost of these repairs including labour and materials in the years 1983 to 1986 and the latest available figures for 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: The number of times the photocopying machine in the Upper Committee Corridor North has required repairs, excluding routine maintenance visits, for the years 1983 to date is as follows:

	Number
1983	3
1984	7
1985	3
1986	4
[1]1987	2

[1] To date.

There are no separate charges for repairs, including labour and materials, carried out by the suppliers because these are included in the rental costs.

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will make a statement of his official engagements on Friday 30 January.

Mr. Biffen: In addition to my duties in this house, I had a meeting with a fellow Member of Parliament to discuss a proposal relating to the services of the House.

Parliamentary Papers

Mr. Ashton asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the companies which have an account at the Vote Office for the daily delivery of Hansard and other parliamentary papers.

Mr. Biffen: There are no companies which have an account at the Vote Office for the daily delivery of Hansard and other parliamentary papers. The Vote Office exists exclusively to supply parliamentary papers free of charge to Members and Officers of the House.

The Sale Office of the House of Commons, which is under the separate control of the Deliverer of the Vote, supplies, on payment, parliamentary papers for collection by clients. These clients include registered parliamentary agents and other suitably approved organisations requiring specialist documentation.

The moneys received from this service are shown in the Supply Estimates under class XIX vote 6AZ, as an appropriation in aid and amount to some £130,000 in the financial year 1986-87.

The following is the current list of approved clients:

HOME DEPARTMENT

AIDS

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which an airline steward, arriving from the United States of America and suspected of suffering from AIDS, was held overnight by immigration officials at Gatwick airport and put on a return flight the next morning; what was the source of information regarding his condition; and if the steward was asked about the purpose of his proposed visit to the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's guidelines relating to the procedure for handling the entry or attempted entry into the United Kingdom of persons known to be, or suspected of, carrying the AIDS virus or suffering from AIDS; when the guidelines were introduced; and if he will publish them.

Mr. Waddington: All overseas nationals seeking to enter the United Kingdom must qualify under the immigration rules (HC 169 as amended). These provide, inter alia, that where a port medical inspector advises that for medical reasons it is undesirable to admit a passenger, the immigration officer should refuse leave to enter unless he considers admission warranted by strong compassionate reasons. It was on this basis that the case reported recently in the press was handled.

Firearms Offences

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what firearms offences were recorded on Merseyside in 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The total number of notifiable offences recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used is published annually, by police force area, in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales, Supplementary Tables", volume 3 (table S.3.1(A) of the edition for 1985). A breakdown of the offences recorded in Merseyside in 1985 is given in the table. Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Notifiable offences recorded by the Merseyside Police in 1985 in which firearms were reported to have been used, by offence group

	Number
Homicide	—
Attempted murder etc.[1]	12
Other violence against the person[2]	131
Robbery	89
Burglary	10
Criminal damage[3]	238
All offences	480

[1] Includes other acts (including wounding) endangering life.
[2] Includes wounding which was not classified as an act 'endangering life'.
[3] Includes only offences of criminal damage where the damage was estimated at over £20.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in respect of each category of crime, what is the percentage difference between the total number of crimes committed in the first nine months of 1986 and the totals in the nine months ended 31 March 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of notifiable offences recorded by the police are published regularly for each category of crime. Quarterly figures are published in the Home Office statistical bulletin "Notifiable Offences Recorded by the Police", copies of which are in the Library. The most recent figures, for the third quarter of 1986 are contained in bulletin 39/86. More detailed annual figures are published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", (1985 figures are included in Comnd. 10).

Child Destruction

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought during the last five years on charges of child destruction under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The information available to me, which may be incomplete, shows no prosecutions brought for child destruction under section 1 of the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 in the years 1981 to 1985. Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Off-licences

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the current number of off-licence outlets for sales of alcohol; if he plans to take any steps to seek to restrict this number; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The total number of off-licensed premises at 30 June 1986 was 43,891 (published at table 1 of "Liquor Licensing Statistics, England and Wales, July 1985-June 1986": Home Office statistical bulletin, 37/86). We have no plans to seek to restrict the number of premises granted an off-licence. It is open to the licensing justices, when considering new applications, to take into account the number of licensed outlets already in the area.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to bring the law on off-licences in line with that for the grant of on-licences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: We have at present no plans to do so.

US (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what specific measures he has taken to ensure that computer purchase records relating to his Department are not made subject to audit by United States Government inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member for Leeds, West at column 751-752 that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit. The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would be permitted only on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

Horserace Totalisator Board

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his approval was sought by the Horserace Totalisator Board to participate in satellite information services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hurd: The Horserace Totalisator Board informed us of its participation in satellite information services. My right hon. Friend's approval was not required.

Police (Numbers)

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the present establishment in the Metropolitan police force is made up of traffic police, criminal investigation department, police on the beat and police dealing with administrative duties; and if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Devon and Cornwall as to that force's comparable percentage.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has given to the request from the west midlands police authority for 1,000 extra officers over the next three years and an extra £4 million.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The maximum precept for the authority for 1987-88 will be derived from a formula provided in the Local Government Finance Bill. I met a delegation from the authority on 16 February. The delegation was told that in the Government's view there was no strong case for the maximum precept to be increased. It asked that consideration should be given to an increase of 100 in its authorised police establishment and this request will be considered.

Police Act 1964

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases in each of the past seven years damages have been paid after judgment under section 48(2)(a) of the Police Act 1964; what has been the average settlement figure for each year; and what was the average damages awarded.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many settlements of civil actions against the Metropolitan police have been approved by the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last seven years under section 48(2)(b) of the Police Act 1964.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Neighbourhood Watch

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the research into the effectiveness of neighbourhood watch undertaken by the Police Foundation will be released as a public document; if he proposes to summarise the findings of the research; and if the contents will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Police Foundation is an independent body. I understand that this research contract is due for completion in May 1988 and that the Police Foundation intends to lodge in the Library a copy of any final publication arising from this work.

Police Stations (Derbyshire)

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will reconsider the decision to reject the application by Derbyshire county council for a building programme including special interview rooms at police stations for rape victims and abused children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Derbyshire county council submitted proposals for minor works worth a total of £404,000, of which work to the value of £215,000 was approved. None of the proposals referred specifically to special interview rooms at police stations for rape victims and abused children. If such a proposal were submitted for approval next year, it would be considered in the light of circular 69/86.

Police (Armed Response)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 218, he will (a) name the police forces operating a system of armed response cars and (b) give the number of officers deployed in each scheme of armed response; when the patrols were authorised by the relevant police authority; what equipment the response units use; on how many occasions they have been used; what has been the outcome of their involvement; and if any deaths or injuries have occurred associated with their actions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The police forces operating a system of armed response cars are Nottinghamshire constabulary, West Yorkshire police and Hampshire constabulary. The vehicles concerned are patrol cars each manned by two qualified firearms officers. The number of vehicles deployed at any one time is normally three in Nottinghamshire and two in West Yorkshire and Hampshire. The Nottinghamshire and West Yorkshire vehicles carry two Smith and Wesson model 10 revolvers and one Remington shotgun. The Hampshire vehicles carry two Smith and Wesson revolvers. All weapons are secured in locked boxes which may only be opened on the specific authority of a senior officer. A decision by a chief officer of police to deploy his resources in this way is not one which requires prior authorisation by his police authority but I understand that the police authorities concerned have been informed that the system is in operation. In West Yorkshire the number of operations in which the firearms in these vehicles have been drawn from the box is not recorded separately from other armed operations; in 1986 there were two such occasions in Nottinghamshire and twelve in Hampshire. Shots were fired by police officers in one of these instances in Nottinghamshire and none in Hampshire. There were no deaths or injuries incurred in the course of these operations.

My earlier reply omitted to mention that the Metropolitan police maintain an armed mobile patrol in connection with their responsibilities for protecting the diplomatic community.

Infant Life Preservation Act

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to seek to amend the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929.

Mr. Mellor: The Government indicated their support for the Infant Life (Preservation) Bill which was introduced in another place this Session and has been committed to a Select Committee there. We have no plans for Government legislation to amend the 1929 Act.

Drunks (Cautioning)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the use of cautions to drunks to keep them out of court; and if he will give the most recent statistics he has on the effectiveness of the cautioning system.

Mr. Mellor: Our policy is to keep drunkenness offenders out of court whereever possible. Cautioning is encouraged; 26,000 drunkenness offenders were cautioned in 1985, compared with 2,000 in 1983. As my hon. Friend knows, the number found guilty of drunkenness offences has fallen from 107,600 in 1983 to 56,400 in 1985.

Mr. Aurang Zeb

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the evidence of his principal officer to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration in the course of his investigation into the circumstances in which Mr. Aurang Zeb was removed from the United Kingdom to Pakistan on 3 April 1986.

Mr. Waddington: I will reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of the air fare from the United Kingdom to Pakistan when Mr. Aurang Zeb was removed on 3 April 1986; who paid the cost of his air fare from London to Pakistan; and what agreement was reached between his Department and British Airways on meeting the costs of Mr. Zeb's flight from London to Pakistan.

Mr. Waddington: Mr. Aurang Zeb was removed to Pakistan from the United Kingdom on 4 April 1986. The cost of his air fare for that journey was £272. Mr. Awal Khan, who is Mr. Aurang Zeb's uncle, had paid for his return ticket in advance, and British Airways was directed to remove Mr. Aurang Zeb in accordance with normal practice.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the removal of Mr. Aurang Zeb, a citizen of Pakistan, on 3 April 1986.

Mr. Waddington: Mr. Aurang Zeb arrived at Heathrow terminal 3 from Pakistan on 3 April 1986. He was refused leave to enter and removed to Pakistan on 4 April 1986. I have received representations twice from the hon. Member for Bradford West who considered that Mr. Aurang Zeb was removed with undue haste and as a consequence, the hon. Member was unable to intervene. He has requested that Mr. Aurang Zeb be brought back to this country for a holiday at public expense. I have also received a letter from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Sir A. Buck) in support of that request.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider his refusal to allow Mr. Aurang Zeb, a citizen of Pakistan, who was removed from the United Kingdom on 3 April 1986, to fly from Pakistan to the United Kingdom and from the United Kingdom to Pakistan at public expense; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have reconsidered my decision and notified the hon. Member that there is no justification to allow Mr. Aurang Zeb to come to the United Kingdom for a holiday at public expense.

Immigration (Sri Lankans)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of Sri Lankans who have (a) entered the United Kingdom and (b) left the United Kingdom for each of the last 36 months; and what has been the net migration in each month.

Mr. Waddington: The available statistics, of the number of citizens of Sri Lanka admitted to the United Kingdom, are given in the table. Corresponding data on the numbers embarking are not available.

Detained Youths

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many youths aged (a) under 14 (b) 14 (c) 15 (d) 16, respectively, who are currently detained under section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 are being held in penal establishments.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987, c. 561]: The information is given in the table.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

County Palatine

23. Mr. Pike asked the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next proposes to visit the County Palatine.

Mr. Tebbit: On 10 March.

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will state his official engagements on Friday 30 January.

Mr. Tebbit: None.

WALES

Labour Statistics

8. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest unadjusted figures for unemployment in (a) Rhondda, (b) Mid-Glamorgan and (c) Wales; and if he will give the equivalent figures for 1979 on the most nearly comparable basis.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: On 8 January 1987, the total number of unemployed claimants in Rhondda district, Mid Glamorgan and Wales were 5,190, 33,772 and 176,866 respectively. Unadjusted figures for 1979 are not available on a comparable basis.

17. Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were unemployed in May 1979 and to the latest date possible in 1987; and by how much in percentage terms and in figures the unemployed rate has increased for Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In January 1987, the seasonally adjusted figure for unemployment in Wales was 165,300. The corresponding figure for May 1979 was 73,100. Between the two dates, the unemployment rate rose from 5·9 per cent., to 13·4 per cent. equivalent to 127 per cent.

House Building

12. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many houses were built in Wales in 1986 (a) by local authorities, (b) by housing associations and (c) by the private sector; and what were the corresponding figures for 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In 1986, 8,429 dwellings were completed in Wales. Of these, local authorities (including new towns) accounted for 870, housing associations for 534 and the private sector 7,025. The figures for 1979 were 11,265 completions: 3,326 by local authorities (and new towns), 1,016 by housing associations and 6,914 by the private sector.

New Motorway

15. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many miles of motorway he expects to open in Wales in 1987.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None, but 22 miles of new or improved motorway and 93 miles of all purpose trunk road have been provided since 1979.

Gross Domestic Product (Public Expenditure)

16. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will estimate the proportion of Wales' gross domestic product that is accounted for by public expenditure.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In 1985-86, identifiable public expenditure in Wales, as conventionally defined, totalled £5,727 million. This represented about 40 per cent. of an estimated provisional figure for Wales GDP (at market prices) in the calendar year 1985.

Factory Building

18. Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many factories have been built in Wales during the periods 1975 to 1980 and 1980 to 1987.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: From April 1975 to 31 December 1979, Government agencies completed a total of 434 factory units in Wales. From 1 January 1980 to the end of the current financial year, it is estimated that these agencies will have completed a further 1,800 units. My Department does not hold information on the number of units completed by local authorities and the private sector.

Housing Expenditure

19. Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the level of housing expenditure in Wales in real terms in the years 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The provisional outturn for Gross capital expenditure on housing in Wales in 1985-86 is £185·9 million and the estimated outturn for the current year, at 1985-86 prices as measured by the GDP deflator at market prices, is £213·3 million.

Restart

20. Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons have been interviewed for the restart programme; and with what result.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Between July 1986 and February 1987, 57,134 unemployed people were interviewed under the restart programme. Some 92 per cent. of these were offered a job, training, a place on an MSC scheme or other specialist help and 79 per cent. agree to take up this offer. For the remaining 8 per cent., restart, was either no longer required or no suitable offer was available at the time.

WDA (Factories)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many factories which were built by the Welsh Development Agency over the past seven years are being let, up until the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since April 1979, the Welsh Development Agency has built 1,459 factory units, including extensions. Information on the letting record of these units as a group is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Eighty five per cent. of the Welsh Development Agency's total factory floor space was let at 31 January 1987; a further 5½ per cent. was earmarked for prospective tenants.

Food (Self-sufficiency)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the percentage of self-sufficiency for Wales in the production of (a) butter, (b) milk, (c) beef and (d) sheepmeat.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: It is estimated that the production of butter in Wales in 1986 was 3·1 times greater than consumption, and production of milk was 3·1 times greater than consumption. Production of beef in Wales in 1986 is estimated to be 3·2 times greater than consumption and production of sheepmeat 2·9 times greater.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of Wednesday 25 February, how many hospital beds are available in National Health Service hospitals in Wales at the latest available date; how many were available as an average for 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: During 1979, the average daily number of available beds was 23,456. The corresponding figure for the year ending March 1986 (the latest available) was 21,999.

Margam Colliery

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with officials of British Coal concerning the proposed opening of Margam colliery.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have discussed with British Coal on several occasions a range of issues affecting the south Wales coalfield including the prospect of a new mine at Margam.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers to be on the community programme in Kent in future; and what is to be the future of the community programme project at the Sheerness centre for the unemployed.

Mr. Lee: For 1987-88, it is proposed that over the year the average number of filled places on the community programme in Kent should be 2,800. This is subject to discussion with the local area manpower board, in the context of the programme's provisions for next year.

I understand that the community programme project at the Sheerness centre for the unemployed finishes on 11 June 1987. If a request for renewal funding is made at that time, it will be considered in the normal way along with other applications.

Dr. Hampson asked the Paymaster General in which towns in the Yorkshire Humberside region Restart counselling is available for those out of work for six months.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At present, restart interviews are offered to people reaching six months unemployment in nine pilot areas, one of which is Huddersfield. From April onwards, interviews for such people will be extended throughout the country.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the number of full-time and part-time employees in the labour force in each employment region in (a) 1979, (b) 1981, (c) 1983, (d) 1984 and (e) 1985 aged 16 to 19 years, 20 to 24 years, and 25 years and over, showing separately males and females by the standard Department of Employment categories of ethnic origin.

Mr. Lee: The regular quarterly employees in employment series does not identify age or ethnic origin. The labour force survey provides information on a different basis but allows the above analyses. The available information for the years requested is given in the table below. Because of considerations of sample size, it is not possible to provide the information requested by region.

Mr. Corrie asked the Paymaster General if he will detail, ward by ward, the unemployment figures in Cunninghame district for 1979 and 1983; and what are the latest figures.

Mr. Lee: Following is the available information, which is also in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed claimants in the electoral wards of Cunninghame local authority district for June 1983 and January 1987. The comparison is affected by seasonal factors and changes in the method of collection and compilation of the data. Statistics of unemployment for electoral wards are derived from the ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Paymaster General what is the present number of quarterly signers signing on at unemployment benefit offices in Cleveland at (a) Stockton: Bayheath house, Prince Regent street, (b) Stockton: Daryl house, Park terrace, (c) Billingham: Kingsway house, West precinct, (d) Guisborough: Morgan drive, (e) Guisborough: Loftus market place, (f) Hartlepool: Raby road, (g) Middlesbrough: 36 Grange road and (h) Middlesbrough: Crown house, Wilson street.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: The number of quarterly attenders signing at unemployment benefit offices in Cleveland at the offices listed is as follows:

		Number
(a)	STOCKTON 1 Bayheath House Prince Regent Street	572
(b)	STOCKTON 2 Daryl House Park Terrace	467

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General how many working days were lost through industrial disputes per 1,000 employees in employment in each of the years 1974 to 1986; and what was the average figure for working days lost due to industrial disputes per 1,000 employees in employment (a) between February 1974 and April 1979, and (b) between May 1979 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lee: The number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes per thousand employees in employment, in each of the years 1974 to 1986, is shown in the table below. For the periods February 1974 to April 1979 and May 1979 to December 1986, the annualised averages of working days lost per thousand employees in employment were 427 and 494 respectively.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 24 February concerning expenditure by the Manpower Services Commission on basic literacy and numeracy skills training, if he will publish a table showing a breakdown of such expenditure in 1986-87 by programme or type of provision, and an estimate of the number of persons receiving such training from each programme or type of provision in the year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The estimated figures for 1986-87 are as follows:

	Expenditure £ million	Number of trainees
Wider opportunities training programme	4·9	3,300
Voluntary projects programme	0·5	5,000

In addition, the community programme and YTS offer literacy and numeracy skills training. However no information is available on the level of expenditure or numbers involved in such training.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the number of persons in each recent year receiving training in basic skills of literacy and numeracy from provision made by local education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Information in the form requested is not available centrally. The adult literacy and basic skills unit collects data about the number of people receiving tuition during a given week in each year. The information is as follows:

Tuition from LEAs during a week in	Number of adults
February 1979	57,640
February 1980	56,928
November 1980	63,359
November 1981	73,241
November 1982	[1]76,830
November 1983	82,360
November 1984	84,596
November 1985	[2]104,016

[1] Estimate based on projections from previous years.
[2] This figure includes numbers of adults receiving tuition in English as a second language (collected separately for the first time in 1985).

These figures exclude adults receiving help with basic skills in penal establishments, through Manpower Services Commission programmes, or via voluntary organisations. Information about numeracy provision has been specifically requested only since 1981.

Restart

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the cost of the restart scheme in (a) Great Britain, (b) Scotland, (c) Strathclyde region and (d) Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987, c. 339]: We estimate that in 1986-87 the cost of the restart programme in Great Britain will be around £53 million. The estimated cost for Scotland is around £5·5 million. It is not possible to make a reliable estimate of the cost of the restart programme in either the Strathclyde region or Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Community Programme

Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General how much money is budgeted in the current financial year and for 1988-89 for Manpower Services Commission community programme schemes in (a) Great Britain, (b) Scotland, (c) Strathclyde region, (d) the Renfrewshire, Dumbarton and Argyll area manpower board.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987, c. 193]: The Government are providing resources for the community programme amounting to £1,038 million in 1986-87, £1,120 million in 1987-88 and £1,145 million in 1988-89.

The Manpower Services Commission does not prepare separate cash budgets for regions and areas. However, based on the proposed number of about 245,000 filled places nationally and Scotland's proposed allocation of about 31,000 places, it is estimated that expenditure attributable to Scotland will be about £128 million in 1986-87, and £141 million in 1987-88. Expenditure attributable to the Strathclyde region will be about £65 million in 1986-87 and within this figure, the amount for Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll will be about £21 million. Precise area figures for 1987-88 are not yet available because the planning procedure for determining the distribution of places within Scotland is still in progress.

Figures below national level for 1988-89 are not available at this early stage.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Schools (Annual Meetings)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider producing a circular to be sent to each local education authority providing guidelines for the conduct of the annual meeting of each school.

Mr. Dunn: Section 31(4)(a) of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986 provides for the proceedings at the annual parent's meeting to be under the control of the governing body. The Department's circular 8/86, a copy of which is in the Library, contains some guidance of the conduct of these meetings; copies were distributed to local education authorities and to governing bodies.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from teachers or their unions about the conduct of school annual meetings.

Mr. Dunn: At a meeting with my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold), representatives of the Secondary Heads Association expressed some concern about the conduct of annual parents' meetings in the event of prolonged and persistent criticism of a named individual teacher. They were referred to the guidance in circular 8/86, and agreed to consider the question later, in the light of experience of the first round of meetings.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Tax Decisions

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Attorney-General if he will take steps to ensure that all decisions of the special commissioners in tax cases are published as soon as they are made; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: In December, the Board of Inland Revenue published a consultative document canvassing the issues, and inviting further views, on recommendations made in 1983 by the Keith committee on enforcement powers of the Revenue departments, including its recommendations that selected decisions of the special commissioners of income tax should be reported in anonymised form. The matter will be considered further in the light of comments received on the consultative document.

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Attorney-General what specific measures he has taken to ensure that legal protection is afforded to Her Majesty's Government's computer purchase records subject to audit by United States Government inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: No such measures have been taken. There is no question of Her Majesty's Government's records being subject to inspection by United States officials.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what specific steps he has taken to ensure that computer purchase records relating to his Department are not made subject to audit by United States Government inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit. The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would only be permitted on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

Religious Persecution

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the (a) Czechoslovak and (b) Soviet authorities about the persecution of people solely on the basis of their religious beliefs.

Mrs. Chalker: My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) stressed our interest in human rights in discussions with the Czechoslovak authorities during his visit to Prague last month. In Moscow in January, he made clear to the Soviet authorities our concern about the persecution of religious believers. He referred particularly to the case of Mr. Alexander Ogorodnikov, who has now been released.

South Africa

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the names, political affiliations and backgrounds of people from South Africa who have visited the United Kingdom over the past two years on the invitation of or sponsoring or other kinds of arrangement with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office or the COI.

Mr. Eggar: The only visitors to the United Kingdom from South Africa in the past two years for whom the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has had responsibility have been those who have come under the sponsored visitors scheme. The purpose of the scheme is to enable influential personalities from overseas to obtain first hand impressions of British policies and achievements and to discuss contemporary issues with a range of informed British opinion. The scheme is administered by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and is executed by the Central Office of Information, which is responsible for the setting up of the visitors' programmes.

The list of visitors from South Africa under the scheme in the past two years numbers 44. I will write to the hon. Member with the list of names.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affair, what is the latest estimate of revenue from fishing licences in the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Eggar: The Falkland Islands Government estimate that, by 1 March, they will have received approximately £10 million from fishing licences. Costs of implementation of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone are estimated at £4 million.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Tourist Board

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total public funds made available to the Scottish Tourist Board in cash and at current prices for each year since 1976; and what is planned for the year 1987-88.

Mr. Lang: The information is given in the table.

Expenditure on Scottish Tourist Board

	Cash £ million	At 1986-87 Prices £ million
1976-77	2·323	5·687

Fast Reactors (Research and Development)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what contribution was made by the South of Scotland Electricity Board to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's fast reactor research and development programme in each of the financial years 1985-86 and 1986-87; what is the expected South of Scotland electricity Board budget for this programme in 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90; through whom this money is paid; and if the South of Scotland Electricity Board makes any contribution to fast reactor development programmes apart from that of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by the South of Scotland Electricity Board that its contribution, via the Central Electricity Generating Board, to design and development work by the National Nuclear corporation on commerical scale fast reactors was £555,000 in 1985-86 and the expected outturn in 1986-87 is £587,000. The board expects to contribute £650,000 in the next financial year and a similar amount in subsequent years although the exact amounts are under discussion. In addition, the board has provided to UKAEA at Dounreay engineering support valued at £54,000 in 1985-86 and £26,000 in 1986-87. The board does not contribute to any other fast reactor work.

Nurses

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report, for the latest five years for which figures are available, the numbers of nurses, by specialty, employed by each health board.

Mr. John MacKay: For individual health boards the information by specialty is only available as at 30 September 1985 and 31 March 1986. This is contained in the September 1985 and March 1986 editions of Scottish Health Service Manpower, published by the information services division of the Scottish Health Service, Common Services Agency, copies of which are available in the Library. Previously, the information was not held centrally in this form and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The table below shows the number of nurses (in whole-time equivalents) in each specialty on an all-Scotland basis for the years 1982 to 1986.

The figures for 1986 are provisional.

Rosyth Naval Dockyard

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will specify the planning and environmental precautions to which he will require the Ministry of Defence to adhere in connection with air and water borne discharges from the proposed nuclear refitting facility at the Rosyth naval dockyard.

Mr. Ancram: Proposals by the Ministry of Defence for a nuclear submarine refitting facility at Her Majesty's naval base, Rosyth are presently before my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for determination, and consultations with interested parties continue. I cannot, therefore, anticipate what conclusions my right hon. and learned Friend will reach. Should he decide that the proposals should proceed, he will naturally take account of all relevant planning and environmental considerations in framing the terms of his decision.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the latest pupil-teacher ratios for Scotland and for each local education authority (a) including and (b) excluding head teachers, in nursery schools, primary schools, secondary schools, special schools and sixth form colleges.

Mr. John MacKay: The latest available information for education authority schools is set out in the table:

Pupil Costs

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing net recurrent cost per pupil in nursery schools, nursery classes and primary schools in Scotland and the proportion of that cost attributed to teachers' salaries.

Mr. John MacKay: The available information is shown in the table below which has been compiled from local authority financial returns for 1984-85. These returns do not differentiate between expenditure on nursery education in nursery schools and in nursery classes.

	Nursery schools and classes	Primary schools
	£ at outturn prices
1. Net expenditure per full-time equivalent pupil	1,193	918
	Per cent.	Per cent.
2. Teachers' salaries as a proportion of net expenditure	26·6	49·7

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing average cost for the latest years for which figures are available of a pupil or student in nursery schools, nursery classes, primary schools, secondary schools, independent schools on assisted places scheme for assisted placements, special schools, non-advanced further education and advanced further education in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The available information is given in the table:

Net cost (£ at outturn prices) per full-time equivalent pupil/student

	1984-85	1985-86
Nursery schools and classes	1,193	n/a
Primary schools	918	n/a

Colleges of Education[2]	3,711	3,859

[1] This figure is the average cost to Central Government of an assisted placement under the Assisted Places Scheme.
[2] These figures exclude the cost of tuition fees paid by Government on behalf of individual students.
n/a Figures not yet available.

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the Strathclyde police into the progress of their inquiries following the search of the British Broadcasting Corporation premises in Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: No.

Sheep

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to ensure that the production of sheep in the hills and uplands of Scotland is not jeopardised by expansion of sheep production on better quality farmland.

Mr. John MacKay: There is at present no evidence to show that appreciable expansion of sheep production is taking place on better quality land in Scotland. By paying hill livestock compensatory allowances worth £47 million in 1986-87, of which £22 million is paid on sheep, the Government already recognise that sheep production is more difficult in the hills and uplands. Producers on better quality land outwith the less-favoured areas do not qualify for these allowances. We also recognise the special position of hill and upland farmers by means of the advance payment of sheep annual premium which is made only to our farmers in the less-favoured areas. This year's advance payments, amounting to 75 per cent. of the total, were paid in two instalments in September 1986 and January 1987, and were worth over £14 million.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning increases in hill livestock compensatory allowances for producers on grade B and grade C land; and what response he has made.

Mr. John MacKay: Shortly after my announcement on 18 December on this matter, I received representations from the National Farmers Union of Scotland. In my announcement I said that, consequent upon the green pound devaluation in May 1986, the maximum of 101 European currency units payable per livestock unit increased in value from £62·48 to £64·19, and that the hill livestock compensatory allowance supplements payable on cows on B and C grade land within the Highlands and Islands Development Board area would be correspondingly increased from 1 January 1987. Producers in these areas are therefore now, as before, receiving the maximum amount permitted under the relevant EEC regulation.

I had a meeting with the president of the union on 5 January 1987, in the course of which he expressed the view that further green pound devaluation was justified in this regard. I made it clear that this question would be considered along with other agrimonetary matters in the course of discussion around the annual price fixing.

North Norway Cod Fishing Quota

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the current allocation of the north Norway cod fishery quota; and what reply he has made.

Mr. John MacKay: Representations have been received from the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, the Shetland Fishermen's Associaton, the Shetland Fish Producer's Organisaton Ltd., LHD Ltd., Lerwick and the hon. Members for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace), for Midlothian (Mr. Eadie), for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. McKelvey), for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. McCartney), for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) and for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan). I am at present considering the matter.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply of 17 February, Official Report, column 541, if the Forestry Commission will extend its consultation arrangements with the Nature Conservancy Council to cover all grant applications arising in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Forestry Commission sees no justification for extending its present consultation arrangements with the Nature Conservancy Council to cover all grant applications arising in Britain.

ENERGY

Coal Mines

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will announce legislation to provide for an obligatory proportion of the expenditure on new coal mines to be devoted to environmental protection of areas surrounding them.

Mr. David Hunt: No. British Coal already conducts environmental impact studies for all new mine developments and has been prepared to modifiy engineering design, including moving potential mine sites, in order to meet possible environmental disadvantages.

British Coal Houses

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to how many pre-stressed reinforced residential properties remain in the ownership of British Coal in England, Wales and Scotland, broken down by district council areas.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information is available to him as to how many residential properties in England, Wales and Scotland remain in the ownership of British Coal, broken down by district council areas.

Mr. David Hunt: This is a management matter for British Coal. I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

US (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Energy what specific steps he has taken to ensure that computer records relating to his Department are not made subject to audit by United States inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made it clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member for Leeds, West at columns 751-752 that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit. The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would only be permitted on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

Hinkley Point

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take immediate steps to instruct the nuclear installations inspectorate to identify the areas worked on by Mr. Bob Brookes at Hinkley Point nuclear power station and to carry out checks on the pipework welds which may be suspect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The nuclear installations inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive has already asked the CEGB to carry out an urgent investigation into the allegations relating to pipework welds made by Mr. Brookes, and to report to them.

It would be premature to comment until the full facts are known.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions his Department has had concerning the current treatment of third party finance, where it is supplied for the purposes of energy saving schemes, in the calculation of public sector borrowing; what has been the outcome of such discussions; and what assessment he has made of the implications of the current treatment of third-party finance for the future contribution of such schemes to energy efficiency improvements.

Mr. David Hunt: The provision of external finance for energy efficiency measures is one element of the service offered by contract energy management companies. Contract energy management is an important option available to enable public sector organisations to improve energy efficiency, and the Energy Efficiency Office has already produced some guidelines on how it can be introduced in local authorities. It is currently considering with the Treasury what further guidance could be provided to clarify the use and assessment of contract energy management in the whole of the public sector.

Coal Industry (Finance)

Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the coal industry since fiscal year 1978-79.

Mr. David Hunt: Between 1978-79 and 1985-86 Government support made available to the Coal Industry by way of Deficit and Operating Grant, Social Grant and payments under the Redundant Mineworkers Payments Scheme amounted to over £7 billion. It is anticipated that a further £1·5 billion will be made available in respect of 1986-87.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Leukaemia

30. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to publish the full report of the 21-year statistical survey by the Office of Population Censusus and Surveys, concerning the incidence of leukaemia around nuclear installations.

Mr. Newton: The OPCS report "Cancer Incidence and Mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations, England and Wales, 1959-1980" is expected to be published later this month. Rough copies of the printer's first proof were placed in the Library on 18 February 1987. Also copies may be examined in the OPCS Library at St. Catherines House, 10 Kingsway, London WC2B 6JP.

Disabled People (Discrimination)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what expenditure has been incurred by his Department since November 1983 in discouraging discrimination against disabled people.

Mr. Major: It is not possible to isolate expenditure for this purpose from that on other aspects of disability.

The Government's policy is to promote the integration of disabled people by increasing public awareness of their problems and abilities and by breaking down the barriers they often face. This is reflected in a whole range of activities carried out not only by Government Departments and other statutory authorities but also in the support the Government give to disability organisations in the voluntary sector.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Lyell: The following companies have been awarded hardware contracts since 1984. The value of each contract is not disclosed. It would be improper for reasons of commercial confidentiality to do so.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Lyell: The information is as follows:

	Hardware £	Software £
Actual expenditure in the financial year 1985-86	38,838,721	2,149,107
Actual expenditure this far in the financial year 1986-87	32,574,930	1,894,188

Juveniles (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the name and location of each institution offering secure accommodation for juveniles, indicating the number of places provided at each one.

Mrs. Currie: Details of secure accommodation within the child care system as at 1 February 1987 are shown in the table.

St. Charles Youth Treatment Centre	Brentwood, Essex	—	—	30
	Total	149	58	178
	Grand Total 385

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to change the number of secure places for juveniles made the subject of an order of the court; to what extent their location ensures that juveniles are accommodated within reasonable distance of their home and of the court; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Apart from the two youth treatment centres managed directly by the Department, the provision of secure accommodation within the child care system is a matter for local authorities. Grant aid for the provision of additional places is available. We are not aware of any firm plans which would have a major effect on the amount or distribution of the overall stock of secure accommodation.

Some secure accommodation is provided in most parts of the country and where possible juveniles are accommodated within a reasonable distance of their homes and the courts. The largest units which are suitable for long stay provision are fewer in number and more widely spread, and juveniles accommodated in them may be some distance from their homes.

Free Milk and Vitamins

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women and children in Sheffield were in receipt of free milk and vitamins in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Benefit Scheme (Data Processing)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting between officials of his Department, the Institute of Housing, and seven leading computer companies about the adequacy of current data processing services available to local authorities for the implementation of the new housing benefit scheme; what amount of money he estimates is needed for new computers, programme design and training; and what sum he has so far proposed to meet this purpose.

Mr. Lyell: The meeting referred to was held in order to discuss the draft regulations for the new housing benefit scheme and not to evaluate the implications for local authorities' computer systems of the new scheme. However it did emerge from the discussions that the systems for administering housing benefit are very varied, and individual companies made differing estimates of the extent to which their own particular system would need to be changed. About half the authorities responsible for administering housing benefit do not use any commercially produced systems.

The Government are making available in 1987-88 a cash limited specific grant of £25 million to enable local authorities to prepare for the new housing benefit scheme. Local authorities have been asked to provide by the end of February estimates of the various costs they will need to incur, before final decisions are made on the allocation of the grant.

Benefits

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why in his answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North on 2 February, Official Report, column 545, he was unable to give the number of supplementary benefits recipients beyond December 1984; and when he expects figures for 1985 and 1986 to become available.

Mr. Lyell: The information given in my previous reply was based on the supplementary benefit annual statistical inquiries for the years 1979 to 1984. There are no directly comparable figures for 1985, as the sample survey on which the inquiry is based was deferred from December 1985 to February 1986. Results from the February 1986 inquiry are not yet available.

Although not directly comparable, it is however, possible to provide information on recipients at December 1985 from a separate source—the quarterly statistical inquiry. This information is as follows:

Number of supplementary benefit recipients

	(thousands) Numbers
December 1985	4,590

Note: This information is derived from the Quarterly Statistical Inquiry of supplementary benefit and is not perfectly compatible with that derived from the Annual Statistical Inquiries held in December in previous years.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the saving if no social security, housing, or welfare benefits other than child benefit were paid to any single person whose income was more than £65 per week and to couples married or otherwise whose income was more than £130 per week.

Mr. Major: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the average weekly payment awarded in respect of new claims for supplementary benefit, in the most recent year for which figures are available, in Great Britain broken down by region and for his Department's offices in (a) Newham, (b) Brighton, (c) Slough and (d) Watford.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The table shows the average weekly amounts of supplementary benefit paid to all supplementary benefit recipients in Great Britain, by region, on 12 February 1986, the latest information available. This information cannot be given in respect of smaller areas.

Electrocutions

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths from electrocutions occurred in the United Kingdom in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: The number of deaths registered in the United Kingdom in 1985 with an underlying cause of death as accident caused by electric current (International Classification of Diseases 9th revision E925) was 74.

Disposable Syringes

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the cost of supplying free disposable syringes to diabetics on the same basis as the issue of disposable syringes to known drug addicts; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: As my right hon. Friend announced on 18 December 1986, it is intended to establish a number of special schemes for drug misusers in different parts of the United Kingdom which will include the exchange of used and possibly infected needles and syringes: their location and number have yet to be finalised. Such schemes are not appropriate for people with diabetes and no assessment of the cost of supplying syringes on such a basis has, therefore, been made. The whole question of issue of disposable syringes to diabetics is currently under review.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Christopher Hawkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the change in pensioners' incomes in real terms in the periods 1974 to 1979 and 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Major: The total average net incomes of pensioners increased by 0·6 per cent. a year in real terms between 1974 and 1979, and by 2·7 per cent. a year from 1979 and 1985, the latest available date.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to ensure that maternity grant will be paid for babies born up to and including Sunday 21 June 1987 whose mothers are entitled to claim the grant up to and including 5 April 1987 under the 11-week rule, but have not done so.

Mr. Lyell: The Social Security Act 1986 provides that maternity grant will not be payable for babies due after 5 April 1987, unless they are born before that date. The current rule which permits claims to maternity grant eleven weeks in advance of expected confinement will not therefore have the effect assumed in the question.

Mr. Garrett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in North Tyneside claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending 31 December 1986 the following numbers of claims to maternity grant were made at the Department's local offices which cover North Tyneside although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Numbers
Newcastle (East)	1,459
North Shields	1,108
Wallsend	889

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Pontefract, Castleford and Knottingley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

Pontefract, Castleford and Knottingley are covered by the Department's local offices at Castleford and Pontefract, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the areas in the question. The numbers of claims to maternity grant received at these two local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Numbers
Castleford	1,138
Pontefract	958

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Stoke-on-Trent, South claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The Stoke-on-Trent, South constituency is covered by the Department's offices at Stoke (North), Stoke (South) and Newcastle (Staffs) and their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims received for maternity grant at these local offices during the calendar year 1986 were as follows:

	Numbers
Stoke (North)	2,605
Stoke (South)	1,807
Newcastle (Staffs)	1,572

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Stoke-on-Trent, South received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Stoke-on-Trent, South although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Numbers
Newcastle (Staffs)	1,265
Stoke North	1,640
Stoke South	1,661

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the city of Hull and the Kingston upon Hull, North constituency, respectively, claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the number of claimants to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested.

The city of Hull and the Kingston upon Hull, North constituency are covered by the Department's local offices at Hull (East) and Hull (West) although their boundaries are not conterminous. The numbers of claims for maternity grant received at the Hull local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Numbers
Hull (East)	3,443
Hull (West)	2,862

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the city of Hull and the Kingston upon Hull, North constituency, respectively, received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following number of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover both the City of Hull and the North Hull constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Numbers
Hull (East)	1,929
Hull (West)	1,927

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many women in Calder Valley received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) how many women in Halifax received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,748 claims to maternity allowance were made at Halifax, the Department's office which covers both Calder Valley and Halifax although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dewsbury received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Dewsbury although the boundaries are not conterminous.

	Numbers
Dewsbury	1,379
Huddersfield	1,678

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Huddersfield received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,678 claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's office at Huddersfield although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Calder Valley claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Heeley (Mr. Michie) on 18 February at column 702.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Batley and Spenborough received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year to which figures are available, 1,379 claims to maternity allowance were made at Dewsbury, the Department's office which covers Batley and Spenborough although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Human Tissue Act 1961

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received seeking legislation amending the Human Tissue Act to allow hospitals and medical authorities to take the organs of all those who have not opted out during their lifetime.

Mr. Newton: Since August 1984 we have received letters on this subject from 15 hon. Members, mostly forwarding correspondence from their constituents, and from about 13 other people.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received about the qualifications for receipt of mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We regularly receive representations about the various aspects of the qualifying conditions for mobility allowance. Recently, a large proportion has been in support of extending the medical eligibility criteria to include disabled people who can walk but who are not independently mobile. Many of these representations have referred to deaf-blind people in particular.

Fraud

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the total amounts of money involved in claims which were the subject of (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions for offences of fraud against his Department in each of the years since 1979.

Mr. Lyell: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the visit to Liverpool by the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie).

Mrs. Currie: I visited Liverpool on Friday 27 February to take part in an interview for Liverpool Radio City, and to undertake other engagements.

Parliamentary Questions (Replies)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to reply to the questions of the hon. Member for Burnley (a) on contracted out treatment of private patients, for answer on 12 February and (b) on hospitals in the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale health authority, for answer on 16 February.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to him on Wednesday 25 February and Thursday 26 February.

Project 2000

Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what response he has made to the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visitors Project 2000 on the reform of nursing education, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he received the Project 2000 proposals about nurse education from the Royal College of Nursing; and what is his policy on the recommendations made in the Royal College of Nursing paper.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 24 February at column 235.

Nurses

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses left their employment in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; how many were recruited in the same period; and what information he has on the reasons given by nurses for leaving the service.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle) on 26 January at columns 105-106.

AIDS

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether tests are carried out to ensure that AIDS is not passed on to any child conceived as a result of in vitro fertilisation.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Hospitals (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which hospitals the Minister for Health, the hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) proposes to visit in the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale health authority area on 6 March.

Mr. Newton: Hartley Hospital, in Colne. I regret that the time available makes it impossible for me to visit other hospitals in the area on this occasion.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will outline the present arrangements for gathering proof of earnings for the purpose of family income supplement claims and indicate what changes will be made to these procedures with the implementation of family credit.

Mr. Major: Under the present family income supplement scheme, claimants are asked to supply wage slips in support of their claim, normally for the five pay weeks preceding the date of claim or two months in the case of the monthly paid. Where wage slips are not supplied or the information on them is inadequate, information is sought from the employer. In practice, most claimants fail to provide wage slips, or the correct ones. The White Paper, "Reform of Social Security", Cmnd. 9691, indicated that the Government had decided that evidence of normal earnings in family credit cases will be sought direct from employers. We are still considering whether this will be necessary on every claim.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of Wednesday 25 February, how many hospital beds are available in National Health Service hospitals in England at the latest available date; how many were available as an average for 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) on 10 February 1987 at columns 201-204.

Manchester Royal Infirmary (Casualty Department)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the closure of the casualty department at Manchester Royal infirmary.

Mrs. Currie: The accident and emergency department at Manchester Royal infirmary has not closed. For a 48-hour period from 4.30 pm on Tuesday 24 February those patients attending the department who required emergency in-patient treatment were allocated beds in other hospitals serving Manchester in line with standing arrangements.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures are being taken to reduce hospital waiting lists in the Bolton area.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to the reply, 3 February 1987, c. 585]: I understand that Bolton district health authority has taken action to reduce waiting lists and times for hospital treatment particularly by providing additional operating sessions in general surgery and arranging treatment by other health authorities in orthopaedics. The North Western regional health authority has reported to my right hon. Friend on the district's plans for further progress within existing resources, including arranging additional sessions in ophthalmology. On 17 February my right hon. Friend announced that the North Western regional health authority will receive £2·295 million from the first year's allocation from the waiting list fund. Three projects costing more than £170,000 will be funded in Bolton district health authority. This will enable the treatment of over 1,100 extra cases from in-patient lists, including 130 cataract operations to be carried out in the private sector, and increased activity in general surgery.

Mental Handicap Hospitals

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will name those mental handicap hospitals which have firm dates for closure; and if he will give a breakdown by region of these hospitals showing the anticipated dates and the numbers of residents to be discharged;

(2) if he will list by region the mental handicap hospitals which have not yet made any firm plans for closure; and if he will give the number of residents residing in these hospitals for the last three years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Curtie [pursuant to her reply, 16 December 1986, c. 466-67]: The primary objective of policy on services for mentally handicapped people is the development of better, and more locally based, services. The reduction in size of some hospitals and the closure of others should be a consequence of achieving that aim, and should be accompanied by the development of alternative, and more homely, National Health Service or other residential facilities for mentally handicapped people who need residential care. As well as alternative longer-term residential care, overall alternative provision must cater for the large number of people receiving respite care, assessments and so on.

The information given in the table is of closures planned up to 1995. Column (i) lists hospitals where public consultation has been completed and closure has been agreed, with the target date by which the health authorities aim to have arranged suitable placements for all residents so that the hospital may then close. Column (ii) lists hospitals where replacement facilities are being planned with a view to health authorities being in a position to be able to close during the year shown, subject to the results of consultation. A final closure date will depend on many factors, including the availability of suitable alternative services.

The table gives numbers of residents (short-term and long-term) on 31 December 1985 (the latest available figures), rather than numbers of residents to be discharged. We would expect admissions as well as discharges to be made to many of these hospitals for some time to come.

National Health Service

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all those district health authorities which have (a) ceased and (b) reduced expenditure on private contract services for each category of private contract work for the National Health Service in the last five years.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 12 January 1987, c. 119]: Tables giving the information the hon. Member seeks have been placed in the Library.

Severe Disability Premium

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will define the term household for the purposes of eligibility for the severe disability premium; and if the presence of (a) an adult lodger or (b) an adult subtenant of the claimant will disqualify the claimant from the premium;

(2) if a disabled person receiving attendance allowance will be eligible for the severe disability premium if the only other adult member of the household is unable to provide assistance to that person on account of age or disability;

(3) if a disabled person receiving attendance allowance will be eligible for the severe disability premium for weeks in which the only other adult member of the household is absent from home;

(4) if the presence in the household of a student over 18 years in full-time education for whom no non-dependent deduction from housing benefit is currently made will disqualify a disabled person in receipt of attendance allowance from the severe disability premium;

(5) if a disabled person receiving attendance allowance will be eligible for the severe disability premium for weeks in which the only other adult member of the household has an infectious illness and would endanger the life of the disabled person if he or she provided the care and assistance required by that person.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1987, c. 711-12]: The intention is that the severe disability premium would not be payable if, among other conditions, the claimant had a partner or a non-dependant over the age of 18 living in the same household. The only exception to this would be where the other person was receiving attendance allowance. The circumstances or age of the non-dependant or partner would not otherwise be relevant. It would also not be subject to whether or not a housing benefit non-dependant deduction was actually made, so the presence in the household of a student over 18 treated as a non-dependant would normally debar someone from receiving the premium. In deciding whether or not someone was to be regarded as a non-dependant, either for housing benefit purposes or in order to determine eligibility for the severe disability premium, it would be necessary to establish whether he or she was a member of the same household as the claimant. Where they did not reside together because, for example, one was a sub-tenant living in self-contained accommodation (including separate cooking but not necessarily separate bathroom facilities) they would not be regarded as being members of the same household, and one would not therefore be classified as a non-dependant in relation to the other. Where they did reside together, as might, for example, be the case with a lodger, they would normally be treated as members of the same household unless the arrangement between them was on a purely commercial basis and they were not close relatives.

People would normally be regarded as still members of the same household during short absences, particularly if there was an intention to return. Where this was not the case, the claim would be reassessed.

Finally, a person employed by a charity or other organisation (but not a local authority) who lived with the claimant in order to care for him or his partner would not be regarded as a non-dependent where a charge was made for the service by the organisation concerned.

We intend that the draft housing benefit regulations which have been issued to the local authority associations for consultation will be amended to make these points clear.

We are separately assessing alternative proposals to the severe disability premium put to us by organisations representing disabled people.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Chairman of British Rail about the future of the line between Folkestone and Dover in the light of the Channel tunnel project.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. I understand that the Channel tunnel project will not affect services between Folkestone and Dover.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest estimate of the cost of building the western extension of the Docklands light railway; and what sum, or proportion of the total, will be met from public funds.

Mr. David Mitchell: The latest estimate of the cost of building the western extension of the Docklands light railway is approximately £130 million at outturn prices. The proportion of this sum to be met from public funds will depend on the outcome of negotiations curently taking place between London Regional Transport and the consortium proposing to develop the site at Canary Wharf.

Roads

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the motorway and trunk road schemes for which he intends to award a contract in the year ending 31 March 1987 but which are expected to remain outstanding at that date.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Contracts expected to be let in 1986-87 were listed in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 20 June 1986 at columns 664-5. Of the 34 contracts, four are expected to remain outstanding at 31 March 1987. They are:

Scheme
A19 Peterlee Flyover	Tenders to be invited in June or July 1987; Contract planned to be let in August 1987.
A34 Hanford Grade Separated Junction	Tenders to be invited in March 1987; Contract planned to be let in May 1987.
A49 Leominster Bypass	Tenders invited and are due back in April 1987; Contract planned to be let in May 1987.
A418 Leighton to Linslade Bypass	Scheme hs been delayed by a challenge in the High Court.

Three schemes additional to those listed were let in 1986-87, as follows:

A1 Chepstow Bridge
A48 Baldersby Junction Improvement
A69 Hexham to Corbridge Remedial Works

Buses

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many independent bus companies are now operating on deregulated bus routes in the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Mitchell: there are 1,727 independent bus operators now running registered local bus services.

National Travel Survey

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce the results of the last national travel survey.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I expect the first results from the 1985-86 national travel survey to be published before the end of this year.

Roads (White Paper)

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the next roads White Paper to be published.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are currently engaged in a review of our road programme. We expect to publish our conclusions in the spring.

London Buses

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will tabulate in the Official Report for each of the bus districts of London Regional Transport, information available to him on the passenger mileage travelled and bus mileage run for each of the years 1984, 1985 and 1986, respectively, showing separately the figures for routes run by (i) London Buses on its own behalf, (ii) London Buses as contractor for London Regional Transport and (iii) other contractors, respectively, together with totals, and totals for the London Regional Transport area.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information is not available in the form requested. Since many bus journeys and bus routes are not exclusive to any one of the six operating districts which make up London Regional Transport's subsidiary, London Buses, it would not be practicable to disaggregate total mileages. Information is available as follows:

Passenger miles

Railway Accidents

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the railway accidents notified to him in the Warrington area since May 1983.

Mr. David Mitchell: If the hon. Member would care to write to me, telling me exactly what places he includes in the term "Warrington area" and exactly what types of accidents he wants listed, I will provide it as soon as possible.

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Transport what specific steps he has taken to ensure that computer purchase records relating to his Department are not made subject to audit by United States Government inspection in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member at columns 751-52 that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit. The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would only be permitted on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentiality, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

ENVIRONMENT

Football Clubs (Merger)

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Professional Footballers' Association about the employment implications of the proposed merger of Fulham and Queen's Park Rangers football clubs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the proposed merger of Fulham and Queen's Park Rangers football clubs.

Mr. Tracey: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have received any direct representations from the Professional Footballers Association about this proposed merger. Press reports suggest that several interested organisations wish to express their concern to the Government—a concern that I would share over the loss of any historic football club or ground.

Estate Action

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dwellings were renovated with the assistance of Estate Action in 1986; and how many he expects to be renovated in the current year.

Mr. John Patten: I have approved Estate Action schemes in 1986-87 benefiting nearly 53,000 dwellings. Of these, nearly 1,000 will be brought back into use to house the homeless. The scale of these benefits will increase significantly in 1987-88, when the resources we are making available through Estate Action will increase by 50 per cent. to £75 million.

Green Belt

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if there are any plans to extend the areas of green belt land in Essex.

Mr. Waldegrave: The initiative for making any such extension lies with the county council in preparing proposals for alteration to the county structure plan, which are expected to be submitted to my right hon. Friend for approval later this year.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for development of agricultural land were referred to his Department in 1984, 1985 and 1986, respectively.

Mr. Waldegrave: I take it that the hon. Gentleman is seeking information on the reference of applications to my right hon. Friend for decision under section 35 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971. (Local planning authorities are required to consult the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food about certain applications before they reach their own decisions on them).

The information is not readily available in the form requested. However, in evidence presented during the Environment Committee's inquiry into "Planning: Appeals, Call-in and Major Public Inquiries" in 1985-86, we reported that, in 1984, of some 427,000 planning applications made, 42 were referred to my right hon. Friend under section 35. Of these only three were subject to specific objection on agricultural grounds.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he plans to seek power to purchase compulsorily sites for nuclear waste disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Homeless Families

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis his Department decided that two years should be the maximum period for which homeless families will be allowed to occupy units of temporary accommodation provided under the 1988 Housing Corporation programme.

Mr. Tracey: The aim is to get families out of bed-and-breakfast accommodation while the local authority finds permanent rehousing; two years is long enough for authorities to make the necessary arrangements. Many families should be able to move on within one year.

West Yorkshire Residuary Body

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the West Yorkshire residuary body has notified his Department of the capital receipts received for the sale of properties and land which previously belonged to the West Yorkshire metropolitan county council.

Mr. Chope: The West Yorkshire residuary body currently estimates that it will receive £2·75 million in 1986-87 and £3 million in 1987-88 from the sale of land and property. Firm figures will not be available until the residuary body's accounts for the respective years have been audited and certified.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the West Yorkshire residuary body has notified his Department of the number of bids made for the purchase of the county hall, situated in the city of Wakefield, West Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No. Marketing is still in progress.

Shared Ownership

Mr. Wolfson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on the do-it-yourself shared ownership scheme; and if he intends to increase the maximum purchase price allowed under do-it-yourself shared ownership regulations;

(2) what representations he has received about the do-it-yourself shared ownership scheme and the maximum purchase price allowed under do-it-yourself shared ownership regulations;

(3) if he will estimate the cost of increasing the maximum purchase price allowed under the do-it-yourself shared ownership regulations by (a) 35 per cent., (b) 40 per cent. and (c) 45 per cent., respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I shall shortly be reviewing the value limits to apply from 1 April 1987 for all housing association shared ownership schemes in the light of representations from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey), the National Federation of Housing Associations and several individual representatives. New provision for do-it-yourself shared ownership schemes is restricted to discretionary funding by local authorities within their HIP allocations, which precludes effective estimating of the effects of increased value limits.

Mr. Wolfson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider allowing unlimited do-it-yourself shared ownership purchases over an extended area within the county of Kent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Local authorities are already free to operate unlimited do-it-yourself ownership schemes on a voluntary basis independently of housing associations. I have no plans to remove the value limits in respect of shared ownership operated through housing associations.

Television Sets (Palace of Westminster)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many colour television sets there are in the Palace of Westminster; and what is the television licence fee payable in respect of them.

Mr. Chope: There are 41 colour television sets in the Palace of Westminster provided from the Department's funds. Television licences are a matter for the relevant House authorities.

Home Insulation

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the request from Melton borough council for an additional £3,000 allocation under the homes insulation scheme.

Mr. John Patten: The Department has not yet responded to the council.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what he estimates would be the increase, in percentage terms, in the fabric heat loss to a heated factory of 10,000 sq m constructed with a single metal skin, compared with the same factory building constructed to a minimum current Building Regulations (England and Wales) standards.

Mr. John Patten: If the factory were built entirely with a single metal skin with an insulation value (u value) of 6·5, rather than 0·7 in accordance with the present requirements, the percentage increase in the fabric heat loss would be about 830 per cent.

Brookwood Lye, Woking (Public Inquiry)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to conclude his consideration of the claim by the Brookwood Lye action group for ex-gratia payments to cover costs incurred by it at the re-opened public inquiry relating to land at Brookwood Lye, Woking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I regret that consideration of the action group's claim has been delayed. If the group would provide the information requested in the Department's letter of 3 February 1987 in respect of its costs at the abortive first inquiry, an offer will be made as soon as possible.

Anti-fouling Paint

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set an early date for banning the manufacture of anti-fouling paint containing tributyl tin;

(2) what steps he will be taking to enforce the ban he announced on 24 February of the use of anti-fouling paint containing tributyl tin.

Mr. Waldegrave: Regulations which will ban the retail sale of anti-fouling paints containing TBT, and which will also prevent products containing TBT being used to treat fish farm nets and cages, are being drafted at present. It is the Government's intention to introduce these regulations as soon as practicable, following a consultation period as required under the Control of Pollution Act. The regulations would be enforced in England and Wales by local authority trading standards officers who would inspect retail outlets and paint manufacturers' premises. Similar arrangements would apply in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue advice to all yacht clubs and other interested organisations setting out in simple language the Government's position on tributyl tin in anti-fouling paints, stating from what date it becomes illegal to use it and giving advice on the enforcement of the ban and inviting their co-operation.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Department is already in contact with the Royal Yachting Association, with yachting and boating magazines, and with other interested parties, to ensure that the Government's current position on tributyl tin is well known and widely publicised. Further information will be issued at the time that the new regulations are implemented.

Residential Homes

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce regulations to require unregistered residential care homes to be inspected by the local environmental health and fire prevention officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: Where local authorities consider premises to be houses in "multiple occupation", they have a duty under the Housing Act 1985 to inspect them from time to time. They also have a duty to secure adequate means of escape from fire in the larger ones (three storeys or more, with aggregated floor space over 500 sq m) and a discretionary power in respect of the remainder.

The Department's circular 12/86 recommends that on this aspect inspection should be carried out jointly by officers of the local authority and the fire authority, and the Act requires the local authority to consult the fire authority before serving any notice requiring works.

Annex B of the circular, copies of which are in the Library, also summarises the provisions of other legislation on means of escape from fire which may be applicable to residential care homes.

Regional Development Plans

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish the regional development plans for the north-west of England.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987]: My right hon. Friend is consulting local authorities in the Merseyside and Greater Manchester areas about the preparation of strategic guidance for the unitary development plans which they will be preparing under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1985. Proposals for a wider coverage of regional planning guidance were included in the consultation paper, "The future of development plans", published by the Department last September, on which comments are invited by 14 March.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Graduate Attachment Scheme

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the graduate attachment scheme.

Mr. Tom King: A pilot graduate attachment programme administered by the Northern Ireland Small Business Institute and sponsored by the Department of Economic Development commenced on 5 January 1987. The 26-week programme provides 25 places for unemployed graduates who are receiving practical and meaningful work experience with companies in the small business sector to enhance their prospects of managerial employment.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Tom King: The information is as follows:

	Hardware £	Software £
1985-86	3,671,225	1,259,133
1986-87	9,322,374	1,122,550
1987-88[1]

[1] The total projected expenditure is approximately £14 million.

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Tom King: The companies listed have been awarded contracts totalling in aggregate more than £10,000. For reasons of commercial confidentiality the value of each is not disclosed.

Housing

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the outcome of the consultations between the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and tenants on the Cromac estate and the Sandy Row and Lower Newtownards area; and what percentage of tenants wish to retain the service provided by the district heating schemes.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Housing Executive in the first instance but I understand from the chairman that, of 273 tenants (69 per cent.) in the Cromac area who responded to consultation, 88 (32 per cent.) were in favour of removal and 178 (65 per cent.) were against with seven (3 per cent.) undecided. I also understand that having considered both the results of the consultation and economic and management considerations, the Housing Executive will be proposing that district heating in the Cromac estate be removed. I await a formal proposal from the Executive and shall write to the hon. Member when I have reached a decision.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Shareholders

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the number of individual shareholders in companies in Britain in (a) 1979 and (b) 1986.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Howarth) on 25 February 1987 at column 295.

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether, pursuant to his reply of 19 February, United States audit inspectors will have access to the United Kingdom or overseas customer records of those United Kingdom companies which hold approved foreign consignee status or a United States distribution licence; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 751, approved foreign consignee status involves United Kingdom companies in supplying (a) their United States supplier or (b) the United States Department of Commerce, with details of their domestic or overseas customers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the United States distribution licence system agree to operate. Such a visit would be subject to conditions which safeguarded commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of 19 February, what status he now accords the COCOM agreements; what adjustments he intends to make to the COCOM lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Agreements reached in COCOM are unaffected. The United Kingdom will continue to participate fully in the review of control lists and to give effect under United Kingdom law to agreed changes.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library copies of any United States distribution licence system regulations and foreign consignee status regulations which apply to United Kingdom high technology companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear on 19 February at columns 751-52, we reject extraterritorial re-export controls and regulations connected with them. Nonetheless, and for the information of Members, I am taking steps to place the relevant United States regulations in the Library of the House.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 751, what steps he proposes to take to prevent the loss of approved foreign consignee status (a) resulting in the loss of all United States supplies to the affected company or (b) resulting in the company going on the United States denials list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Any United Kingdom firm which decides to give up its approved foreign consignee status because it does not want to receive an audit visit should still be able to use the United States system of individual export licences. There is no prima facie reason why this should lead to loss of United States supply or the company being placed on the United States denials list.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 751, what special terms and conditions are imposed on United Kingdom companies who (a) hold approved foreign consignee status or (b) hold a United States distribution licence, and who are suppliers to the United Kingdom nuclear weapons industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Under United States regulations, the distribution licence system cannot be used for the export of controlled goods destined for the nuclear weapons industry and other related sensitive nuclear end uses.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what specific measures he has taken to ensure that the provisions of (a) United Kingdom law, (b) EEC law and (c) the European convention on human rights are not affected by recently imposed United States re-export controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I do not know of any recently imposed United States re-export controls which affect the position under the laws referred to or under the European convention on human rights.

Ministerial Decisions (Public Interest)

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he uses in deciding the degree to which the public interest is involved in matters falling for decision by him.

Mr. Channon: There are no absolute criteria. The matters taken into account depend on the circumstances of the case and the relevant legislation.

Industry (Public Funds)

Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the shipbuilding industry since fiscal year 1978-79;

(2) how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the steel industry since the fiscal year 1978-79;

(3) how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to manufacturing industry since the fiscal year 1978-79;

(4) how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the aerospace and aero-engines industries since the fiscal year 1978-79;

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

British Steel Corporation

Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement regarding the future of the British Steel Corporation Clydesdale works in Mossend; and whether any merger is planned for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There is substantial excess capacity in the seamless tubes sector. BSC's response to this is primarily a matter for the Corporation's management; and no proposals have been put to the Department in respect of actions, such as a merger, which would require the Secretary of State's consent.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures for (a) the annual production in the United Kingdom and (b) the annual import to the United Kingdom of chlorofluorocarbons 11 and 12.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I regret that figures for production of chlorofluorocarbons 11 and 12 in the United Kingdom are commercially confidential and that import statistics are unavailable.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures for the annual export from the United Kingdom of chlorofluorocarbons 11 and 12.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I regret that these figures are not available.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of propellants used for non-industrial aerosols in the United Kingdom are accounted for by chlorofluorocarbons.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I regret that this information is not available.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why the draft Securities and Investments Board rules published on 12 February did not form the subject of prior consultations with the small independent intermediaries affected by the rules; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The proposed rules submitted to my right hon. Friend on 10 February by the Securities and Investments Board, as I made clear at the time, reflected the results of consultation on earlier drafts published by the board. As my right hon. Friend made clear, comments made to the Department about the proposed rules will be fully considered in deciding whether to recommend to Parliament the transfer to the board of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his assessment of the implications of the implementation of the draft Securities and Investments Board rules as published on 12 February for the ability of small independent intermediaries to carry on trading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend is currently considering the rules and supporting material submitted by the Securities and Investments Board on 10 February. The position of small intermediaries will be one of the matters to which he will have regard in deciding whether to recommend to Parliament the transfer to the board of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Satellites

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contracts for new satellites have been placed by Her Majesty's Government in each of the past 10 years; with which companies; and for what total value.

Mr. Pattie: In the past 10 years, three contracts, one in each of the years 1981, 1985 and 1986, have been placed by Her Majesty's Government for the supply of a total of five Skynet 4 military communications satellites: three (Skynet 4A, 4B and 4C) for the Ministry of Defence; two (NATO IVA and IVB) for NATO. All three contracts have been placed with British Aerospace with Marconi Space Systems as principal sub-contractor. The total value of the three contracts is some £200 million.

THE ARTS

Royal Opera House

Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts under which vote and sub-head expenditure was made relating to the purchase of land in Covent Garden in 1975 for the benefit of the Royal Opera House.

Mr. Luce: Class X, vote 27, sub-head A1, 1974-75 Estimates.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure

Sir William Clark asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total of public expenditure on the agricultural, manufacturing and merchant shipping industries, respectively, in 1984-85; what proportion these expenditures bore to these industries' respective contributions to the gross domestic product; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Information is not readily available in the precise form requested. Estimates which are available, for calendar years 1984 and 1985, are given in the table:

		(1) General Government Expenditure £ million	(2) Industry's Contributions to GDP £ million	(1) as proportion of (2) per cent.
Agriculture, forestry and fishing	1984	2,194	5,971	37
	1985	2,821	5,485	51
Manufacturing	1984	2,443	69,545	3·5
	1985	2,432	76,800	3

Source: Based on United Kingdom National Accounts, 1986 (tables 2.1 and 9.4).
Agriculture makes up most of agriculture, forestry and fishing. Figures for merchant shipping are not available.

Free Ports

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will consider reducing the free ports documentary requirements for United Kingdom goods to the level applicable in bonded warehouses.

Mr. Brooke: Bonded warehouses are premises approved for the storage of goods subject to excise duty or both customs and excise duty. Officially approved documents are used for the receipt and delivery of United Kingdom goods and comprehensive records of receipt, storage, processing and delivery are required. United Kingdom goods taken into a free zone require less documentation, having only to be entered into the operator's record on receipt and to be the subject of a customs declaration on delivery.

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will allow British free ports to hold goods under tempory importation agreements.

Mr. Brooke: British free zones are already allowed to hold temporarily imported goods under the conditions laid down in article 28 of the Council regulation EEC/3599/82 which is directly applicable in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will consider removing the need for British free ports to have an inward processing relief certificate for duty-free operations; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: No. Specific authorisation for inwards processing relief, whether in the British free zones or generally elsewhere, is required by EC legislation. Its purpose is to guard against the use of third country goods when similar Community products are available. Removing the need for authorisation could damage the interests of Community producers.

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on British free ports in the light of the recent report by Mr. Timothy F. Beyer Helm a copy of which has been forwarded to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government do not propose to change their policy on the free port experiment in the light of Mr. Helm's report. A review of the practical operation of free zones, including the present VAT requirements, was announced in the White Paper "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers".

Jamaica (Debt)

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest arrangements that his alternate director agreed to in relation to the indebtedness of Jamaica and its ability to meet its obligations to the International Monetary Fund, International Bank of Reconstruction and Development, and International Development Association.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Jamaica is at present current in its obligations to the International Monetary Fund, the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development and the International Development Association. Its requests for a standby arrangement and compensatory financing facility are to be considered by the IMF executive board on 2 March. Discussions of the executive board are confidential.

Statutory Minimum Wage

Mr. Cyril Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional cost to the Exchequer and to local Government, in wages and salaries per annum, of a statutory minimum wage of £116 per week; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Eurotunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the approval given by Her Majesty's Government to the consideration by the staff of the European Investment Bank of a loan for Eurotunnel is subject to any conditions regarding the timing of the completion of the loan in relation to the date of enactment of the Channel Tunnel Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The EIB is fully aware that the completion of any loan could not take place before the Channel Tunnel Bill has been enacted.

Income Tax

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the cost to the Exchequer if income tax thresholds were raised to £65 per week for a single person and £130 per week for a couple, married or otherwise.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Energy Saving Schemes

Mr. Rost asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has yet reached any decision on the exclusion of third party finance, where it is supplied for the purposes of energy saving schemes, from the calculation of the public sector borrowing requirement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Treasury supports the introduction of cost-effective energy conservation measures in the public sector estate; and is considering with the Department of Energy guidance for public sector bodies to clarify the use and assessment of contract energy management schemes. The impact which third party schemes have on the PSBR depends on the particular characteristics of the schemes concerned.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has imposed on cigarette manufacturers a limit on cigarette manufacture and distribution from 1 February to the date of the Budget.

Mr. Brooke: To protect the tobacco products duty revenue from forestalling, by excessive deliveries prior to and in anticipation of the Budget, the Commissioners of Customs and Excise have placed restrictions on the quantities of cigarettes and hand-rolling tobacco which may be delivered on payment of duty. No restrictions have been placed on manufacturing operations. Full details are set out in Customs and Excise news release No. 1143 of 2 October 1986, and notice 85C, copies of which I am placing in the Library. Essentially, the arrangements permit daily deliveries between 1 February and 19 March (two days after the Budget) to be about one and a half times the daily average in 1986.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Clelland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for offences of fraud against Her Majesty's Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in each of the years since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1987, c. 62]: The details in respect of the Inland Revenue are:

	Persons prosecuted	Convictions
1979-80	150	142
1980-81	189	172
1981-82	176	146
1982-83	142	134
1983-84	159	148
1984-85	239	233
1985-86	254	242

In addition the number of convictions obtained by the police in each of the years since 1979 for tax frauds in connection with the construction industry tax deduction scheme was:

	Number
1979-80	10
1980-81	15
1981-82	27
1982-83	3
1983-84	5
1984-85	8
1985-86	74

For Customs and Excise, comprehensive information in the form requested is not held centrally, and could be assembled only at disproportionate cost. The following table shows numbers of persons prosecuted and convicted for a variety of Customs and Excise offences, including fraud, in cases handled by specialist investigation staff. Cases dealt with by other Customs and Excise staff are not included.

	Number of persons prosecuted	Number of persons convicted
1979-80	856	819
1980-81	802	739
1981-82	1,065	1,008
1982-83	1,010	944
1983-84	1,462	1,349
1984-85	1,201	1,092

Privatisation

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table like that published in a written answer on 27 January at columns 229-30 showing for the years 1974-75 to 1978-79 the actual proceeds of public sector sales of assets outside the central privatisation proceeds.

Mr. MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: Figures for sales of land and existing buildings for the years 1976-77 to 1978-79 are as follows:

£ million

	1976-77	1977-78	1978-79
DOE—Housing	81	169	383
DOE—Other environmental services	36	32	66
Ministry of Defence	18	26	30
Home Office	12	10	17
Other	33	63	94
Total	180	300	590

Figures prior to 1976-77 are not readily available.

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the opening and closing price on the first day of trading of the shares sold in the privatisation share issues, together with, in each case, the number of shares sold.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: The table gives the information requested on the number of shares and the closing prices on the first day of trading. Opening trading prices are not centrally available.

Government share sales		Number of shares[1]	Closing trading price on first day (pence)

Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the output per head of the working population, excluding the extraction of oil and gas from both the numerator and the denominator, in each year since 1972.

Mr. MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987]: The information requested is given in the following table:

Output per head of working population excluding[1] Class 13 (1980=100)

	Output
1972	98·7
1973	102·8
1974	101·2

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Cabora asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the eligibility of loans for the installation and erection of swimming pools and tennis courts for mortgage interest tax relief.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend receives a number of representations on mortgage interest tax relief, but few concern the items which the hon. Gentleman mentions.

Mr. Cabora asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he intends to take to prevent tax relief on mortgage or home improvement loans being provided for non-eligible items.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Inland Revenue already carries out checks on borrowers' mortgage interest relief claims, and on the lenders to ensure that they are operating the MIRAS arrangements properly. These compliance procedures will continue to be kept under regular review.

Mr. Christopher Hawkins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest relief claimed in respect of marginal rates of income tax above the basic rate;

(2) if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of raising the limit for mortgage interest relief by steps of £1,000 from £30,000 to £40,000 in respect of relief at basic rate only.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his replies, 26 February 1987]: The direct revenue cost of mortgage interest tax relief at rates in excess of the basic rate in 1986-87 is estimated to be about £270 million.

Assuming no consequential changes to the distribution of mortgages outstanding, the direct revenue cost, in a full year at 1986-87 levels, of an increase in the ceiling for mortgage interest relief in respect of relief at basic rate only is estimated to be:

Ceiling £	Cost £ million
31,000	20
32,000	40
33,000	60
34,000	75
35,000	90
36,000	105
37,000	115
38,000	130
39,000	140
40,000	150

The cost of an increase in the ceiling at 1987-88 levels would probably be significantly higher than the estimates above, both because the number of new home loans over £30,000 has been increasing recently and because an increase in the ceiling might stimulate additional borrowing. The cost of relief at excess over basic rate and of an increase in the ceiling for 1987-88 will also depend on the level of interest rates in that year as well as on the 1987-88 income tax rates and bands.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Soft Fruit

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the European Commission regarding frontier prices for trading in soft fruit for processing and the arrangements for policing this trade.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We have made frequent representations to both the Council and the Commission of the European Communities about frontier prices of semi-processed soft fruit. In doing so, we have stressed the need for the Commission to take effective measures to stop low-priced imports undermining the Community market. Steady improvements have been achieved in the price agreements negotiated by the Commission with the main suppliers (Poland and Yugoslavia).

Those agreements are voluntary, but my Department monitors imports closely and we are ready to press the Commission to introduce safeguard measures, as it did in the case of raspberry pulp last year, if this appears to be necessary to avoid disruption of the market.

Rhizomania

Mr. Andrew Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has considered further measures to avoid risk of rhizomania disease.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. I have considered carefully the need for additional arrangements to minimise the risk of rhizomania disease reaching our beet crops through soil imported with potatoes and other vegetables for processing. I am pleased to announce that consultations with the interests concerned will now take place with a view to introducing statutory controls relating to land on which solid or liquid waste from the processing of imported potatoes and other vegetables may be discharged. The consultations will also explore the possibility of reducing the 2 per cent. soil tolerance allowed on imports of potatoes. These additional controls would supplement the range of measures we have already introduced to avoid the risk of rhizomania disease becoming established here.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he hopes to arrange for an inspection of Court Gate farm, Harbourneford, South Brent, south Devon, for hill livestock compensatory allowance, in view of the letter of 27 February 1986 from Mrs. V. Large of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Exeter, stating that she was arranging for a Ministry surveyor to inspect the land in the near future (ref. 10/279/18 HY).

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: An inspection has been arranged for the week of 9 March. I will write to my hon. Friend about this case.

Seal Culling

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for a seal cull this year.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: Under the Conservation of Seals Act 1970 the authority to issue a licence under which seals may be culled in England and Wales rests with the Home Secretary.

My Department has an interest in any effect that seals may have on fisheries. In order to obtain information on which to assess the impact of seals on fisheries we make a financial contribution to the research carried out by the Sea Mammal Research Unit (SMRU) which includes monitoring the populations around our coasts. I am advised that the seal population around the Farne Islands, the major population on the English coast, has remained relatively stable in recent years. In response, however, to complaints about increasing seal damage from fishermen operating with fixed nets off the north east coast of England we have, in addition to the ongoing work of the SMRU, commissioned Hull university to carry out a survey to assess the extent of such damage. This work is still in progress. I have no plans to seek the Home Secretary's authorisation for a seal cull this year.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of quantities and type of food held within EEC intervention food stores and their location in (a) Sunderland, (b) Gateshead, (c) Newcastle upon Tyne, (d) North Tyneside and (e) South Tyneside.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: At 31 January 1987 the stocks held were as follows:

(tonnes)

	Skimmed milk powder	Butter	Beef	Feed wheat	Barley
Sunderland	—	—	—	—	—
Gateshead	—	856	241	—	—
Newcastle upon Tyne	240	—	—	497	10,345
North Tyneside	—	3	—	—	—
South Tyneside	—	1,173	—	—	—

Oils and Fats (Taxation)

Mr. Craigen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposal by DS VI of the European Commission to introduce a tax on oils and fats; and what is his estimate of the likely increase in consumer costs on food and drink if the proposal is approved.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987]: I consider that the budgetary problems of the oils and fats regime should be tackled by internal measures to control support costs rather than by the Commission's proposed oils and fats tax. The latter might increase average retail food prices by about three quarters of 1 per cent.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether there were any specific trials objectives set for the Multilift chainlift system when it was bought for trials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer which I gave him on 9 February 1987 at column 102.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of the 1975 Multilift chainlift system, which piece of hard level terrain it was envisaged the system might pick up its bulk loads from; which piece of hard level terrain it might deliver these loads to; what concepts there were for the construction of these bulk loads at the first location and their dismantling at the second location; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answers which I gave my right hon. Friend on 9 February 1987 at column 103.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what bulk loads the 1975 Multilift chainlift system was thought to be suitable for transporting; what potential role was envisaged for it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Multilift equipment in question was purchased in 1975 to enable the Army Department to try out the chainlift system as part of its consideration of the possible use of demountable body systems for the movement of containerised bulk loads.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what benefits were expected in 1975 to accrue from the movement of bulk loads exclusively between locations or hard level standing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1975 the Army Department was seeking to establish whether increased productivity could be obtained by the use of bulk load handling systems.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the DROPS combination selected in 1983 for use as LMLC on roads was legal for use on roads in peacetime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria governed the choice of (a) an offroad truck that was legal for use on roads and (b) a road-going truck-trailer combination that was not legal for use on roads in peacetime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Both truck choices are legal.

Equipment Trials

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the practice of his Department in cases where costs of acquiring trials equipment have been incurred, with regard to keeping records of trials performances, compiling trials reports and producing subsequent conceptual papers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The results of trials conducted in the Ministry of Defence are recorded and usually incorporated into a formal report. Lessons learned in trials are incorporated in the reports and may, as appropriate, contribute to subsequent concept papers along with other material.

United States (Distribution Licensing)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence what specific steps he has taken to ensure that computer purchase records relating to his Department are not made subject to audit by United States inspectors in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No such measures are necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in his reply of 19 February to the hon. Member at columns 751-752 that he will not normally allow audit visits except where he is satisfied that a company wishes to maintain approved foreign consignee status and does not therefore wish the Government to reject an application for a visit. The purpose of any visit, if allowed, would be to check the procedures which United Kingdom firms choosing to use the distribution licence system agree to operate. A visit would be permitted only on conditions which safeguarded national security and commercial confidentially, so that any computer purchase records relating to this Department would, if they raised such issues, be protected.

United States (Distribution Controls)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence if technology and data transferred to the United Kingdom by Boeing Incorporated under the airborne warning and control system offset arrangements will be subject to audit inspections by United States Government inspectors in the United Kingdom monitoring compliance with re-export controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No, unless a distribution licence is involved. The AWACS contract itself makes no provision for distribution licences to be used as a part of the offset arrangements.

RAF Squadron Leader (Press Statement)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his answer of 12 February, Official Report, column 304, any disciplinary action has been taken against the Royal Air Force squadron leader who made an unauthorised statement to the press.

Mr. Freeman: No, although all officers have been reminded of their obligations in this respect.

Project Zircon

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 16 February, Official Report, column 367, he will specify the title under which expenditure so far incurred on Project Zircon has been separately and specifically identified, where it has been so identified.

Mr. Younger: It is not the practice to publish such information.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 880, what is his understanding as to the precise definition of the phrase expect to consult, in relation to the Comptroller and Auditor General's handling of sensitive defence projects on which expenditure has been incurred which would normally justify its being reported to the Public Accounts Committee; what is his understanding as to the degree of discretion which this term allows the Comptroller and Auditor General in deciding whether to inform the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee about such a project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It would not be proper for me to comment on dealings between the Comptroller and Auditor General and the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason Project Zircon has been excluded from his Department's major project statement to the Committee of Public Accounts; who, outside his Department, was informed of this exclusion and when; when his Department first informed the Public Accounts Committee that it reserved the right to withhold certain projects from the major projects statement; how many projects have been so withheld since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The project to which the hon. Member refers was excluded from the major project statement on grounds of national security. I refer the hon. Member to my answer to her on 2 February 1987 at column 517 and confirm that in the case to which she refers the National Audit Office was informed in the time scale indicated in that answer. My Department has made no general statement to the Public Accounts Committee regarding the exclusion of projects from the major project statement. Since the major project statement was introduced in 1982 my Department has included in successive statements all projects which fell clearly within the cost and other criteria for inclusion, the sole exclusion being the project to which the hon. Member refers.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's practice with regard to conveying to the Comptroller and Auditor General the degree of security sensitivity attached to a particular project which is the subject of his audit examination; at what stage and by what method this is done; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In conducting their audit activities the staff of the Comptroller and Auditor General have access to departmental files, and can therefore see from the security classifications accorded to their contents the degree of security sensitivity attached to particular projects.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 24 February, if he will propose to the Committee of Public Accounts that the arrangements surrounding the major projects statement be revised so that all projects which qualify for inclusion in it on expenditure grounds but which are currently excluded on grounds of national security or the public interest should be notified to the Chairman of the Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Trident

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will break down figures for expenditure on the Trident programme into its constituent parts, showing separately (a) expenditure on any communications programme identifiable and (b) any component costing 5 per cent. or more of the total.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The main cost elements of the Trident project are as follows:

	Per cent.
Submarines (less weapon system equipment)	31
Weapon system equipment including tactical system	21
Missiles	12
Shore construction	7
Warhead, miscellaneous, unallocated contingency etc.	30

As I indicated in my reply of 23 February at column 139 to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours), communications equipment forms part of the tactical weapon system. The whole weapon system equipment accounts for 21 per cent. of the overall Trident project estimate.

Trackway (Marketing)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 17 February, if he will list each of the difficult questions raised by the matter of the unlawful marketing of trackway by the Singapore Government; and if he will indicate how near each is to resolution.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The questions under consideration involve issues of tactics and timing together with an in-depth analysis of the laws and practice relating to copyright in Singapore. Under the circumstances I am not prepared to comment further.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Debt Rescheduling

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in the Official Report all the agreements concerning rescheduling of debts made between the United Kingdom and each other developing country since 1979.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Since 1979 the United Kingdom has signed 76 agreements concerning rescheduling of debts with other countries, the dates of which are listed below. These include agreements made by the Export Credits Guarantee Department and the Overseas Development Administration. There are a further 24 agreements under negotiation or to be negotiated following multilateral agreements.

VAT (Prescriptions)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received relating to the respective liability of (a) dispensing doctors and (b) chemists to value added tax in relation to prescriptions.

Mr. Brooke: None.

Safety Regulations

Mr. Nellist asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the non-availability of copies of the Safety Representatives and Safety Committee Regulations 1977 (S.I., 1977, No. 500); if he will ensure that an early reprint by Her Majesty's Stationery Office is arranged; and if he will make a statement as to why these regulations are currently not available at certain of Her Majesty's Stationery Office's bookshops.

Mr. Brooke: The Safety Representatives and Safety Committee Regulations 1977 are numbered S.I. 1977 No. 500 and were published in March 1977. The most recent reprint was in October 1985 and current stocks are sufficient to meet expected demand.

Copies are normally available at all HMSO bookshops except Belfast, which does not stock them as the regulations do not apply to Northern Ireland. There may have been very occasional times when individual shops were temporarily out of stock for short periods, but on such occasions orders would be taken for fulfilment when replacement copies arrived.

European Community Budget

Mr. Raffan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest situation concerning the European Community budget for 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The president of the European Parliament declared the 1987 community budget adopted on 19 February. The adopted budget is unchanged from that proposed by the Budget Council on 13 February, which I described to the House in my answer of 17 February to the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Hirst) [Official Report, c. 542-3.]

Mr. John MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1987, c. 545]: The information requested is given in the following table in respect of the royal ordnance factories, Her Majesty's Stationery Office, the royal dockyards and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. The other bodies were not constituted on a trading basis in 1974-75 and details of their turnover in the form requested are not available.

	Turnover 1974-75

Her Majesty's Stationery Office (Note 2)	69	27	2
Royal Dockyards (Note 3)	100	—	—
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (Note 4)	80	—	—

Notes

1. The royal ordnance factories were vote-funded for the first three months of 1974-75 and financed by means of a trading fund from 1 July 1974. They were vested in Royal Ordnance plc on 2 January 1985.
2. Two per cent. of HMSO turnover was accounted for by sales direct to the general public from HMSO bookshops.
3. A very small element of royal dockyard turnover (exact proportion not available) was for overseas Governments and civilian customers.
4. Some 80 per cent. of the net costs of UKAEA's activities in 1974-75 was funded by central Government. Information on exports and the public sector is not available in the form requested.

TRANSPORT

Roads

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each metropolitan district and each London borough the estimated highways capital and highways maintenance expenditure for 1986-87.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is in the following tables:

(a) Authorities' 1986 Transport Policies and Programmes.
(b) Authorities' Return of Expenditure and Rates 87.

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the places on the motorway system where extra access or egress roads have been built subsequent to completion of the motorway, showing in each case the purpose of such extra roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Market Harborough Bypass

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the timetable for the Market Harborough A6 bypass; and when he expects construction to commence.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The anticipated date for publication of draft orders later this year is dependent on the analysis of further ground investigation work which has recently been carried out.

A public inquiry could, if it proves necessary, be held in early 1988. This would allow construction to start in 1989.

Kingston Bagpuize Bypass

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to hold the public inquiry in respect of the bypass at Kingston Bagpuize in Oxfordshire.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We hope to hold a public inquiry, if needed, about six to nine months after the publication of the draft orders planned for this summer.

Motor Cycles (Identity Marking)

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received concerning the identity marking of motor cycle frames;

(2) if he has any plans to encourage or require the marking of motor cycle frames with identification numbers to be listed in registration documents.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Construction and Use Regulations require vehicle identification numbers to be marked on a plate on motorcycles up to 150cc if first used between 1 August 1977 and 1 January 1982 or up to 125cc if first used after 1 January 1982. Regulations made under the Vehicles (Excise) Act 1971 require a frame number to be quoted when application is made to register any motorcycle for the first time.

As a result, virtually all motorcycles are marked with an identification number. The Department cannot trace representations on this subject.

London Coach Terminal

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress on the development of a new coach terminal for central London; and if he will make it his policy that the costs of building and running such a terminal will be on commercial terms to the operators.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) on 17 November last. I am still considering what would be an appropriate form of inquiry and hope to make a further statement shortly. I am also considering, with LRT, the opportunities for private funding of any coach terminal that may be developed.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Television Producers

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the percentage of television production currently provided by independent producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The most recent information about the origin of programmes shown on United Kingdom television is contained in the annual reports of the BBC and IBA for 1985-86, copies of which are in the Library. The Government are discussing with the BBC and IBA means of achieving its target of 25 per cent. of original material on BBC and ITV being supplied by independent producers within about four years.

Missing Children

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what evidence is available to him of a link between child prostitution and runaways; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will set up and fund a research project endeavouring to establish the number of runaway children reported missing throughout the United Kingdom, and to investigate the number of homeless children involved in child prostitution in the metropolitan area;

(3) if he will convene an urgent meeting of chief constables throughout the United Kingdom with a view to establishing what information they have about runaway children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The police are aware of the dangers to runaway children, including the risk that they may become involved in crime, and endeavour to assist them within the limits laid down by the law. Police forces keep records for operational purposes of persons reported missing. Chief officers do not consider that collecting further statistical information would offer them any practical assistance, and research to establish reliable estimates of the numbers of homeless children involved in prostitution would be extremely difficult, given the illegal and covert nature of the activity.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 26 February, Official Report, column 345, to the hon. Member for Leicester, East if he will take steps to establish a unit to collate for the future statistics relating to missing children from each police force area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. We are not persuaded that such a unit would be justified on operational grounds.

Child Destruction

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the gestational age of the foetus in each of the cases where prosecutions have been brought during the last five years on charges of child destruction under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 2 March.

Prison Population

Sir Edward Gardner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the change in the size of the prison population in England and Wales from February 1985 to September 1986; and what information he has about the relevant figures for other member states of the EEC.

Mr. Mellor: Between 28 February 1985 and 30 September 1986 the population of Prison Department establishments increased by 1,800 (4 per cent.), which is equivalent to about 2,000 after allowing for normal seasonal variation. Information on the prison population in other member states of the European Community is published twice a year by the Council of Europe in its Prison Information Bulletin, copies of which are held in the Library.

The information for different countries is not comparable because the definitions of prisons and prisoners vary between countries and such differences may have a substantial effect on the comparisons. However, the most recent information indicates substantially greater growth in the three years ending February 1986 in every country in the EEC except Germany and Spain when compared with England and Wales.

Independent Broadcasting Authority

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use he has made of his powers in relation to the appointment of a medical advisory panel to the Independent Broadcasting Authority under section 16(5) of the Broadcasting Act 1981; what criteria he uses in deciding which professional organisations he shall require the Independent Broadcasting Authority to consult on the appointment of a medical advisory panel; what steps he has taken to monitor the results of such consultation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend is informed by the IBA of the bodies consulted on each occasion that a prospective appointment is to be made to the panel. We would wish to be satisfied that these consultations ranged widely across the relevant professional bodies. It is the duty of the authority and not the Government to take into account the views of the bodies consulted. The membership of the medical advisory panel is published in the annual report of the IBA.

Crimes of Violence

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the average figures served for life sentences imposed for offences of murder in the years 1960, 1970, 1975, and each year from 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987, c. 340]: Information on the number of persons sentenced for murder is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales," supplementary tables volume 2, (in table S2.1*(a)* under offence classification 1).

The readily available information on time spent under sentence in Prison department establishments is given in the table, which also shows the numbers received in each year who were still in custody on 31 December 1986. The corresponding information for persons received in 1960 is not readily available.

AIDS

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure the accuracy of the registering of deaths which have occurred as a result of the individual concerned having contracted AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

Clinicians are invited to report, confidentially, to the communicable disease surveillance centre, all cases of AIDS, including deaths from the disease. These reports show that up to the end of 1986 there were 285 deaths due to AIDS in England and Wales. Over the same period there were 220 deaths registered in England and Wales where cause of death has been given as AIDS or a similar term has been mentioned on the death certificate. The reasons for the discrepancy are currently being investigated.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Records

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General when the Lord Chancellor intends to make available all public records relating to the Anglo-French-Israel negotiations before the 1956 Suez crisis.

The Solicitor General: The Lord Chancellor has already done so. As far as is known, all public records relating to Suez have been available in the Public Record Office since 2 January last, except for the small proportion approved for extended closure or retention under the usual criteria. No records have been withheld because they contain information about Anglo-French-Israeli negotiations.

Social Security (Decisions)

Mrs. Beckett asked the Attorney-General how long after the appeal hearing social security commissioner's decision No. CU/387/85 was sent to the claimant; and what was the reason for the delay.

The Solicitor-General: The appeal was heard on 29 August 1986 and the decision was sent to the claimant on 6 February 1987. The decision was a matter for the commissioner in the exercise of his independent judicial functions, but the Lord Chancellor is seeking information from the chief social security commissioner.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Attorney-General what is the average delay between a Social Security Commissioner's oral hearing and notification of the decision to the claimant.

The Solicitor General: The average time is misleading since it is distorted by the existence of a small number of abnormally long delays. However, for decisions issued during January and February 1987 the average time from oral hearing to notification was three and a half months.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

New Zealand (EC obligations)

Mr. Warren asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the performance of other European Community countries of their obligations to New Zealand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: So far as agriculture is concerned, we know of no obligations between other member states and New Zealand, entered into bilaterally. There are two major Community agreements with New Zealand, which concern access for imports into the Community of butter and sheepmeat.

Cereal Stocks

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the volume of on-farm stocks of cereals in Lincolnshire was at 31 December 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Gummer: Information for Lincolnshire could be provided only at disproportionate cost. End of month regional estimates of on-farm stocks of cereals in England and Wales according to MAFF region for December 1983 and by standard statistical region for December 1984, 1985 and 1986 are contained in the MAFF cereals stocks surveys for the months in question. Copies are in the Library of the House.

Farm Rents

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the average farm rent in pounds per acre in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) England for each year since 1979.

Mr. Gummer: Government statistics are presented in metric terms. The table below gives average farm rents for (a) Great Britain and (b) England. The land tenure system of Northern Ireland is not generally comparable with Great Britain. Consequently no information can be provided for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Average Farm Rents (£ per hectare)

Year	Great Britain	England
1979	35·54	42·13
1980	41·93	50·01
1981	49·21	58·36
1982	56·51	66·14
1983	63·32	73·93
1984	69·65	81·27
1985	75·40	88·01
1986[1]	80·72	95·75

EC Food Aid

Mrs. Beckett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now give instructions that the European Economic Community butter to be distributed should be handled on a standard basis throughout the country and that a pound of butter should be given to someone who produces an order book for retirement or invalidity pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Distribution arrangements, including amounts distributed to each person and verification of eligibility are for the various charitable organisations concerned. I see no case for further specific guidance and I regard it as right that we should proceed on the basis that the charitable organisations use their own discretion.

Milk

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will specify the main points of difference at the February European Economic Community Agriculture Council on new arrangements for milk.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 24 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Sir P. Mills) (Official Report, c. 242.)

Pea Bacterial Blight

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has reached decisions on future action against pea bacterial blight; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: My Department has taken firm steps to combat pea bacterial blight since infection was found in the fodder pea crop in the summer of 1985.

Our longer-term aim has been to minimise infection by bringing pea bacterial blight within the seed certification scheme. A review carried out in the light of the results of crop inspections and laboratory tests on fodder pea seed last year has confirmed this as the right course. We therefore propose to amend the seed certification scheme so that, from 1 July 1987, home-produced seed submitted at breeders, pre-basic, basic and C1 levels will be certified only if tests have shown the stock to be free from pea bacterial blight. At the same time, we shall extend the existing controls on imported fodder pea seed to the C1 category.

Pea bacterial blight will, at least for the present, continue to be a notifiable disease. This will enable the incidence of the disease to be monitored.

Pesticides

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the European Economic Commission about proposed legislation concerning the export of pesticides without prior informed consent.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply.

In discussions about the proposed EC regulation concerning the export from the import into the Community of certain dangerous chemicals, the United Kingdom has put forward the arguments set out in the explanatory memorandum which was deposited in Parliament on 3 November 1986.

SCOTLAND

Grampian Region

87. Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are unemployed in the Grampian region of Scotland.

Mr. Lang: On 8 January 1987, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in the Grampian regional authority was 25,192.

East Fife Regional Road

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress of the East Fife regional road; and what he now estimates will be its final completion date and cost.

Mr. Ancram: This scheme is being built in four separate phases. Phase I was completed and opened to traffic in September 1985. Phase II is under construction and is due for completion in late May of this year. Phases III and IV —which are planned to be constructed concurrently— will be the subject of a public local inquiry to be held at the end of March. Depending on the outcome of the inquiry, it is hoped that work will start early in 1988 and be completed within a two year period. The total cost of the road is likely to be of the order of £36 million.

Fife Regional Council (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what capital allocations have been made, and used, for educational purposes by Fife regional council in each of the last five years.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is given in the table:

Fife regional council

£000s at outturn prices

Education capital allocation			Actual capital expenditure on education
Year	Allocation originally notified	Final level of consent
1982-83	1,535	2,119	2,587
1983-84	1,255	1,121	1,710
1984-85	2,320	2,320	2,991
1985-86	3,885	3,615	4,788
1986-87	5,665	5,192	5,124
1987-88	4,080	n/a	n/a

Notes:

(1) The 'final level of consent' is after any adjustments for underspending or overspending in the previous year; any transfer of resources from other programmes; and any supplementary allocations which may have been made.

(2) All figures exclude capital financed from current revenue.

(3) The expenditure figures for 1985-86 are provisional and those for 1986-87 are estimates based on the authority's forecast of capital payments in the current year.

Women Judges

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the 24 judges of the court of session appointed under the Maximum Number of Judges (Scotland) Regulations 1986 are women.

Mr. Lang: None.

Health Boards (Rates)

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the amount of rates paid by each Scottish health board to (a) regional councils, (b) islands councils, (c) district councils and (d) in total for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. John MacKay: Information held centrally relates to payments in lieu of rates made by each health board to its local rating authority. No breakdown between regional and district council rates is available. The information is spread over a number of headings in health boards' annual accounts. I shall write to the hon. Member once the information has been collated. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Margarine and Cooking Oils

Q88. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the impact on consumers in the EEC of the Commission's proposals for a tax on margarine and cooking oils; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I hope that the Commission's oils and fats tax proposal will be withdrawn before the next European Council meeting in June. The right way to control the growing cost of the Community's oils and fats regime is to reduce support prices, not to tax the consumers.

10 Downing Street (Official Dinner)

Q130. Mr. Pollock asked the Prime Minister when she last hosted an official dinner at No. 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: I last gave an official dinner at No. 10 Downing street on Thursday 8 January.

USSR (Visit)

Q149. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her forthcoming visit to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton), Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 18 February at column 693.

Manpower Services Commission

Q180. Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to change the role and functions of Manpower Services Commission managing agents of community programme schemes.

The Prime Minister: The role and functions of community programme managing agents are kept under review by the Manpower Services Commission. There are at present no plans for changes.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Kennedy asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on ministerial accountability for the Crown Estate Commissioners in respect of policy decisions taken by them.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland are accountable for any directions that might be given to the Crown Estate Commissioners as to the discharge of their functions under the Crown Estate Act 1961. The commissioners are required to provide the Treasury with accounts and other returns and with estimates of future receipts and expenditure. Treasury approval is also required for the salary of the commissioners and the numbers and conditions of service of their staff.

Engagements

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 March.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 March.

Mr. Janner asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 March.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

ENVIRONMENT

Labour Mobility (Housing)

86. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what new initiatives the Government are introducing to stimulate and assist individuals and families to relocate in areas of housing shortage following the successful obtainment of permanent employment.

Mr. Tracey: Five million pounds of the Housing Corporation's programme for 1987-88 will be allocated to the provision of grants of up to 30 per cent. of the cost of housing association schemes to provide shared accommodation for young single people moving into an area to take up employment. Recent measures in the Housing and Planning Act are intended to enable shared ownership schemes to become more widely available using private finance. These schemes can be particularly helpful to home owners moving into an area of higher house prices. The new Act also increases the scope for approved landlords to offer assured tenancies to widen the choice in the private rented sector. The powers proposed in the Local Government Bill to enable local authorities to give financial assistance towards the provision of privately rented housing will be a further encouragement to mobility, for public sector tenants the well established national mobility scheme, tenants exchange scheme and key workers schemes run by local authorities are available.

Council Spending (Ealing)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from residents in the London borough of Ealing concerning the policies and spending of Ealing council.

Mr. Chope: The Department has received representations from residents in the London borough of Ealing complaining about the extent of the rate increases being proposed.

PRC Homes

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of PRC homes eligible for assistance have been repaired to date; and approximately what proportion he expects to have been repaired by 31 March 1988.

Mr. Tracey: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 4 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping

Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison) at column 723 concerning progress under the housing defects legislation. Evidence available to the Department suggests that some 23,000 private owners of PRC properties were eligible for assistance. Although it is not possible to forecast reliably the position at 31 March 1988 we expect to see substantial progress on repairs over the next year.

Association for Children's Play and Recreation Ltd.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he intitated on, and what response was made to, his proposal that the functions of the charitable body, the Association for Children's Play and Recreation Ltd., should be assessed by the Sports Council.

Mr. Tracey: In addition to discussions with the two organisations directly involved and with other interested Government Departments, the views of the Association of County Councils, the Association of District Councils and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities were sought. Written comments were also received from voluntary organisations. All the organisations consulted accepted that some degree of change was necessary if arrangements for children's play were to be improved, though several have expressed misgivings about the proposed merger. I remain convinced that this option offers a secure future for children's play and I welcome the fact that negotiations between the Sports Council and Play Board are well advanced.

New Towns

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the powers to be provided for the local government and Parliamentry Commissioners to investigate complaints against the Commission for the New Towns and the New Towns Corporation.

Mr. John Patten: As foreshadowed in paragraph 11 of its White Paper (Cmnd. 9563, July 1985), the Government are currently seeking powers, through the Parliamentary and Health Service Commissioners Bill, to extend the general jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration to the Commission for the New Towns and new town development corporations, with the exception of their housing functions which will be a matter for the Commission for Local Administration. Separate powers to give effect to this extention of their jurisdiction will be introduced when an appropriate opportunity arises.

Rented Housing

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the total number of homes which he estimates were available to rent in England (a) from local authorities, (b) from housing organisations, (c) from other public authorities, (d) from private landlords, and (e) in total in each of the years from 1957 to 1986.

Mr. Tracey: The available estimates are:

Stock of rented dwellings: England
Thousands of dwellings

	Rented from			Total rented stock
	LAs and NTs	HAs	Private owners and other tenures[1]
April
1961	3,339	4,424		7,763

[1] "Private owners and other tenures" include dwellings occupied by virtue of employment whether in public or private ownership, and before 1981 included housing associations.
[2] provisional.
Note: For statistical purposes the stock estimates are expressed to the nearest thousand, but should not be regarded as accurate to the last digit. Estimates are based on data from the Censuses of 1961 to 1981 and those for the years before 1971 are not strictly comparable.

Right to Buy

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to revise, in line with inflation, the £50 maximum limit for fees that may be payable to a local authority for services incurred under the right to buy provisions of the Housing Act 1980.

Mr. Tracey: The limit is under review and I will let the hon. Member know the outcome.

Homeless People

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest 12-month period which is available for the total number of people who applied to be treated as homeless; how many were accepted as homeless under the Homeless Persons Act; and how many were offered non-permanent accommodation.

Mr. Tracey: On the basis of information provided to the Department by local authorities, in the period 1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986, inquiries under the homelessness legislation were completed for 217,740 households, and authorities accepted responsibility to accommodate 101,280 households. The Department does not collect information on the number of households placed in temporary accommodation. However, information published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy shows that in the financial year 1985-86 authorities placed at least 39,432 households in temporary accommodation.

Urban Programme

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of money that will be devoted to the urban programme for inner cities in 1987-88 compared with the previous year; and what is the percentage change in real terms from 1986-87 to 1987-88.

Mr. John Patten: Provision for the urban programme (including urban development grant and urban regeneration grant) in 1987-88 is £324 million, compared with £317 million in 1986-87. This is a reduction of 1·5 per cent. in real terms. Provision for the urban group of programmes as a whole, however, (including urban development corporations and derelict land grant) is increased by £54 million, or an increase of 7·3 per cent. in real terms.

Homes Insulation

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of housing insulation grant he plans to make available to householders who are not claiming housing benefit or supplementary benefit.

Mr. John Patten: None. Under the proposed new homes insulation scheme which I announced on 19 December at column 756 grants would only be available to eligible householders who are in receipt of housing benefit or supplementary benefit. Our aim is to target help on those who most need it.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make 100 per cent. home insulation grants available to any householder claiming either housing benefit or supplementary benefit.

Mr. John Patten: No. The proposed new scheme would withdraw the general grant at 66 per cent. but would extend the 90 per cent. grant to all householders who are in receipt of housing benefit or supplementary benefit (provided the other conditions of the scheme are met).

We would normally expect householders to have a stake in this sort of expenditure, to help to ensure that the total amount of expenditure is reasonable.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total expenditure level on the homes insulation scheme in 1986; and what is the expected level for 1987.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, the Member for Surbiton, (Mr. Tracey) to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on Friday 13 February at column 380.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of those householders who claimed home insulation grants in 1986 were claiming housing benefit or supplementary benefit.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not available.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the percentage of householders in dwellings without loft insulation claiming either housing benefit or supplementary benefit.

Mr. John Patten: Precise information is not available, but the Government believe it is sensible to target assistance towards the costs of loft insulation on the households least able to afford it for themselves. On 19 December last, I therefore announced our intention to extend the scheme of 90 per cent. grants for this purpose to all on housing benefit or supplementary benefit.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total costs incurred by commerce and industry as a result of the reduction in the share of local authority expenditure met from central funds since 1979, including his estimate of such costs for the current financial year.

Mr. Chope: The level of Exchequer grant is determined each year in relation to estimated local authority relevant expenditure and it is not possible to know what local authorities would have spent if a different proportion of relevant expenditure were met by grant. However if grant were paid at 60 per cent., the percentage at settlement in England for 1979-80, of the estimated relevant expenditure set out in each of the rate support grant settlements from 1979-80 to 1986-87, then the total available would be about £10½ billion more than shown in those reports; this would have been financed from central taxation. Assuming this amount was in fact simply met by rates about 40 per cent. would have come from industrial and commercial ratepayers.

New Towns Act 1981

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 23 February, Official Report, column 96, if he will publish in the Official Report, the text of the direction issued in March 1985 to Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation under section 43 of the New Towns Act 1981.

Mr. John Patten: The text of the direction issued in March 1985 to the Warrington and Runcorn development corporation and Warrington borough council under section 43 of the New Towns Act 1981 is as follows:

NEW TOWNS ACT 1981

DIRECTION UNDER SECTION 43(1) WITH RESPECT TO THE NEW TOWN OF WARRINGTON

Whereas the condition mentioned in section 43(2)(b) of the New Towns Act 1981 is satisfied with respect to the new town of Warrington;

Now therefore the Secretary of State for the Environment in exercise of his powers under section 43(1) of the said Act, hereby directs the Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation and the Warrington Borough Council (being the council of a district within which the area of the new town of Warrington is situated) to enter into consultations with him, with each other and with the council of any other district within which any part of the area of the new town or any dwellings of the new town or any associated property is or are situated, with a view to a transfer scheme being made in respect of the new town of Warrington by the Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation and the Warrington Borough Council.

Any expression which is used in this direction and which is also used in the said Act shall, unless the context otherwise requires, have the same meaning as it has in that Act.

Signed by authority of the Secretary of State
A. J. C. Simcock,
an Assistant Secretary in the 21 March Department of the Environment.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will take a decision on the selection of prospective sites for the deep burial of long-lived radioactive wastes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Responsibility for identifying potential sites for the disposal of intermediate level radioactive wastes rests with UK NIREX Ltd. Heat-generating wastes will be vitrified and stored for at least 50 years before disposal, so the question of site selection for these wastes does not currently arise.

Council Rents

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the average council rent level as a percentage of (a) average earnings and (b) the state retirement pension for a single pensioner and a pensioner couple in each of the years from 1970 to 1986.

Mr. Tracey: The estimated figures are as follows:

Average local authority and new town unrebated rents

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many acres of derelict land have been brought back into use for each year since the derelict land grant scheme was first introduced.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not available. However, the following areas of derelict land in England have been reclaimed with the aid of derelict land grant:

	Area (acres)
1974-75	2,235
1975-76	3,221
1976-77	2,129
1977-78	3,912
1978-79	3,115
1979-80	3,053
1980-81	3,465
1981-82	4,303
1982-83	3,567
1983-84	3,369
1984-85	3,317
1985-86	2,594

Note: Comparable information for earlier years is not available.

Notting Hill Housing Trust

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much grant was paid to the Notting Hill Housing Trust in each of the last 10 years; how much is being sought by this body for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Notting Hill Housing Trust has received revenue deficit grant, in respect of its accounting periods, as follows:

Period ended	£
30 September 1977	883,393
30 September 1978	639,182
30 September 1979	610,418
31 March 1981 (18 months)	1,314,939
31 March 1982	1,051,496
31 March 1983	232,707
31 March 1984	1,051,118
31 March 1985	818,103
31 March 1986	[1]260,054
31 March 1987	[2]416,000

[1] Estimated.

[2] Projected.

The association has not indicated the likely size of any claim in respect of the period ending 31 March 1988.

The NHHT has received subsidy under the Housing Finance Act 1972, in respect of financial years, as follows:

Financial year	£
1976-77	3,568
1977-78	3,068
1978-79	2,568
1979-80	2,068
1980-81	1,568
1981-82	1,068
1982-83	568
1983-84	[1]68

[1] Final payment.

The NHHT has received extra-statutory development loss grant payments as follows:

Date of payment	£
2 March 1983	330,266
22 November 1983	10,800
19 March 1985	[1]6,529

[1] Final payment.

Registered housing associations may receive payments of housing association grant in respect of specific housing projects. HAG is paid through the Housing Corporation and through local authorities, and details of payments to individual associations are not kept centrally.

CIVIL SERVICE

Rayner Reviews

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Minister for the Civil Service what are the total cumulative savings arising as a result of the Rayner reviews to date.

Mr. Luce: Cumulative savings of around £1 billion have been made since 1979 as a result of efficiency scrutinies. Currently, savings are running at some £300 million a year with further annual savings of about £100 million in the pipeline.

WALES

Companies

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of companies which have been established in Wales over the past seven years; and if he will give a breakdown of the countries from which they came.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The main countries of origin of the 258 new manufacturing plants opened in Wales since 1 January 1980 for which an origin has been assigned (new start-up manufacturing plants are not assigned a geographical origin) are as follows:

	Number
United Kingdom (excluding Wales)	129
Wales	79
Direct Overseas[1]	50
Of which
United States of America	16
West Germany	9
Eire	3
Other EEC	3
Japan	6
Canada	3
Other	10

[1] The country of origin of a new manufacturing plant is not necessarily the country of ultimate ownership; new overseas manufacturing plants opened since 1980 for which the origin is an overseas-owned plant already in production in the United Kingdom are assigned an origin within the United Kingdom.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide the latest available figures as to how many people are employed by foreign companies in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The latest estimate is that about 44,000 people are employed in overseas-owned manufacturing plants now in production in Wales.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Natural History Museum

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has recently met relevant trades unions to discuss the proposed introduction of admission charges to the natural history museum.

Mr. Walden: No. Admission charges are a matter for the trustees of the museum.

Microcomputers

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what contribution to teaching is made by microcomputers in (a) secondary schools and (b) primary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The contribution microcomputers can make is large: I am sending my hon. Friend the reports of the subject associations which illustrate what can be done, both in primary and secondary schools.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the use made by schools of microcomputers.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department has recently published a survey on this, a copy of which is in the Library.

Outturn Expenditure

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 20 February, Official Report, column 840, concerning the proportions of expenditure covered by education support grants and in-service training grants, what administrative arrangements ensure that such grants cover the intended proportion of outturn expenditure; what proportion has total outturn expenditure borne to total approved budgeted expenditure for each programme in each relevant year; what amounts of grants have been paid in each year to cover outturn expenditure in excess of approved budgeted expenditure for each programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: In the case of both these grants, the Secretary of State approves ahead of the year in question a specific sum of expenditure in each local education authority to be eligible for grant. He pays grant at a fixed percentage on that approved expenditure, or such lower expenditure as the local education authority claims. If the authority spends more than the approved sum, the Secretary of State does not increase the grant; and he does not ask authorities to inform him of out-turns which are higher than the approved sum.

EC (COMETT Programme)

Mr. Duffy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is assisting the University of Sheffield in its recent endeavours to establish university enterprise training partnerships (UETP) under the European Economic Community's COMETT programme, and in particular its attempts within this programme to place Yorkshire and Humberside students into companies and industries in other European Economic Community member states.

Mr. Walden: The Government wish to encourage applications for COMETT funding from United Kingdom higher education institutions and has set up an information centre to assist the relevant interests, a service which is open to all higher education institutions including the university of Sheffield.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on progress made by the COMETT action programme of the European Community in education and training for technology; what grants have been made available from the European Economic Community to stimulate co-operation between universities and enterprises in respect of training in the field of technology; to what extent the university of Sheffield has been assisted by his Department in the development of these schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: COMETT was adopted by the EC Council of Ministers on 24 July 1986. The closing date for the first round of applications is 31 March 1987 and decisions on these are expected in late July. This is the first EC programme to offer specific support for co-operation between higher education institutions and enterprises in training for technology. The Government wish to encourage United Kingdom higher education institutions to apply for EC funding under the COMETT programme. On his question regarding the university of Sheffield I refer the right hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Duffy) earlier today.

ENERGY

Power Stations (Cost)

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the estimated cost of building (a) a nuclear power station, (b) a coal or oil-fired power station and (c) an oil burning station, of the same generating capacity.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall ask the CEGB to write to the hon. Member.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what action he is taking within the European Economic Community to seek to ensure that electricity prices charged to industry by member countries are fair and transparent; what representations he has made to the Commission about the compatibility of electricity prices in France with the treaty of Rome; what action Her Majesty's Government propose to take on this matter within the general agreement on tariffs and trade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The Council of Ministers has agreed principles governing electricity pricing on the Community. The Commission has confirmed that it will ensure the application of the treaty of Rome to pricing in the electricity sector and will bring to the Council's attention any malpractices.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what price is paid for the electricity imported from France by the Central Electricity Generating Board; and what information he has about the extent to which this price covers the total cost of production.

Mr. Goodlad: The detailed terms on which electricity is traded between the CEGB and Electricité de France are commercially confidential. The CEGB has, however, stated that its present arrangements provide for a two-year supply at a cost of up to 20 per cent. cheaper than could be generated on average in the United Kingdom. The costs of production are a matter for Electricité de France.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Improvement Scheme

88. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent the resources for the business improvement scheme have been allocated and spent; and if he will make a statement on the future of the scheme.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The business improvement services package of schemes operates only in England and Wales. Broadly similar schemes operate in Scotland and Northern Ireland. £53,950,000 has been allocated to BIS in specified areas in England. At the end of November 1986, 68 per cent. of this amount had been fully committed in response to applications, and 28 per cent. of it actually paid to applicants. But I am keeping the future of the BIS under review.

Power Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the projected number of jobs in the power manufacturing industry from 1987 to 1990.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is not possible to forecast the number of jobs in the power manufacturing industry in the future. In common with all manufacturing industry, this will depend on the orders which are secured. It is estimated that around 40,000 are currently employed in power manufacturing.

Trade Descriptions Act 1972

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he informed Parliament about the need to repeal the Trade Descriptions Act 1972 for reasons of European Economic Community law; if European Economic Community decisions on the matter required unanimity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I explained the background to this matter in answers to my hon. Friends the Members for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) and for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims) on 1 December last year, at columns 434 and 426. The need to repeal the Trade Descriptions Act 1972 results from threatened action by the European Commission under article 169 of the EC treaty, based upon legal precedents established in the European Court of Justice on the interpretation of article 30 of the treaty. Decisions of the European Community, as such, are not involved.

EC-Japan (Trade)

Mr. Malins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing imports, exports and the resulting trade balance between the European Community and Japan, for each year since 1980, including 1986, in relation to the following goods (i) motor cars, (ii) video cassette recorders, (iii) compact disc players, (iv) electronic typewriters, (v) photocopying machines and (vi) machine tools.

Mr. Alan Clark: Data on electronic typewriters are not readily available. Figures for the other goods are in the following table:

Industrial Development

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the amount granted in national selective assistance under section 8 of the Industrial Development Act 1972 and the Industrial Development Act 1982 to Scotland, Wales and the regions of England in each year since 1979-80 at constant 1986 prices.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Cumulative expenditure by region from 1 April 1979 to 31 March 1986 for certain forms of assistance under section 8 of the Industry Act 1972 and the Industrial Development Act 1982 is as follows:

Region	Amount (£,000)
Scotland	42,916
Wales	25,805
North East	11,218
Yorkshire and Humberside	59,521
East Midlands	55,553
West Midlands	69,749
South East	128,200
South West	35,311
North West	87,108
Northern Ireland-mixed	3,045
Total	518,426

The forms of assistance included are the following schemes: wool textiles (parts 1 and 2), ferrous foundries, machine tools, clothing, paper and board, non-ferrous foundry, instrumentation, drop forging, printing machinery, textile machinery, poultrymeat processing, footwear, accelerated project, selective investment, support for major projects, redmeat slaughterhouse, electronic components, microelectronics industry support 1, coal firing, fibre optics and opto-electronics, private sector steel, small engineering firms investment (1 and 2), advanced manufacturing technology, computer aided design and test equipment, innovation linked investment, quality assurance and support for the microelectronics industry.

The more detailed information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Company Inspectors

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many company inspectors are employed by his Department; if, in the light of recent events affecting the City, he has any plans to seek to increase the powers available to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: There are 20 specialist departmental officers engaged full-time on investigations, mainly under section 447 of the Companies Act 1985, in the companies investigation branch of my Department.

In addition, the Department engages outside inspectors as required to make inquiries under sections 432 and 442 of the Companies Act 1985, and to inquire into insider dealing allegations. At present there is a total of 20 such inspectors.

Powers of inspectors were widened by the Companies Act 1981 and the Financial Services Act. There are no plans for further change.

Consumer Protection Bill

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in consulting interested parties on the proposals on misleading price indications put forward in the context of the Consumer Protection Bill by the National Consumer Council, the Retail Consortium and enforcement officers.

Mr. Howard: My Department issued a consultation paper to interested parties on 27 February. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Maritime Mortgages

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider modernising the system of registering maritime mortgages to enable a prospective mortgagee to record a notice of intent to make an advance secured by mortgage to be registered within the ensuing 14 days.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have been asked to reply.

The Government recognise the need for a facility of this sort, but legislation will be needed to give it effect. I hope there will be a suitable opportunity in the next Session.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

USSR (Entry Visas)

Mr. Temple-Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any progress is being made towards a reciprocal agreement with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics over the granting of multiple entry visas for the British business community in Moscow and the trade representatives of the Soviet Union in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I have no progress to report. We shall continue to pursue this issue with the Soviet authorities.

Diplomats (Traffic Offences)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 14 January, Official Report, columns 201-3, he will indicate for each diplomatic mission the number of cars which accounted for the number of fixed penalty notices cancelled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I regret that the information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Agents Provocateurs

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary issues to his force about the use of agents provocateurs.

Mr. Scott: The Chief Constable issues guidance to the Royal Ulster Constabulary in accordance with paragraph 1.92 of the Home Office consolidated circular on crime and kindred matters, which advises that no member of a police force should counsel, incite or procure the commission of a crime. A copy of the consolidated circular is in the Library.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. J. Enoch Powell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will analyse by date of birth and length of imprisonment the 34 prisoners who at the end of the current year will still be detained during the Secretary of State's pleasure.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the proposals on the draft Public Order (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 and the Flags and Emblems (Display) Act (Northern Ireland) 1954 put forward by the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference at its meeting in Belfast on 8 December 1986; and what response was made by the British side.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987, c. 385-86]: At the meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference on 8 December the Irish expressed views on some aspects of the proposal for a draft public order order which we published on 1 December. We took account of those views and of many others in our decision to lay the draft public order order before the House. I do not believe it would be appropriate to go beyond the joint statement issued after the meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference in detailing the Irish Government's comments. But the Irish Government publicly welcomed the proposal for the draft public order order.

EMPLOYMENT

Engineering Industry Training Board

8. Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General what has been the Government's response to the industry consultation paper recently published by the Engineering industry training board.

Mr. Trippier: The Government welcome the lead that the board is taking in reviewing what needs to be done to tackle the training issues in the engineering industry. I am meeting the chairman of the EITB tomorrow (4 March) when I shall be discussing with him the industry's response to the options in the information paper.

39. Mrs. Golding asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to help the engineering industry training board improve the volume of engineering training.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Members for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) and for Knowsley, North (Mr. Howarth) on 16 December 1986 at column 1039.

Small Firms Counsellors

15. Mrs. Roe asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to encourage female business people to become small firms counsellors.

Mr. Trippier: I am anxious to see a larger number of business women as small firms service counsellors. To that end, I have sought to raise awareness through contact with various women's organisations, with the press, and also through advertising in magazines read by professional women. As a result of this, I am pleased to say that the service is expecting 30 applicants to be interviewed in the near future.

Leisure Industry

20. Mr. Fry asked the Paymaster General how many persons are currently employed in the leisure industry; and how this compares with 1983 and 1980.

Mr. Trippier: There is no generally agreed definition of the leisure industry in terms of the standard industrial classification, but the number of employees in sectors which most directly serve tourism and leisure activities was just over 1·3 million in September 1986, an increase of 10 per cent. over September 1983 and of 11 per cent. over September 1980.

Knitwear Industry

23. Sir John Farr asked the Paymaster General if he will take steps to improve the training and retraining facilities for those in the knitwear industry.

Mr. Trippier: Employers have the responsibility for determining and meeting the training needs of the knitwear industry. This was a responsibility willingly accepted by industry when the statutory training board was abolished. The successor body, the knitting and lace industries training resources agency (KLITRA), is actively developing strategies to meet those training needs. The Government through the Manpower Services Commission (MSC) have a close working relationship with the agency and provide some financial support to promote the development of training and retraining initiatives.

Basildon

24. Mr. Amess asked the Paymaster General if he will give the latest figures for unemployed people, and the percentage of unemployed, in Basildon.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987, there were 8,695 unemployed claimants in the Basildon local authority district. Unemployment precentage rates are calculated only for self-contained labour markets; the smallest areas are travel-to-work areas.

Special Employment Measures

27. Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General how many people he projects will be on special employment measures in June 1987 and September 1987.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to predict with any certainty how many people will be on the employment, training and enterprise measures run by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission in any particular month. However, in 1987-88 we expect over a milion people to have been helped by these measures.

Service Sector Jobs

32. Mr. Weetch asked the Paymaster General what was the net loss or gain in service sector jobs in Britain and the East Anglian region, respectively, in 1986.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There are no figures for job gains and job losses.

Between September 1985 and September 1986 (the latest year for which figures are available) there was a net increase in the number of employees in employment in the service industries in Great Britain of 303,000. In the same period there was a comparable increase for East Anglia of 20,000.

Community Programme

18. Mr. Kennedy asked the Paymaster General to what extent the distribution of resources within the community programme take account of regional variations in overhead costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Community programme resources allow funding of up to £440 per participant place for operating costs expenditure. This maximum figure applies equally to projects in all parts of the country.

21. Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what plans he has for the future development of the community programme in relation to 18 to 25-year-olds.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The community programme is currently available in most places to those people aged 18 to 25 who have been unemployed for six months or more. However, we believe that the new job training scheme is a better route back into employment for unemployed people under 25 in their own interest, and as good quality JTS expands it will be the preferred scheme for this age group. The community programme can then provide more places for the longer-term unemployed. At the moment, therefore, in the nine original job training scheme pilot areas eligibility for those aged 18 to 25 is the same as for other unemployed people, namely, that they should have been unemployed for 12 months or more.

33. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Paymaster General how many people find work after completing the community programme.

69. Mr. Haynes asked the Paymaster General what proportion of community programme participants enter into jobs after leaving the scheme.

Mr. Lee: Latest survey results show that 54 per cent. of former community programme participants had had at least one job during the 10-month follow-up period, some 35 per cent. were in employment at the 10-month point, with a further 3 per cent. in training.

Apprentice Training

34. Mrs. Shields asked the Paymaster General how many 1986 school leavers have begun apprentice training; and if he will give comparative figures for 1979 and 1983.

Mr. Trippier: This information is available only in part; figures for 1986 school leavers are not available. In 1979, just over 90,000 school leavers in England and Wales began apprentice training. The comparative figure for 1983 is 28,000 which is increased to 57,000 if an estimate of apprentices and other long-term trainees on YTS is included in the total. Comparable figures are not available for Scotland.

The numbers entering traditional apprenticeships are becoming increasingly irrelevant as a measure of the real level of skills training being undertaken as industry's skill needs change. For many industries, including the expanding new technology sector, apprenticeship is not the usual means of achieving full skills status. YTS is now established as a major route into work and training for school leavers.

Job Training Scheme

16. Mr. Kenneth Carlile asked the Paymaster General how many people have received training under the job training scheme; and what proportion of these have since found jobs.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: 1,992 people had joined the new job training scheme up to 23 February. The Manpower Services Commission will be carrying out regular follow-up surveys of leavers to determine what proportion of leavers find jobs.

17. Dr. Godman asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the job substitution effects of the job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In additional to vocational training. The job training scheme will involve short periods of practical experience often with more than one employer and interspersed with periods of directed training. Substitution is therefore likely to be small.

31. Mr. Duffy asked the Paymaster General how many places have been filled on the job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The number of people taking part in the new job training scheme at 23 February was 1,569.

35. Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the expansion of the job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that I made to the House on 28 January at column 337.

45. Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what impact he expects the job training scheme to have on the unemployment figures in each month to December 1987.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) earlier today.

58. Mr. Wareing asked the Paymaster General how many people are presently receiving training under the new job training scheme within the pilot areas; and what percentage of them are disabled.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At 23 February the number of people on the new job training scheme was 1,569.

Up-to-date information on the percentage of those who are disabled is not available. However, a survey of a sample of trainees in early January showed that some 13 per cent. had a health problem or disability which affected the type of work that they could do.

84. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Paymaster General what assessments have been made of the outcome of the pilot job training schemes.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The experiences and attitudes of new JTS participants in the pilot areas will be assessed in a survey carried out by an external research organisation.

76. Mr. Wallace asked the Paymaster General how many hours of training and work experience are anticipated on the job training scheme; and what is the minimum number of hours for each.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Training programmes will be designed for each individual according to his or her personal needs and the needs of the labour market. They may last from three to 12 months. They consist of integrated directed training and practical experience. In an average six-month programme there will be a minimum of 300 hours of directed training. The remainder of the time will be spent on linked practical experience.

71. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Paymaster General what indications he has so far received from the pilot areas concerning the progress of the job training scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: All the early indications show that in terms of the take-up, the range of training and practical experience on offer and the attractiveness of the scheme to unemployed people, the new job training scheme will be a success.

Job Creation

22. Mr. George Howarth asked the Paymaster General how many and what type of new jobs have been created since 1983.

Mr. Lee: There are no figures for job gains and job losses.

Between March 1983 and September 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, the civilian employed labour force (the sum of employees in employment and the self-employed) in Great Britain has changed as shown in the table, which presents estimates which are not adjusted for seasonal variation.

Changes in the size of the civilian employed labour force in Great Britain—March 1983 to September 1986

	Thousands[1]
Agriculture, forestry and fishing [0]	+9
Metal goods, engineering, vehicles [3]	−231
Other production industries [1, 2, 4]	−125
Construction [5]	+61
Distribution, hotels, catering, repairs [6]	+544
Transport and communication [7]	+21
Banking, finance, insurance etc [8]	+501
Other services [9]	+535
Total	+1,315

[1] Not seasonally adjusted.

Numbers in brackets denote divisions of the standard industrial classification 1980.

If adjusted for seasonal variation the total increase becomes 1,128,000.

37. Mr. Livsey asked the Paymaster General if he will list the proportion in each region of new jobs created since 1983.

Mr. Lee: There are no figures for job gains and job losses.

Between September 1983 and September 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available), the civilian employed labour force in the regions of Great Britain changed as shown in the table:

	Change	Percentage change
South East	443,000	6
East Anglia	105,000	13
South West	96,000	5
West Midlands	96,000	4
East Midlands	74,000	5
Yorkshire and Humberside	68,000	3
North West	17,000	1
North	43,000	4
Wales	−2,000	—
Scotland	12,000	1

77. Mr. McWilliam asked the Paymaster General what percentage of the total unemployed are aged 25 years or less; and what initiatives the Government are pursuing in order to provide full-time employment at average rates of pay for those affected.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987, 34·4 per cent. of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom were aged under 25 years. All of the employment, training and enterprise measures run by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission are part of a wider strategy for encouraging enterprise and employment.

Small Firms (Marketing)

40. Mr. Cash asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to encourage marketing expertise in the small firms sector.

Mr. Trippier: In conjunction with Business in the Community, I am initiating a marketing week for small firms in 1987. The week will start on 8 June and stimulate a wide range of locally-based events with a marketing flavour. In addition, a series of seminars on marketing aimed at the small firms sector will be launched in marketing week. The seminars will be organised by the Institute of Marketing and sponsored by the Department of Employment, the Manpower Services Commission and Lloyds Bank.

The Government operate a wide range of schemes to encourage marketing expertise in the small firms sector, including the Department of Trade and Industry's support for marketing scheme which offers subsidised marketing consultancy to small and medium-sized firms in both the manufacturing and service sectors.

New Work Scheme

41. Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many people are being helped under the new workers scheme; and what proportion of these are disabled.

Mr. Lee: Some 34,000 young people are currently in jobs supported under the new workers scheme. There are no available statistics on the number of those who are disabled.

Small Business Sector (Investment)

42. Mr. Bruce asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the level of investment by pension funds and insurance companies in the small business sector.

Mr. Trippier: Full records of investment by pension funds and insurance companies in small businesses are not available. Statistics for the United Kingdom venture capital industry show that they provide over 50 per cent. of the finance for private independent venture capital funds. A study undertaken for the National Association of Pension Funds, "An investigation of unquoted holding of United Kingdom financial institutions", showed that in a 1983-84 sample of United Kingdom pensions funds, representing about half the total in terms of asset value, 0·67 per cent. of their total assets were invested in unquoted securities of all kinds. For insurance companies, the proportion was 0·5 per cent. I believe that there is scope for pension funds and insurance companies to consider a greater involvement in the funding of small businesses with high growth potential.

London Retraining Centres

43. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General if he will list the retraining centres for people unemployed in London.

Mr. Trippier: Manpower Services Commission officials are aware of about 150 organisations in London which have trained unemployed people under the Government's adult training schemes. A list will be placed in the Commons Library.

Land Use

44. Mr. Adley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on (a) the employment and (b) the tourism consequences of the recent changes in Government policy on land use.

Mr. Trippier: The draft circular on development involving agricultural land, which was published on 9 February by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, proposes that in deciding development proposals affecting agricultural land the agricultural implications should be considered together with, the environmental and economic aspects; and that full regard should be had both to the need to promote economic activity that provides jobs and to the need to protect green belts, national parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty, and other areas of good countryside. The draft circular has been sent to the local authority associations, business organisations and others, seeking comments by 10 April.

The revised policy should frequently make it easier than under the present policy (which was narrowly focused on the protection of land for agricultural purposes) to permit environmentally acceptable development. Proposals in the tourism sector are often necessarily of that character. The encouragement given by the draft circular to the re-use of redundant agricultural buildings and the lifting of agricultural occupancy conditions which have outlived their usefulness are likely to be of particular assistance to developments for tourism purposes.

More generally, the preservation of the countryside depends upon creating the conditions in which the enterprise of individuals can be translated into jobs and prosperity in the rural economy.

Manufacturing Industry

26. Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General how many full-time and part-time workers were employed in manufacturing industry in 1979 and for the latest year available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In June 1979 there were 7,107,000 full-time and part-time employees in the manufacturing industries in Great Britain. A separate estimate for part-time employees is not available for 1979.

In June 1986, the figure was 5,148,000, of whom 346,000 were part-time employees.

Some of the decrease in the figures will be the result of the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage, previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment.

46. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Paymaster General what was the net loss or gain of manufacturing jobs in Britain and the north-west region, respectively, in 1986.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There are no figures for job gains and job losses.

Between September 1985 and September 1986 (the latest year for which figures are available) there was a net decrease in the number of employees in employment in the manufacturing industries in Great Britain of 142,000. In the same period there was a comparable decrease in the north-west region of 21,000.

Some of the decrease in the figures will be the result of the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage, previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment.

Small Firms (Management Training)

48. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to encourage management training in small firms.

Mr. Trippier: I am anxious to encourage management training in small firms because it is a route to success. While responsibility for undertaking management training and development rests with small businessmen themselves, training providers can stimulate demand for it by the development of training packages specifically designed to meet the needs of those running small firms. These considerations have also been central to the development of the Manpower Services Commission's training for enterprise, managing company expansion, and open tech programmes and the new management development projects, all of which contain significant elements to support management training in small firms.

To encourage those concerned to take advantage of the wide range of training programmes, including management training, now provided by the private and public sector, the Manpower Services Commission has targeted small firms for priority marketing and ran a series of seminars in 1986-87 to convince owner/managers of the importance of training.

Self-Employed People

36. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on regional variations in the numbers of self-employed.

Mr. Trippier: Estimates of the numbers self-employed in each region are recorded on page 40 of the supplement published with the February edition Employment Gazette, a copy of which is in the Library. In each region there were more self-employed in 1985, the latest year for which firm estimates are available, than in 1979.

50. Mr. Hirst asked the Paymaster General what is his most recent estimate of the number of self-employed in the United Kingdom; and what was the comparable number in May 1979.

Mr. Lee: In September 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, there were an estimated 2,775,000 self-employed people in the United Kingdom. In June 1979 (figures are not available for May) the number was 1,925,000.

Minimum Wage and Training Levy

51. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received in favour of introducing a national minimum wage policy and a 1 per cent. training levy on gross turnover of companies.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We have received a few letters from hon. Members and members of the public about a national minimum wage, but nothing on a 1 per cent. training levy.

Labour Mobility

52. Mr. Dixon asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement concerning the success or otherwise of Government schemes to help the unemployed move in order to find jobs.

Mr. Lee: The travel to interview scheme was introduced nationally last June and it helps four or five times as many people with the cost of attending job interviews in other areas as the job search scheme which it replaced.

We abolished the employment transfer and free forward fare schemes last April because neither of them was a cost-effective way of reducing unemployment or of filling vacancies for which suitable long-term unemployed people could not be found locally.

Restart Scheme

28. Mr. Stern asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to make available to restart scheme trainees financial assistance with fees for short-term local authority-provided training courses which are relevant to their work under the scheme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: A proportion of the people attending the one-week restart courses go on for further training. They are eligible for a wide range of training provision supported by the Manpower Services Commission, some of which may be delivered by local authorities.

53. Mr. Ashton asked the Paymaster General how many people have been called for interview under restart to date; and what percentage have gone on to receive full-time employment as a result.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: By 8 January 1987, 1,032,340 people had been called for interview. We have no means of knowing what proportion have gone on the full-time employment as a result. Some have been placed directly following their restart interview. But others will have found jobs after taking up one of the opportunities offered at the interview such as job clubs or training courses.

82. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Paymaster General how many people have been interviewed to date under restart; and what proportions have been placed into the community programme, the enterprise allowance scheme, the job training scheme and jobs, respectively.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: By 8 January, 779,051 people had been interviewed under the restart scheme. We have no means of knowing precisely how many have since found jobs or other opportunities which might lead to employment. However, 75 per cent. of participants agreed to pursue the offer made to them at their restart interview.

Local Employer Network Schemes

54. Mr. Colvin asked the Paymaster General how many local employer network schemes have now been established.

Mr. Trippier: The first 13 networks should be in place by the end of this month. The response from employers, employer organisations and others has been encouraging.

Tourism

55. Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Paymaster General how many jobs he estimates will be created by tourism in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Ipswich (Mr. Wetch) on 3 February 1987 at columns 605-6.

83. Mr. Butterfill asked the Paymaster General what is the cost of creating a job (a) in the tourism sector through the use of section 4 grants under the Development of Tourism Act 1969 and (b) through other Government schemes.

Mr. Trippier: According to a recent study by Department of Employment economists, the cost averages from £6,000 in the local area (a radius of five miles from the project) to £4,000 in the region (a radius of 50 miles). These figures represent the gross cost per net full-time equivalent job at 1984 prices.

It would not be appropriate to compare these averages with cost per job estimates for the scheme made by other researchers, which use different definitions and methods. Nor, for similar technical reasons, is it proper to compare them with cost per job estimates for other Government schemes.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

14. Dr. Marek asked the Paymaster General what kind of business advice is given to people participating in the enterprise allowance scheme during the year in which they receive assistance.

Mr. Trippier: All people joining the scheme must attend a day-long seminar at which basic business concepts are explained. They are given information about sources of business advice such as the small firms service, local enterprise agencies the Welsh and Scottish Development Agencies, bank managers, solicitors, accountants and others as well as details of business training available locally.

25. Mr. Powley asked the Paymaster General what is the up-to-date number of jobs that have been created by the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the form requested. Since the scheme began, to the end of January 1987, 205,921 people had joined the scheme to start their own businesses. Recent survey evidence based on a sample of enterprise allowance scheme participants indicates that 68 per cent. of businesses are still trading 18 months after start-up and at that stage for every 100 businesses still surviving 91 additional jobs have been created.

38. Mr. Silvester asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received concerning amendment to the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The Government continually receive representations, both from individuals and from organisations, suggesting changes in the rules and procedures of the scheme. All are seriously considered and, where appropriate, acted upon.

56. Mr. Richard Page asked the Paymaster General how many people have taken up the enterprise allowance scheme since its inception.

Mr. Trippier: At the end of January 1987, 205,921 people had taken up the enterprise allowance scheme since it commenced.

Skill Shortages

49. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to identify skill shortages and provide equivalent training places.

Mr. Trippier: It is the responsibility of employers to identify their skill requirements and to invest in training to meet their needs. Nevertheless, the Government fund a wide range of initiatives to help improve the supply of skills, including the YTS and the new job training scheme which my right hon. and learned Friend announced on 28

January, and to help to improve information both about skill supply and demand and also training needs and availability. Recent steps include the development of a computerised local labour market information to gather data on employers' training needs; the establishment of a skills unit to provide more effective analysis and information on changing skill requirements; the establishment of local employer networks; and the pilots of training access points. We frequently review all provision to see whether more effective assistance can be given in the task of re-skilling Britain.

59. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General what are his latest estimates of the high technology skill shortages facing British industry.

Mr. Trippier: The most recent survey of skill shortages in manufacturing industry estimates that some 5 per cent. of firms responding expect output over the next four months to be limited by a shortage of professional engineers and 2 per cent. of firms expect output to be limited by shortages of computer and management services occupations. Most difficulties were in recruiting people with experience.

Labour Statistics

19. Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed for (a) six months and (b) a year or more compared with a year ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In the year to January 1987, the number of people unemployed for over six months has fallen by about 10,000 and the number unemployed for over a year has fallen by about 20,000.

29. Dr. McDonald asked the Paymaster General what is the current level of unemployment in (a) Thurrock and (b) the south-east.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987, the numbers of unemployed claimants in the Thurrock local authority district and the South East region were 7,419 and 774,062 respectively.

47. Mr. Yeo asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of people employed in Britain as a proportion of the number of adults aged between 16 and 65 years.

Mr. Lee: It is estimated from the labour force survey conducted in the spring of 1985 that at that time there were 23,350,000 persons aged 16 and under 65 in paid employment, representing 66·9 per cent. of all persons aged 16 and under 65 in Great Britain.

60. Mr. Hardy asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the actual number of people who are currently seeking employment.

Mr. Lee: According to the results of the labour force survey in the spring of 1985, there were 2·81 million people in Great Britain without a job who had sought work in the week prior to the survey.

66. Mr. Stott asked the Paymaster General what is the number of 18 to 25-year-olds who are unemployed.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987, the number of unemployed claimants between the ages of 18 and 24 (not available aged 25 years) in the United Kingdom was 970,551.

75. Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed for more than 12 months at the latest available date; and what percentage of the total unemployed this represents.

Mr. Lee: On 8 January 1987, the number of claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for over 12 months was 1,334,430 which represents 40·5 per cent. of the total unemployed.

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General how many young people, under 25 years of age, are unemployed in Coventry, the west midlands and nationally; of those how many have been unemployed for more than one, two, three, four and five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed claimants aged under 25 years in the Coventry local authority district, the west midlands region and the United Kingdom on 8 January 1987, who had been unemployed for the durations requested.

	Unemployed claimants aged under 25 years
	Coventry local authority district	West Midlands region	United Kingdom
Over one year	3,578	36,072	303,378
Over two years	1,914	17,655	142,686
Over three years	1,100	9,993	78,213
Over four years	590	5,753	42,734
Over five years	256	2,770	19,832
All durations	9,164	116,457	1,132,792

Yorkshire and Humberside

61. Mr. Lawler asked the Paymaster General what has been the increase in self-employment and new businesses in Yorkshire and Humberside since 1979.

Mr. Trippier: The number of self-employed persons in Yorkshire and Humberside is provisionally estimated to have risen by 108,000, from 134,000 in June 1979 to 242,000 in September 1986.

The number of businesses registered for VAT in the Yorkshire and Humberside region is estimated to have risen by approximately 9,200, from 102,000 at the end of 1979 to 111,200 at the end of 1984. These are the most up-to-date figures currently available.

Local Enterprise Agencies

62. Mr. Bellingham asked the Paymaster General how much financial assistance is currently available from Her Majesty's Government for help with financing local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Trippier: Government support for local enterprise agencies in England is, in the main, channelled through my Department, the Department of the Environment, the Home Office and the Development Commission. The total support available from these sources is expected to be approximately £3·7 million this financial year.

Motor Industry (Management Training)

63. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement about management training in the motor industry.

Mr. Trippier: I am pleased that the road transport industry training board is treating management training as a major priority and is seeking to work closely with all the appropriate professional bodies. I will be attending the North West regional launch of their new management development programme in Manchester on 3 April.

YTS

30. Mr. Hunter asked the Paymaster General what proportion of YTS trainees in Hampshire have obtained full-time employment within a reasonable time of the completion of their training; and what proportion have been employed by the employers with whom they were training.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission conducts a regular follow-up survey of all YTS leavers. Of those who left YTS schemes in Hampshire between April 1985 and March 1986, 65 per cent. were in full-time work some three months after leaving. Of these, just over half (54 per cent.) were employed by the employer with whom they trained.

64. Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General whether he proposes to increase the number of YTS places in the public sector.

Mr. Trippier: At 31 January 1987 there were 453,000 YTS contracted places of which over 126,000 were in the public sector. The number of YTS places is decided annually in the light of the number of young people expected to come forward for training, and there are no plans at present to change the general balance of places on the programme.

68. Mr. Clelland asked the Paymaster General how many people are presently engaged in YTS in Britain.

Mr. Trippier: On 31 January 1987, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 335,787 young people in training on YTS in Great Britain.

Union Rule Books

65. Mr. Gregory asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to which trade unions have altered their rule books to comply with the Government's trade union legislation since 1979.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 11 November 1985, Official Report, columns 51-52. Since November 1985 a further seven unions had rules approved by the certification officer in order to hold political fund review ballots. These were:

Ceramic and Allied Trades Unions
Fire Brigades Union
General Union of Associations of Loom Overlookers
National Association of Colliery Overmen, Deputies and Shotfirers
National Union of Mineworkers
Rossendale Union of Boot Shoe and Slipper Operatives
Scottish Carpet Workers Union

In addition the certification officer is required to approve rules governing political funds for unions setting up new funds. He has done so in the following cases:

National Union of Hosiery and Knitwear Workers
Inland Revenue Staff Federation
Broadcasting and Entertainment Trades Alliance
Communication Managers Association
National Communications Union (Clerical Group)

Unions which, since November 1985, are reported to have decided to make changes in their rule books to comply with the election provisions of part I of the Trade Union Act 1984 are:

National Association of Colliery Overmen Deputies and Shotfirers (Yorkshire Area)
General Municipal Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union
Inland Revenue Staff Federation
Union of Communication Workers
Banking Insurance and Finance Union
National Union of Railwaymen
Prison Officers Association
United Road Transport Union
Union of Shop Distributive and Allied Workers
National Union of Seamen
Association of Cinematograph Television and Allied Technicians

Jobcentres (Staffing)

67. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Paymaster General how many staff are to be allocated to job-broking activities in jobcentres and how many to providing assistance for the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Lee: Staff are allocated to programme activities at national and regional level rather than to specific activities within jobcentres or to locations. Managers use the staff available to deliver the various jobcentre services effectively and economically, taking into account local circumstances.

Retirement Age

70. Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate how many jobs would be made available if men were entitled to retire at 60 years of age.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to predict with any accuracy the number of jobs which would be made available if the state pension age for men was reduced to 60 years of age. The outcome would depend in part on the number of men over 60 who chose to retire, and in part on the decisions of employers on whether to recruit new workers to fill the vacancies. Our best estimate is that some 500,000 jobs would be made available, not all of which would be filled from the unemployment count.

Industrial Relations Legislation

72. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General what legislation he proposes in the field of industrial relations in the near future; and if he will make a statement.

85. Mr. Patchett asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to introduce further legislation on trades unions.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Members to the statement that I made to the House on 24 February at column 146.

Earnings

73. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Paymaster General what was the average percentage increase in earnings among the top and bottom 10 per cent. of workers in Britain in 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 3 February at column 606.

Small Firms (Business Expansion Schemes)

74. Mr. Leigh asked the Paymaster General what he is doing to assist the launch of locally based business expansion schemes so as to boost the small firms sector.

Mr. Trippier: In recent years, there have been valuable initiatives to provide venture capital for unquoted companies, including the establishment of local business expansion scheme funds. Some local enterprise agencies have assisted such initiatives and "marriage bureaux" to bring together potential investors and small companies and I hope that this will continue. I will encourage further development of locally-based funds in all areas through my contacts with the venture capital industry and other organisations.

Adult Training Scheme

78. Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the National Audit Office report on the operation of the Manpower Services Commission's adult training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: I welcome the National Audit Office's report, which confirms that training provided under the Manpower Services Commission's adult training strategy promises to be significantly more cost-effective than TOPS and to reach a wider range of trainees; that the introduction of CALLMI, MSC's new computer-assisted local labour market information database, can be expected to improve the matching of training provision with local skill requirements; and that the setting up of the national council of vocational qualifications is an important step in the direction of securing a nationally recognised framework of competence-based qualifications, which will be a valuable aid to the effective working of the labour and training markets. I also welcome the report's constructive criticisms about the achievement of still better value for money. We have already made substantial progress since the period covered by the report, and will continue to seek further improvements.

Co-operatives

79. Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General what measures his Department is taking to encourage the growth of co-operatives.

Mr. Trippier: Co-operatives can benefit from a number of schemes introduced by the Government to help and encourage small businesses, such as the loan guarantee scheme and the enterprise allowance scheme. In addition, the Co-operative Development Agency, which is sponsored by my Department, seeks to stimulate the growth of co-operatives by providing help and advice to co-operatives and to people wishing to set up such enterprises. The number of co-operatives has increased from less than 500 in 1982 to more than 1,400 in 1986.

80. Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his policy towards adult training in the light of the report by the National Audit Office.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Wainwright) earlier today.

Leicester Job Club

81. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General how many unemployed people in Leicester have benefited from the Leicester job club in securing employment; and how this compares with other job clubs.

Mr. Lee: Seventy long-term unemployed people passed through the three Leicester job clubs up to 6 February 1987. 43 (61 per cent.) found jobs. An additional nine people (13 per cent.) either found temporary work on the community programme or went into training or the enterprise allowance scheme.

These success rates are in the line with the national averages of 60 per cent. and 13 per cent. respectively.

Advertising Budget

57. Mr. James Lamond asked the Paymaster General what is the budget for advertising of the Department of Employment and the Manpower Services Commission for the last and the current financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The budget for television, radio and press advertising of employment and training schemes and programmes, for the Department of Employment and the Manpower Services Commission, for the last and the current financial years is broadly as follows:

	1985-86 £	1986-87[1] £
Department of Employment
Television	—	9,310,478
Press and Radio	1,255,373	2,944,810
Uncommitted	—	1,900,00
Manpower Services Commission
Television	9,676,257	15,700,000
Press and Radio	2,178,823	5,350,000
Uncommitted	—	3,539,000

[1] Planned, committed and anticipated.

The Department of Employment expenditure on advertising represents about 0·5 per cent. of the total expenditure of £3,000 million by the Department of Employment and the Manpower Services Commission on the employment, enterprise and training programmes. The MSC expenditure on advertising represents about 1 per cent. of the expenditure of around £2,500 million on programmes operated both directly by the MSC and on behalf of the Department of Employment.

DEFENCE

DROPS

Sir Ian Gilmour asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the terms of the statement of operational requirement referred to in his Department's press release announcing the demountable rack off-loading pick up system contracts in December 1986; at what stage in the procurement process the demountable rack off-loading pick-up system was the subject of a general staff target; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The statement of requirements was a broad statement of the logistic DROPS concepts, tasks, performance and other relevant characteristics. The GST for DROPS was formally approved in 1982 with the start of the procurement process.

Research Projects

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many research projects in universities and other institutions of higher education have so far received funding under the joint grant scheme with the research councils.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: So far 62 applications have been approved for funding, and payments have been made in 23 of these.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will state the number of contracts and research agreements the royal ordnance factories have in universities and other institutions of higher education.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are currently no contracts or agreements let with universities and other institutions of higher education on behalf of ROFs Burghfield and Cardiff. Contracts or agreements made by Royal Ordnance plc are a matter for the company.

Major G. Whiteley (Publications)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether it was with his authority that Major G. Whiteley, BA, MEd, MSc, RAEC, published, "The Just War, Tradition and the Falklands Conflict" in the journal of the Royal United Services Institute of December 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: Authority to publish this article was given by the Ministry of Defence in accordance with the normal procedures, subject to the inclusion of a disclaimer that the views expressed were those of the author personally and did not necessarily reflect official policy or thinking.

Minehunters and Frigates

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on the basis of the Government's current public expenditure programme as defined in Cm. 56, how many single role minehunters will be in service, fully manned and fully operational, for each of the next five financial years; and what are the consequences of this commitment upon the single role minehunter ordering programme;

(2) on the basis of the Government's current public expenditure programme as defined in Cm. 56, how many frigates will be in service, fully manned and fully operational, for each of the next five financial years; and what are the consequences of this commitment upon the frigate ordering programme.

Mr. Stanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ashford (Mr. Speed) on 27 February at columns 458-59.

On the frigate ordering programme, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said on 9 December, at columns 168-69, we placed three orders for frigates last year. It remains our intention to maintain a force level of about 50 frigates and destroyers, but the number of frigates to be ordered in any one year will continue to depend upon the life of the frigates, the refit cycle and the resources available.

Decisions on the size and timing of the next orders for single role minehunters will be made following consideration of the tenders for up to four vessels which were invited earlier this year.

Procurement Contracts

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Defence what importance is given by his Department to regional employment considerations in determining the results of open tender bids for procurement contracts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The primary objective of defence procurement is to satisfy the essential requirements of the services and in a way that secures the best value for money for the taxpayer. Close links are maintained with the Department of Trade and Industry on the regional implications of equipment programmes.

"Keeping the Peace"

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many local education authorities have requested copies of the film "Keeping the Peace"; and how many have been distributed.

Mr. Stanley: As at 25 February 1987, 267 requests had been received from educational establishments in 94 local education authority areas. These requests came from 214 secondary schools, 40 colleges, nine teachers' centres, two polytechnics and two universities. A copy of the film is being made available to each of them free of charge.

It is not known how many educational establishments will have received the film through other channels, such as organisations interested in defence matters.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for distributing the film "Keeping the Peace" to institutions of higher education and to other organisations.

Mr. Stanley: Video and film copies of "Keeping the Peace" are available on request free of charge to educational establishments and on free loan to other interested organisations and members of the public from the Central Office of Information or the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from education authorities, from teachers' organisations and from parents and others, against the proposal to show his Department's film "Keeping the Peace" in schools; and what reply he has sent.

Mr. Stanley: As at 25 February 1987, no representations from education authorities or teachers' organisations have been received in the Department. The Department has received representations from 13 members of the public against the showing of the film "Keeping the Peace" in schools. An appropriate reply is being sent in each case, explaining that the film is designed to meet the ever increasing needs of interested groups, including schools, for information on defence.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many copies of the film "Keeping the Peace" have been produced.

Mr. Stanley: Three thousand video cassettes and 15 16mm film prints have been produced to date.

Departmental Staff (Rates)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's personnel in Scotland live in accommodation in respect of which payments in lieu of rates are made by his Department to local authorities.

Mr. Freeman: Contributions in lieu of rates are made in respect of property deemed to be in occupation of the Crown. Such payments are the responsibility of the rating of Government property department. Approximately 14,550 service and 500 Ministry of Defence civilian personnel are living in such property in Scotland.

RNAB Coulport (Floating Dock)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he will invite tenders for the construction of a floating dock at the RNAB Coulport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In matters of design and construction, the Property Services Agency of the Department of the Environment act on behalf of the Secretary of State for Defence. The floating jetty at RNAB Coulport is a unique and complex structure, and the design work and associated hydraulic model tests are well advanced. It is planned to invite tenders in the autumn of 1987 when the PSA has completed this work.

Mr. F. Holroyd

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the dates on which letters from the hon. Member for Southend, East relating to the case of ex-Captain F. Holroyd of Flat 1, 314 Station road, Westcliff on Sea, Essex, were received by his Department, the dates on which meetings with Ministers on the case took place, and of any other representations or discussions which took place between the hon. Member and representatives of his Department on the case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Letters relating to the case of Captain (Retd) F. Holroyd were received from my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) on the following dates:

6 February 1986
19 March 1986
30 March 1986
17 April 1986
21 May 1986
18 June 1986
25 June 1986
27 June 1986
23 July 1986
22 September 1986
12 November 1986
19 November 1986
3 December 1986
4 February 1987
24 February 1987

I had meetings with my hon. Friend on 17 June, 8 July and 28 October 1986, when he spoke to me in his capacity as a Member of Parliament seeking to represent Captain (Retd) Holroyd's views. I am not aware of any other representations or discussions between my hon. Friend and representatives of the Ministry of Defence.

The various allegations made by Captain (Retd) Holroyd and Mr. Colin Wallace over many years about the conduct of the security forces in Northern Ireland have been fully and carefully investigated since they left the Province in 1975. No evidence has been discovered as a result of these investigations to substantiate any of their allegations. The Government do not consider the public interest requires legal action to be taken to restrain the publication of such allegations.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Departmental Achievements

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the principal achievements of his Department since June 1983.

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the achievements of Her Majesty's Government in the areas covered by his Department since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: We have continued to develop services for patients in the Health Service. Spending on the National Health Service in England alone is up about 26 per cent. in real terms since 1978-79. There are almost one million more in-patient cases, about 3¼ million more out-patient attendances, and over ¼ million more day cases being dealt with each year. The Health Service is now treating more than twice as many people suffering from renal failure. It is performing more kidney and other transplants, more hip operations and more cataract operations.

Health authorities in England have made substantial progress in obtaining improved value for money in recent years. They have achieved cash-releasing cost improvements worth over £240 million in the last two financial years and plan further cash savings of some £150 million in 1986-87. These resources are devoted to patient care. A further £130 million is expected to be freed this year from sales of land which the NHS does not need.

Over 170 health building schemes, each worth over £1 million, have been started and completed since 1979. Over 400 more schemes, worth nearly £3 billion are currently being planned, designed, or built. Over 100 of them will be finished during the next three years.

At the end of last year we announced that we were establishing a special fund to deal with the transitional problems of resources allocation in those regions which get less than national average growth—principally the four Thames regions. Thirty million pounds over two years will help those regions to continue to improve the overall quality and balance of their services to different groups of patients and different areas within each region. A second special fund, with £50 million over two years, is being used to reduce excessive waiting lists and times. Health authorities have already shown their commitment to tackling this problem, and the fund will help them to make further progress, including reducing the time it takes to get to see a consulant in hospital as well as the time it takes to have an operation. The money will finance over 350 different projects throughout the country in the first year and will mean that health authorities will be able to treat an extra 100,000 patients from their in-patient waiting lists over the coming year.

The Government take very seriously the potential threat of an AIDS epidemic. In response we have undertaken the most comprehensive public education campaign there has been in this country. We have agreed proposals for a specially financed programme of directed research put forward by the Medical Research Council and we have provided additional funds for patient care. We shall continue to give priority to all aspects of this issue, to keep in close touch with other Governments and to take whatever further public health measures are necessary.

Following the report of the committee of inquiry into an outbreak of food poisoning at Stanley Royd hospital in 1984 (Cmnd. 9716) we have reviewed the immunity of NHS hospitals under food legislation. We decided that further safeguards were needed to ensure satisfactory standards of food hygiene in the NHS and that it would be right to remove Crown immunity in this field. The opportunity afforded by the NHS (Amendment) Bill was taken to apply food legislation to health authority premises. In recognition of concern expressed in Parliament during the passage of the Bill we also agreed to extend its provisions to remove the Crown immunity of health authorities in respect of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

In the primary care field there are 3,000 more general practitioners and 2,400 more dentists. There are 6,800 more community nurses. General practitioners average list sizes have fallen from over 2,300 to 2,068.

Major reviews in both the primary care and community nursing fields began in 1986. The primary care review—the first since the NHS was established—is intended to raise standards of care still further and to ensure that the service is fully responsive to the public's needs.

In the social services field there have been increases in places in training centres and community homes for mentally handicapped people. There are more home help staff, and more social work staff. There are more places in day centres for elderly people, and many more places in residential and nursing homes. The sum of £16·3 million has been set aside under the care in the community initiative for pilot projects. In addition, £10·2 million has been available under the helping the community to care initiative to help volunteers, families and others to care for people who require support. In a separate initiative over £11 million has been made available to promote care in the community for children coming out of mental handicap hospitals, and £6 million for a series of mental illness development projects to improve the care given to mentally ill people in the community. Since 1983, health authorities have also been able to guarantee continuing annual payments to local authorities and voluntary organisations for the care of people moving into the community from long-stay hospital accommodation. This has given considerable impetus to joint planning and the implementation of the community care policy.

In the social security field, too, expenditure has never been at a higher level, both in cash and real terms. Expenditure in the current financial year is expected to be in the region of £44 billion—about one third of total Government spending. We have protected and increased the real value of nearly all the major social security benefits. Examples of real terms increases since 1979 include supplementary benefit rates (up by about 6 per cent.), prescribed amounts for family income supplement (by a minimum of 13 per cent.), retirement pensions (by several percentage points) and mobility allowance (by about 12 per cent.). The severe disablement allowance has been introduced (and the household duties test abolished) and invalid care allowance has been extended to married women.

There has also been a far-reaching review of the social security system. The Social Security Act 1986 will target help more effectively on those who need help most, make the system easier to understand, widen choice in pension provision and put pensions on a sound basis for the future, tackle the worst effects of the poverty and unemployment traps and create a soundly based system that the country can afford. Twice as many low income working families with children will get extra help under family credit and income support will direct help to groups such as disabled people, lone parents, families with children and pensioners.

We have significantly improved the position of people in occupational pension schemes, and have given everyone in work new pension options. The 1985 Social Security Act gives people the right to more information about their schemes and to a transfer value if they leave; it also protects the pension rights of early leavers. Last year's Act will give everyone in work the choice between a contracted-out personal pension and staying in his employer's pension scheme or fully in the state scheme.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will calculate the total annual cost and the average annual cost of full-time equivalent posts in the National Health Service and local government; and if he will break down the average cost for a full-time equivalent post into pay, national insurance, superannuation, and other costs such as office space, heating, lighting, and so on, for each of the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Newton: The available information is in the tables:

Table 1
NHS directly employed staff[1]

Year	Number of staff in post[2] [3]	Annual cost[4] £ million	Average annual cost per FTE Pay £	Supn. £	NI £	Total £

Mental Health (Nursing)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the results of his Department's Chief Nursing Officer's review of guidance in the work of community psychiatric nurses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The Department's chief nursing officer has not conducted a review of community psychiatric nursing but in December 1985 a meeting was held with representatives of professional organisations and statutory bodies to discuss the role of the registered mental nurse in the changing pattern of services. The report of this meeting was discussed with the standing nursing and midwifery advisory committee and a sub-group of the committee is examining the issues raised.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what guidance has been given to regional health authorities to enable them to determine their future requirements for registered mental nurses and community psychiatric nurses and to make appropriate provision for their training;

(2) if he will list the occasions on which he has withheld approval from plans submitted to him by regional health authorities on the grounds that they contain inadequate provision for the recruitment and training of community psychiatric nurses and registered mental nurses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Determining future staffing requirements is a matter for health authorities to assess in the light of local circumstances. Regional health authority plans are, however, scrutinised to ensure adequacy of training levels and consistency with plans for service provision. Any inconsistencies are followed up through the planning and accountability review processes.

Following the last round of strategic plans, most regional health authorities were asked to undertake further work on nursing recruitment and training issues, including nurses required in the area of mental illness. This work is continuing.

Hospitals (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the policy of Olive Mount hospital, Liverpool, towards the discharge of its patients.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that, wherever possible, the views and wishes of patients and their relatives are taken into account when decisions are being taken to transfer patients out of Olive Mount hospital. No patient is transferred into a community setting until the health authority is satisfied that facilities and services required to meet his or her needs are available. This is in line with Government policy.

If the hon. Member is aware of particular difficulties concerning patients at Olive Mount hospital he may wish to contact the chairman of Liverpool health authority.

Health Education Authority

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he plans to announce the full membership of the Health Education Authority; with what organisations he is consulting over potential members; and whether it is open to individual hon. Members to make recommendations as to membership.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 27 February at column 448.

Benefits

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his Department's estimate of the number of people receiving invalidity benefit who are of retirement age but who do not receive a full state retirement pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: At 31 March 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, there were an estimated 72,000 men aged 65 to 69 years and 12,000 women aged 60 to 64 years receiving invalidity benefit. It is not possible to receive retirement pension in addition to invalidity benefit.

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Social Security Advisory Committee has completed its review of time limits for claiming benefits and reported; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The committee's report has been received and together with the Government's response to its various recommendations is contained in a Command Paper (Cm. 100) published today. We are grateful to the committee for its report and to those interested parties who made representations. The recommendations achieve a rational package of measures which, with other changes in the rules governing claims to and payments of benefits, will introduce a considerable simplification in the administration of the benefits system. We propose to incorporate the revised time limits in a common set of claims and payments regulations to be laid later this year and to come into force in April 1988.

AIDS

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the arrangements made within the North Western region during the last year for the appropriate treatment of AIDS cases in maternity wards.

Mr. Newton: This information is not held centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to make a direct approach to the chairman of the North-Western regional health authority on this matter.

Drugs

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the National Health Service expenditure on drugs in the latest period of 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: The cost of drugs dispensed in the NHS in England in 1985-86 was £1,571 million.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Dewsbury claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested, but in the 12 months ending on 31 December 1986, 986 claims for maternity grant were made at the Department's Dewsbury local office which covers the town, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Halifax claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested, but in the 12 months ending on 31 December 1986, 2,482 claims for maternity grant were made at the Department's Halifax local office which covers the town, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Huddersfield claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested, but in the 12 months ending on 31 December 1986, 2,651 claims for maternity grant were made at the Huddersfield local office of the Department which covers the town, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Batley and Spenborough claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The Batley and Spenborough constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Dewsbury, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at the Dewsbury local office during the 1986 calendar year was 986.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps have been taken to publicise the introduction of the statutory maternity pay scheme; what discussions he has had on the subject with the representatives of employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: An employers guide to statutory maternity pay was issued to all employers in November 1986 with national press advertising at the same time. In addition, details of the new arrangements have been publicised by poster and in DHSS leaflets [FB8 and NI17A] available in social security offices and antenatal clinics. Information about the rates of SMP was sent to all employers recently and a training brief was published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in January 1987 which employers may use to train their staff if they wish. Further national and regional press advertising and a new poster are planned over the coming weeks.

A consultation paper was issued to employers organisations and others in December 1985. There have been numerous contacts between our officials and employer organisations over the past 12 months as the scheme has been developed. Ministers have met representatives from employer organisations, including the CBI and the Engineering Employers Federation from time to time to discuss the social security review proposals, including those for maternity.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will take steps to estimate how many women in Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies are expected to qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information on the numbers of claims to maternity grant is not available in the precise form requested. The Warrington North and South and Chorley constituencies are covered by the Department's local offices at Chester, Warrington, Widnes, Preston, South and Skelmersdale, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituencies. The numbers of claims to maternity grant received at these local offices during the 1986 calendar year are as follows:

	Number
Chester	1,547
Warrington	2,977
Widnes	1,923
Preston, South	2,959
Skelmersdale	1,335

It is not possible to predict how many women in the Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies will qualify for a maternity payment from the social fund after April 1987.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will take steps to estimate how many women in Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies are expected to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance after April 1987.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Warrington, North and South and Chorley constituencies, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

	Number
Warrington North
Warrington	2,057
Warrington South
Chester	1,045
Widnes	1,126
Warrington	2,057
Chorley
Preston South	1,859

I regret it is not possible to make reliable estimates of how many women in Warrington, North and South and Chorley will qualify for statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance from April 1987. However, it is estimated that in total some 230,000 women will qualify for statutory maternity pay and 84,000 for maternity allowance in 1987-88.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will introduce a third and higher rate attendance allowance to enable disabled people to pay for the care attendance they need to live outside an institution.

Mr. Major: In general, we do not intend to make significant changes in disability benefits in advance of the review we propose to undertake when we have the results of the current major survey by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys into the numbers, circumstances and needs of disabled people. We are, however, considering with the disability organisations the future arrangements within the income support scheme for payments to severely disabled people, some of whom might otherwise be obliged to live in an institution.

Rate Rebates

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of ratepayers currently receiving lower rate rebates as a result of the changes to the rate rebate taper since the publication of the Green paper on reform of social security in June 1985; and how many rate rebate recipients he estimates have lost entitlement to rate rebate as a result of the change in the taper since that time.

Mr. Lyell: Since the Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" was published in June 1985, the rates taper has been increased once. The number of rate rebate recipients who received less housing benefit at the point of change in November 1985, the only date for which information is readily available, is estimated at 1·9 million, of whom about 450,000 lost all entitlement to a rate rebate.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present estimate of the number of housing benefit recipients for which a deduction is made in respect of one or more non-dependants and what are the numbers for each category of non-dependant deductions.

Mr. Lyell: The estimated number of housing benefit recipients in Great Britain for which a deduction was made in respect of one or more non-dependants in autumn 1985 was as follows:

	(000's)
Certificated cases	350
Standard cases	410
Total	760

The number of non-dependants in each category in certificated housing benefit households was as follows:

	(000's)
Higher rate deduction	200
Lower rate deduction	180
Total	380

This total is higher than the corresponding figure quoted above because there is on average more than one non-dependant per household.

Information on the number of non-dependants in each category in households receiving standard housing benefit is not available.

Notes:

1. The information on certificated cases was obtained from the statistical enquiries in May 1985 and December 1985. Information on standard cases was obtained from the annual inquiry in autumn 1985.
2. The higher and lower rates of the non-dependant deductions from 25 November 1985 were respectively £7·80 from rent and £2·60 from rates and £2·80 from rent and £1·10 from rates.

Patient Records (Computerisation)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) which regional health authorities have computerised, or are in the process of computerising, their patient record systems;

(2) if he will state which companies have won contracts for the computerisation of regional health authority patient records systems; and which companies unsuccessfully submitted tenders, broken down for each regional health authority;

(3) if he will state, in respect of the computerisation of patient record systems by regional health authorities, the dates on which tenders were invited and the dates on which contracts were awarded, for each regional health authority;

(4) if he will state, in respect of the computerisation of regional health authorities patient record systems, the original tender price accepted by each regional health authority, and the amount by which the accepted tender price has been exceeded by authorities who have (a) completed their computerisation projects and (b) are in the process of computerisation.

Mr. Newton: Most hospital patient master indexes either are, or soon will be, computerised. The responsibility for this rests with health authorities, and no record of the details of individual procurements is kept centrally.

Male Unemployment (Side Effects)

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to commission new studies into possible links between male unemployment and (a) attempted suicides, (b) mental illness and (c) other illnesses.

Mrs. Currie: We have no plans to commission such studies in the financial year 1987-88. I understand that the Medical Research Council, which receives grant-in-aid from the science vote of the Department of Education and Science and is the main Government body for biomedical research in the United Kingdom, is conducting research in this area.

Mr. Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what studies have been undertaken into possible links between male unemployment and the incidence of attempted suicides;

(2) how many attempted male suicides were recorded for each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive; and how many of these involved unemployed males.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the annual change in the net disposable income of (a) all pensioners and (b) pensioners in receipt of supplementary pension (i) before taking account of housing costs and (ii) after taking housing costs into account over the period 1970 to 1986.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

University Research Staff (Pay)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provision he has made in his Department's research budget to allow for the pay settlement for university research staff which has just been agreed with the Association of University Teachers.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Residential Homes

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to issue any guidelines on levels of standards of care for small private homes catering for three or fewer mentally handicapped people.

Mrs. Currie: We are aware of concern that such homes fall outside the registration system for residential care homes and the related requirements governing standards of care. We are keeping a close eye on the situation and will bear it in mind when we take stock of the registration arrangements in association with our consideration of reports of studies involving residential care. These include a study by the Department's social services inspectorate on the implementation of the Registered Homes Act 1984, Sir Roy Griffith's overview of community care, and the review of residential care currently being chaired by Lady Wagner.

Mental Handicap Nurses

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the conditions of service for nurses who transfer with mentally handicapped people from the hospitals to community care for mentally handicapped people with social services departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards mental handicap nursing, in the light of the report by regional nursing officers regarding the priority given to caring for mentally-handicapped people; what information he has as to the morale of nurses who care for long-stay patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I am aware of unofficial reports of discussion at a private meeting of regional nursing officers but these have been criticised as inaccurate by the RNOs present. The support of RNOs for the high priority accorded by the Government to ensuring appropriate care for mentally handicapped people is very important. Uncertainties at a time of major change in services have been reflected in discussions Ministers and officials have held with the various nursing bodies. I am therefore glad to be able to pay tribute to the major contributions mental handicap nurses have made to the process of change; and to confirm the message in the Government's November 1985 response to the Social Services Committee report on community mental health services (Cmnd. 9674) and in the chief nursing officer's letter of 18 December 1985 (CNO(85)5) that mental handicap nurses will continue to have an important contribution to make to the support of mentally handicapped people in traditional settings, and in their own homes and in a range of residential and other settings in the community.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide updated information on hospital waiting lists for Coventry in the form of the answer given to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East on 8 July 1986, Official Report, column 163.

Mr. Newton: The figures in the reply given to the hon. Member on 8 July 1986 are the latest available centrally. For more recent information the hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Coventry district health authority.

Women (Pensions)

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state, for each of the past five years, the number of married women who have exercised their right of appeal for back payment of their pension entitlement on reaching the age of 60 years in respect of contributions they made whilst in regular work before 1948.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not available. Statistics relate to retirement pension generally and are not broken down more fully.

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the number of married women who are entitled to a pension in their own right through their insurance contributions whilst in regular work prior to 1948 but who on reaching the age of 60 years did not immediately claim this pension; and what would be the cost of meeting these back payments in full.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received on the use of the term householder in question two of his Department's press advertisements about extra help with fuel bills; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will instruct his officials to reconsider applications for help with fuel costs made on the basis of press advertisements issued by his Department, where the applicant answered no to question two.

Mr. Major: We have received a number of representations and inquiries on this point. The advertisement asks whether the claimant is a householder because this is one of the qualifying conditions for entitlement to an exceptionally cold weather payment.

Miss Janice Armstrong

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to be in a position to reply to the letter of 19 November 1986 regarding Miss Janice Armstrong, sent to him by the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye.

Mr. Lyell: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as the Department has completed its inquiries of Greenwich local authority and the unemployment benefit offices concerned with the claim.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list total Government expenditure in real terms and in cash terms on provision for the elderly in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 2 February, 1987 c. 550.]: I regret that it is not possible to identify fully, and on a consistent basis, all expenditure on elderly people.

Social security expenditure in Great Britain on benefits payable only to elderly people, in cash and in real terms, for each year between 1976-77 and 1985-86 was as follows:

Great Britain (£ million)

	Cash	Real terms at 1984-85 prices[1]
1976-77	6,480	14,530
1977-78	7,660	15,090
1978-79	8,740	15,550
1979-80	10,130	15,420
1980-81	12,140	15,580
1981-82	14,330	16,750
1982-83	16,120	17,570
1983-84	17,670	18,430
1984-85	18,810	18,810
1985-86	20,470	19,270

[1] Adjusted in line with the GDP deflator at market prices.

These figures do not include expenditure on benefits paid to elderly people for reasons other than of age as these cannot be identified separately. For example, the figures do not include attendance allowances paid to elderly people because of disability.

It is estimated that some 43 per cent. of total revenue expenditure on health and personal social services is currently spent on people aged 65 and over, but I regret that similar estimates are not available for the whole period requested. However estimates of expenditure on hospital and community health services and on personal social services used mainly by elderly people are available from the Department's programme budget analysis, details of which are submitted annually to the Select Committee on Social Services and are published by the Committee in minutes of evidence associated with its reports on public expenditure on the social services, the latest being HC 387-II published in July 1986. Estimates for current and capital expenditure, in cash and in real terms, on these services are given below for each year between 1975-76 and 1984-85, the latest year for which these estimates are available.

The above estimates do not cover the totality of health and personal social services expenditure on elderly people. They do not for example reflect the considerable use which elderly people make of the acute services, nor the expenditure on services for elderly mentally infirm people, nor do they include expenditure on family practitioner services, and on social work and administration relating to elderly people.

Further expenditure arising through the care in the community pilot projects and on other centrally funded initiatives on elderly people is given below.

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list total Government expenditure in real terms and in cash terms on provision for the mentally handicapped in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 2 February 1987, c. 550]: I regret that total expenditure on provision for mentally handicapped people cannot be identified fully. Within the scope of the responsibilities of the Department the position is as follows. Estimates of expenditure on hospital and some community health services, and on local authority residential and day care services are available from the Department's programme budget analysis, details of which are submitted annually to the Select Committee on Social Services and are published by the Committee in minutes of evidence associated with its reports on Public Expenditure on the Social Services, the latest being HC 387-II published in July 1986. Figures on actual spending on centrally funded initiatives for mentally handicapped people are collected centrally. It is not possible however to identify the use mentally handicapped people make of the family practitioner services and of the other health and personal social services, nor to separate out social security payments made to mentally handicapped people.

Estimates of current and capital expenditure in England on hospital and community health services and local authority services for mentally handicapped people, in cash and in real terms, are given below for each year between 1975-76 and 1984-85, the latest year for which these estimates are available.

Meningococcal Infections

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money has been spent by his Department on (a) research into and (b) publicity and health education regarding meningococcal infections in (i) the last year and (ii) the last five years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 11 February 1987, c. 283-84]: One specific research project (the Stonehouse meningococcal survey) has been funded to a total of £57,000. The Department has not initiated a central publicity or health education campaign, but district health authorities where the disease is prevalent have taken their own initiatives, while the public health laboratory service is working both on the development of a vaccine and on the nationwide surveillance of the different types of meningococci. It is not possible to provide figures for the cost of these activities.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to encourage early diagnosis of meningococcal infections and an increase in public awareness of the disease and its symptoms.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 11 February 1987, c. 283-84]: These infections tend to develop very suddenly and therefore they rarely allow early diagnosis, but doctors are invariably anxious to have suspected cases of meningitis investigated and treated. This is borne out by the referral to hospital of many children who turn out not to have meningitis.

Outbreaks of meningococcal infection tend to be sporadic and relatively rare, and in areas where cases do occur, the medical officer for environmental health takes responsibility for necessary action, including alerting the public and doctors as necessary.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will add all meningococcal infections, and in particular meningococcal septicaemia, to the list of notifiable diseases; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 11 February 1987, c. 283-84]: The list of notifiable diseases is kept under constant review. I have noted the views expressed recently by the medical profession on septicaemia, and the suggestion that it should be included is being considered.

Meningitis

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of meningitis recorded in England have resulted in death in each year since 1970; how many were in (i) County of Avon, (ii) County of Gloucester, (iii) Frenchay health authority, (iv) Bristol and Weston district health authority, (v) Bath and West Wiltshire health authority.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 16 February 1987, c. 512]: Meningitis is caused by many different organisms. I assume my hon. Friend is interested in the number of deaths with an underlying cause of meningococcal meningitis, and these data are shown in the table. Because of boundary changes, some figures are not readily available prior to 1974.

Number of deaths with underlying cause meningococcal meningitis (ICD (8, 9) 036.0)[1] registered in England and Wales to usual residents of England, Counties of Avon and Gloucestershire, and District Health Authorities (DHA) of Frenchay, Bristol and Weston, and Bath 1970 to 1985

Overseas Students (Fees)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the net savings to the United Kingdom of the increases in university fees for overseas students since 1979.

Mr. Walden: The ending of the indiscriminate subsidy to overseas students from September 1980 was estimated to lead to savings in university funding of about £90 million annually at current prices. To be offset against this is targeted support for some categories of overseas students at a cost of about £14 million a year.

Sixth Form Colleges

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the number of sixth form colleges in each year since 1973.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The numbers of sixth form colleges in England in each year since 1973 are as follows:

January each year	Number of sixth form colleges
1973	21
1974	38
1975	59
1976	67
1977	74
1978	81
1979	88
1980	96
1981	100
1982	101
1983	106
1984	106
1985	106
1986	108

Education Expenditure

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will set out a table showing for May 1979 and the most recent date for which figures are available the expenditure per pupil in Hertfordshire in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms for (i) primary school pupils and (ii) secondary school pupils.

Mr. Dunn: The net institutional recurrent expenditure per pupil for Hertfordshire for the 1979-80 and 1985-86 financial years are given in the table below. Information is not available for individual months.

Net Institutional Recurrent Expenditure (£) Hertfordshire

	Primary Schools		Secondary Schools

[1] The cash figures for 1979-80 have been repriced to 1985-86 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.

ENERGY

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy how the figures for materials unaccounted for at establishments licensed to handle nuclear materials are calculated with regard to complete fuel pins.

Mr. Goodlad: The figures for material unaccounted for (MUF) are based on the nuclear material accountancy returns submitted to Euraton under regulation 3227/76. MUF figures for nuclear material are calculated by subtracting the book inventory from the physical inventory. In the case of fuel pins, the amount of nuclear material they contain is determined at the time of manufacture when the pins are sealed. Thereafter, identification and management procedures are such that there should be no MUF provided the integrity of the pins is maintained.

Industrial Costs

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what action he is taking in the Council of Energy Ministers to ensure that industrial energy prices within the Community reflect the same cover of full production costs as applies in the United Kingdom; and in which member states this level of pricing does not apply.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Council of Ministers has agreed energy pricing principles related to the long-term costs of production. It is for the Commission to apply these principles across member states and to report where they are not being observed.

Coal Industry (Subsidence Costs)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the subsidence costs calculated per tonne of coal produced in each colliery in the United Kingdom from February 1986 to the present date.

Mr. David Hunt: This is a matter for British Coal and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Offshore Safety

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Energy when was the most recent review of his Department's responsibilities for offshore safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: A new post of director of offshore safety has been established to strengthen the management and the co-ordination of the Department's responsibilities for offshore safety.

This follows a review completed in autumn 1986 which took account of the increased work load stemming from the industry's greater involvement in the United Kingdom sector of the North sea.

The director will head a unit to formulate and to carry out an effective offshore safety policy and strategy. In addition, there will be a strengthening of the Department's safety branches to meet the changing requirements of the industry.

WALES

Redundancies

Mr. John asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the employers in the Pontypridd parliamentary constituency or Pontypridd travel-to-work area who have notified his Department of redundancies since 1979; and if he will give the number of redundancies given in each such notification.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Firms notifying redundancies do so in confidence, and their names are therefore not disclosed. The number of notifications received and the number of redundancies recorded for each year since 1979 in the Pontypridd and Rhondda travel-to-work area are as follows:

Year	Number of notifications received	Number of redundancies
1979	32	1,331
1980	58	3,074
1981	42	2,422
1982	29	1,324
1983	34	1,471
1984	17	871
1985	23	1,069
[1]1986	8	301

Note: Some adjustments to travel-to-work areas boundaries were made in 1984.

PRIME MINISTER

Fishing Vessel (Accident)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Prime Minister whether she has received representations about an incident in the Irish sea on Thursday 19 February; what information she has on damage caused to a British fishing boat; whether the incident took place in United Kingdom waters; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received no such representations. The incident occurred in the Irish sea outside United Kingdom waters. I understand that no damage was sustained to the fishing vessel's hull or machinery but her fishing gear was lost. On the incident itself, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces gave to him on 24 February at column 222.

Anglo-Soviet Arms Talks

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister whether she will discuss with Mr. Gorbachev, during her forthcoming visit to Moscow, amending the outer space treaty to include a ban on all testing and orbiting weapons in space.

The Prime Minister: I expect to discuss arms control among a number of other subjects, but I have no plans to discuss detailed modifications to existing multilateral treaties.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister whether she will urge Mr. Gorbachev, on her forthcoming visit to Moscow, to accept the verification procedures submitted by the United Kingdom with regard to a chemical weapons treaty.

The Prime Minister: I expect to discuss a wide range of subjects with Mr. Gorbachev, including arms control, human rights, regional and bilateral issues. I hope that the latest United Kingdom verification proposals can provide the basis for substantial further progress in the Geneva chemical weapons negotiations.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister whether she will make it her policy to ask Mr. Gorbachev to halt the improvement in Soviet anti-ballistic missile defences in return for a freeze at 64 on the number of the United Kingdom's strategic nuclear weapon launchers.

The Prime Minister: Our position on the relationship of the British deterrent to the arms control process remains as set out by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in a statement to the United Nations general assembly in September 1983, and repeated in the House on a number of occasions. The action on the part of the Soviet Union suggested by the hon. Member would not meet the criteria that we have set out.

KMS Limited

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister on what occasions and for what purposes she has met Mr. David Walker of KMS Limited.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Broadgreen (Mr. Fields) on 3 March at column 726.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister whether any Government Department has at any time over the past five years had contracts with KMS Limited.

The Prime Minister: Details of contracts placed by other Government Departments are not recorded centrally. Records for my office are readily available only from April 1984. No contracts have been placed with, or payments made to, KMS Limited by or on behalf of my office during that period.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Vietnam

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make appropriate representations to Vietnamese authorities requesting the release from prison of Father Joseph Nguyen Cong Doan, a Roman Catholic priest of the Jesuit Order.

Mr. Renton: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Disarmament

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made at the conference on disarmament towards the identification of issues relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space; and which areas remain to be examined.

Mr. Renton: The conference on disarmament's ad hoc committee on outer space held useful discussion at the last session of the conference on disarmament from 4 February 1986 to 29 August 1986. These discussions will continue at the present session under the renewed mandate.

Diplomats (Protection)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those companies with which his Department has contracts to provide protection for United Kingdom diplomats abroad.

Mr. Eggar: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London has no contract with any company for the protection of staff abroad. Forty-four British missions abroad have contract arrangements with local security companies to protect their staff and premises. It is not our practice to provide details of security arrangements at individual posts.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police (Public Opinion Surveys)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how many years the Metropolitan police have been conducting public opinion surveys; how many surveys have been carried out for each year since such surveys have been undertaken; which companies have been employed to undertake the survey in each case; how many people have been interviewed; and what areas of the Metropolitan police district have been covered, in each case; what has been the purpose of the survey, in each case; what has been the cost to public funds, in each case; and if the results of these surveys will be deposited in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that National Opinion Polls Market Research Limited has been engaged to carry out a public opinion survey in the Metropolitan district (MPD) each year since 1983. The broad purpose of the survey is to assess what the London public expect of the Metropolitan police and the degree of satisfaction with the service it provides. Other information on the surveys is as follows:

	1983	1984	1985	1986
Number of people interviewed	4,204	4,309	4,309	2,932
Areas of Metropolitan police district covered—Divisions	8	8	9	all
Cost—£	36,500	39,000	44,420	15,200

I shall arrange for reports of each of the four surveys to be placed in the Library.

These annual surveys largely replace small-scale local surveys that have been carried out on occasions since the late 1960s. Details of these could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dartmoor Prison (Visitors)

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he will take in response to the report of the local prison visitors on Dartmoor prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend is giving careful consideration to the 1986 report of the Dartmoor prison board of visitors and will be writing to the chairman of the board in due course.

Police (Numbers)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the manpower position in the Metropolitan police and his plans for 1987-88.

Mr. Hurd: Between May 1979 and January 1987 the numbers of Metropolitan police officers and civil staff were increased by 4,750 and 1,400 respectively. The police establishment has been raised by 926 over the period.

In my announcement on 20 May last year, I said that I would be prepared to authorise increases of up to 300 in the police establishment and 150 in the civil staff ceiling for 1987-88 provided that I was satisfied about the use of the same level of increases agreed for 1986-87. Although the strength of the force has increased and is expected to reach nearly 27,000 by 31 March 1987, it will still be some 550 officers short of its establishment. The Commissioner and I are determined that this shortfall should be made good as soon as possible. To this end, the capacity of the force training school has been increased and it will be able to take up to 2,180 recruits in 1987-88, 380 more than this year.

Since my announcement of 20 May the Metropolitan police have made good progress in civilianisation. They were given a target of releasing 100 officers for operational duty in 1986-87. They now plan to release 108 officers and to use 40 civil staff to fill essential new posts which would otherwise have to be filled by officers taken off the streets.

In addition, through the force reorganisation, a target was set for 200 officers to be released for operational duties by April 1988. In the event, it is now hoped to release 218 officers by April 1988. The formation in January 1987 of territorial support groups to replace the special patrol group and district support units has allowed the redeployment to other operational duties of a further 200 officers.

In the light of this progress, and following a review, I have decided to authorise the increases already foreshadowed for 1987-88 and also to approve an additional increase of 100 in the civil staff ceiling making a total increase of 250. This will bring the police establishment to 27,815 and the civil staff ceiling to 13,882.

The additional increase in the civil staff ceiling, which brings forward part of the increase in the ceiling previously envisaged for 1988-89 and 1989-90, will enable the Metropolitan police, within existing financial provision, to press ahead faster with civilianisation as recommended by the Committee of Public Accounts in its report last session on the financial control and accountability of Metropolitan police.

Liverpool (Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Liverpool.

Mr. Hurd: During my visit to Liverpool on 27 February I addressed a meeting of the Liverpool University Conservative Association, met representatives of various Liverpool charities and visited the Ariel Trust, a voluntary project which teaches broadcasting skills to young people.

Road Fund Licences

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many summonses have been issued in England and Wales for not displaying a road fund licence on a motor vehicle in the last three years; how many people were fined as a result; how many received custodial sentences for non-payment of such fines; and what is the amount outstanding in respect of fines for non-display of a road fund licence disc.

Mr. Mellor: The available information is for proceedings, findings of guilt and fines at magistrates courts for the offences of a motor vehicle licence being obscured or not affixed, and resulting fines. This is published annually in "Offences relating to motor vehicles England and Wales", supplementary table 5 (page 12) of the issue for 1985, the latest year for which information is available. A copy is in the Library. The number of persons receiving custodial sentences for non-payment of fines and the amount of fines outstanding are not recorded centrally in respect of these offences.

Devon and Cornwall Constabulary

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is now prepared to increase the establishment figure of Devon and Cornwall constabulary.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: An increase of 17 police posts was approved in December 1986, meeting in full the authority's application for 1986-87. We are now considering a further application and hope to announce the outcome shortly.

Prison Population

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report how many serving prisoners in adult prisons are from Brent, the number from Brent now serving youth custody sentences, and the number from Brent on remand under 21 years; what increase these figures have shown, together with the national averages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The home address of persons in the prison population is not recorded centrally.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 802, whether the reduction of 1,400 nuclear warheads was first agreed with the Warsaw pact or was decided unilaterally by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation; and what compensating reduction was obtained from the Warsaw pact.

Mr. Stanley: NATO's policy is to preserve the peace through the maintenance of forces at the lowest level capable of deterring the Warsaw Pact threat. The nuclear planning group's decision in October 1983 to reduce the stockpile of NATO's nuclear warheads in Europe by 1,400 was a reflection of this policy. At the same time, Ministers agreed that steps should be taken to ensure the survivability, responsiveness and effectiveness of remaining delivery systems and warheads. The Montebello decision was not agreed with the Warsaw Pact.

Park Vista Site, Greenwich

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will place in the Library a copy of the covenant between the Secretary of State for Defence and the London borough of Greenwich made in 1971 to restrict the building on, or damage to, the southern boundary wall of the Park Vista site, Greenwich.

Mr. Freeman: A copy of the conveyance of 1976 (not 1971) when the site concerned was sold to the London borough of Greenwich has been placed in the Library.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much of his Department's budget for 1987-88 has been allocated to energy efficiency investment in his Department's property; and how that figure compares with 1986-87.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: £12 million has been allocated for expenditure on energy efficiency measures in MOD property during 1987-88, as compared with £15 million for 1986-87. The difference is due to the fact that 1986-87 sees the end of extra funding made possible by savings elsewhere in the budget, which are not available in 1987-88.

The MOD's investment in energy efficiency is not restricted to the amounts directly allocated, however. New building projects—and wherever possible refurbishment also—incorporate the latest energy efficiency standards, but since these are an integral part of design and materials their cost is not identifiable.

Trident

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the credibility of the United Kingdom's future Trident nuclear deterrent of any Soviet decision not to remain within the terms of the anti-ballistic missile treaty.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 9 December 1986 at column 139.

Test Ban Treaty

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications of a comprehensive test ban treaty for the future development of British nuclear warheads.

Mr. Stanley: As my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, said on 20 January in reply to the hon. Member for Merionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas) at column 524, we believe it would be premature to re-open negotiations on a comprehensive test ban treaty until progress in resolving outstanding issues particularly on verification becomes more apparent. This issue does not therefore arise.

Sir Frank Kitson

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action he intends to take against General Sir Frank Kitson under section 12 of Queen's regulations.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 20 February 1987, Official Report, c. 875]: None. General Kitson has not breached Queen's regulations.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he has any plans to require the use of three-way catalysts on cars over 2 litres and lean burn plus oxidation catalysts on cars between 1·4 and 2 litres;

(2) what decision has been taken on implementation of the provisions of the draft European Community directive on vehicle emissions;

(3) what the estimated average cost of fitting (a) three-way catalysts and (b) lean burn auto-catalysts to new production motor cars would be.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The estimated additional capital costs to the consumer of a car over 2 litres fitted with a three-way catalyst system is £500 to £800, and of a lean burn engined car from 1·4 to 2 litres fitted with an oxidation catalyst £125.

Implementation of the draft directive, the main provisions of which were agreed by most member states at Luxembourg in June 1985, depends first on it being adopted by the Council of Ministers. At present, the draft directive is subject to reservations by Denmark and Greece.

We are planning to implement the requirement for new cars to be capable of running on unleaded petrol from the earliest dates possible under the agreement. We are currently reviewing what other provisions of the agreement could be cost-effectively implemented, taking into account the environmental benefits, capital costs, maintenance and fuel consumption costs and the prospects for harmonisation of requirements in the European Community and elsewhere.

Railways (Cambridge-Royston Electrification)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached a decision concerning the electrification of the railway line between Cambridge and Royston following the representations made to the Minister of State by the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West on 17 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have today given approval to British Rail for the electrification of the line from Royston to Shepreth Junction at a cost of £2·5 million. This will allow passengers to travel directly from Kings Cross to Cambridge, which will be a significant improvement for commuters on this line. It brings the total BR investment that we have approved since October 1983 to £940 million.

Seat Belts (Coaches)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of the most recent motorway coach accident, he will seek to make compulsory the wearing of seat belts by all coach passengers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In most cases coach passengers have a high-backed seat immediately in front of them which provides impact protection and keeps them within the limits of their seating space in the event of a frontal collision. It is passengers without a seat immediately in front of them that are most at risk. We will shortly be introducing a package of coach safety measures which will include a requirement that seat belts be fitted to those high risk seats in all new coaches registered from 1 October 1988. That should encourage their voluntary use. We have no present plans to make wearing a legal requirement.

Fishing Vessels (Accidents)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all United Kingdom registered fishing vessels lost at sea since 1979 where the cause of the loss was unknown, giving the exact location of the last reported position and in each case showing whether that location is within a designated submarine exercise area.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information requested is set out in the attached table.

The following vessels have been lost in unexplained circumstances in the years between 1979 and 1986 and have been described as "missing" in the Departmental records

Year	Missing vessel	Approximate location	In a designated submarine exercise area
1979	FV TARRADALE II 22·3 m overall length	27 miles east of Pentland skerries	Yes
	FV SYLVIA MARITA 14·3 m overall length	Unknown, somewhere in the English Channel	Possibly
	FV CARINTHIA 17·8 m overall length	30 miles north west of Noup head	No
	FV OCEAN MONARCH 20 m overall length	94 miles east of Tafts Ness	No

Year	Missing vessel	Approximate location	In a designated submarine exercise area
1980	FV PAT MARIE 10 m overall length	1 mile south east of Benacre Ness	No
1981	FV CELERITY 19 m overall length	In Pentland firth	No
	FV REBORN 5 m overall length	Under the cliffs, east of Folkestone harbour	No
1982	NIL
1983	FV ZANTO 17 m overall length	Off the west coast of Denmark	Not possible to say
	FV EXUBERANT 10 m overall length	Between Weymouth and Dartford possibly of Portland Bill	Yes
1984	FV SOUTH STACK 11 m overall length	Between Anglesey and the Isle of Man	Yes
1984	CORDOBA 48 m overall length	4 miles north of Montrose	No
1985	OCEAN HARVEST 15 m overall length	30 miles east of Fraserburgh	No
	PEARL 11 m overall length	Off Holyhead	Possibly
1985	LORNA ANN 10 m overall length	Off Berwick	No
1986	DAWN WATERS 25 m overall length	13 miles east of the Isle of Man	No
	JAKE II 11 m overall length	8 miles west of the Rhinns of Islay	Yes
	PESCADO 15 m overall length	15 miles east of Harwich	No

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about (a) the loss of the fishing vessel Mhari L and (b) dangers to fishing vessels generally; what action he has taken as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend has recently received letters from two hon. Members about the loss of the Mhari L; one of these letters referred to the dangers to fishing vessels generally. I will be replying as soon as possible.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all cases reported to his Department or to the Coastguard, or about which his Department has information, where fishing vessels have been in any kind of incident involving (a) British, (b) United States or (c) other submarines; and what action he has taken as a result.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I shall answer this question shortly.

Road Accidents

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal accidents, including how many fatalities, have occurred in the last 10 years for which figures are available on (a) trunk roads and (b) non-trunk roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The following information is available:

Fatal accidents on trunk and non-trunk roads: GB: 1980-1985

	Trunk roads and motorways	Non-trunk roads
1980	1,176	4,384
1981	1,094	4,261
1982	1,097	4,350
1983	1,019	4,008
1984	1,007	4,131
1985	944	3,824

Fatality data could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Nurses

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide figures for numbers of nurses, broken down by category, completing training for every year from 1980 to 1990; and if he will publish comparable figures on the projected increase in demand for nursing staff from health boards' annual programmes.

Mr. John MacKay: Not all the information requested is available. The following table, supplied by the National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for tland, gives the numbers of learners by category npleting training and registering, by calendar year from 0 to 1982, and by fiscal year from 1983-84 to 1985-86.

Category	1980	1981	1982	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
First level nurse
General	2,111	2,509	2,547	2,022	1,702	2,007
Mental illness	482	534	438	417	398	563
Mental handicap	102	123	121	115	103	155
Sick children	165	202	203	208	157	170
Total	2,860	3,368	3,309	2,762	2,360	2,895
Second level nurse	1,412	1,554	1,563	1,843	1,344	895
Overall total	4,272	4,922	4,872	4,605	3,704	3,790

It is not possible to predict with accuracy the figures of se completing training in future years or of health ards' projected demand for the period to 1990. Methods improving the estimating of nursing establishment ures and the appropriate intakes into training are being mined at present.

Colleges of Education (Governing Bodies)

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland at proposals he has issued for the reconstitution of the verning bodies of colleges of education, to whom these oposals have been issued for the purposes of nsultation; what is the last date for making presentations; and what representations he has so far ceived.

Mr. Rifkind: A consultative paper on the future mposition of the governing bodies was issued by my epartment on 11 August 1986 to the colleges of ucation, the Joint Committee of Colleges of Education Scotland and the General Teaching Council for otland. Comments were invited by 17 October on the sis that it was open to the governing bodies or individual embers thereof to consult existing or potential pointing bodies. A total of 53 representations were ceived, of which five were from hon. Members. bsequently, further consultations have taken place on gulations, which will be laid before Parliament, next eek, giving effect inter alia to various changes in mposition.

Private Sector Rents

Mr. Canavan: asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will improve the system of arbitration through rent officers as respects levels of rent in the private sector.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to alter the existing arrangements.

Radioactivity (Fish)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many lakes in Scotland are being monitored for radioactivity in fish; how often readings are taken; and if he plans to continue monitoring throughout 1987.

Mr. Ancram: To date, 16 lochs (as well as 19 rivers and streams) have been monitored at various times for radioactivity in fish. Monitoring will continue in 1987 as necessary.

Crafts in Scotland

Mr. Buchan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the organisation of the crafts in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have received proposals from the Scottish Development Agency, HIDB and the Scottish Arts Council for a redistribution of responsibilities for the services to craftsmen in Scotland. These proposals are currently under consideration and a decision will be announced in due course.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Buchan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the level of funding from his Department to the Workers Educational Association in (a) Scotland and (b) Strathclyde; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Central funding to the WEA in Scotland has risen in real terms by more than 37 per cent. since 1979. Additionally, a supplementary payment exceeding £24,500 was made last year to clear accumulated deficits on the understanding that for the future the association would plan to match expenditure against income. I shall take into account whether or not the association has achieved this objective when considering the applications for grant aid for 1987-88 from the three Scottish districts including the West of Scotland district. The association will be informed of the outcome in April.

Scottish Transport Group

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has set corporate objectives for the Scottish Transport Group.

Mr. Ancram: I have written today to the Scottish Transport Group setting objectives for the group's bus and shipping operations. The objectives are as follows:

OBJECTIVES FOR THE SCOTTISH TRANSPORT GROUP

The Scottish Transport Group's function is to operate road passenger and ferry transport services in and to and from Scotland.

SCOTTISH BUS GROUP

Preamble

The Group's strategic objectives in the provision of bus services are as set out below. In pursuing these objectives the Group's policy (as set out in its document of September 1986 entitled "The Transport Act 1985 and Competition Law Guidelines for Scottish Bus Group Companies") is that financial dealings between the Scottish Bus Group and subsidiary companies will be at arm's length and undertakings have been given on the elimination of cross-subsidy between companies.

In addition the Scottish Transport Group recognises the special obligations arising from its present strength in the bus market in some areas of Scotland. It has therefore given the Secretary of State a number of important assurances concerning the management of its business following deregulation. First, the Scottish Bus Group's financial target — to seek an average annual return of 4 per cent. on average net fixed assets at current cost adjusted to take account of capital grant on an historical cost basis over the period to 1990 — is to be applied to each operating company. Arrangements have been established to allow regular monitoring by the Scottish Development Department. Second, any transfers of assets or loans, including short-term loans between subsidiary companies or between the holding company and a subsidiary, are to be conducted at arm's length. Third, arrangements have been agreed in principle with the Department to ensure that the cash reserves held by the Group will be available to subsidiary companies only on commercial terms.

Objectives

The Group's strategic objectives in the provision of bus services should be as follows:

1. To manage its bus operations as it would do in the interests of private shareholders seeking in particular to retain customer goodwill and to provide efficient profitable services.

2. Subject to objective 1, to provide services in rural areas both through the development of commercial opportunities and in participation in the tendering process, consistent with the framework for achievement of operational objectives set out below.

3. To explore and develop potential new markets and new methods of service provision.

Framework for achievement of objectives

In seeking to achieve the above objectives the Group's plans and actions should be consistent with the following operational policies:-

1. The achievement (year on year) of an adequate return on capital employed in accordance with the financial target set by the Secretary of State.
2. The establishment of a challenging system of cost control including targets for year on year reductions in unit costs.
3. The establishment of arrangements for the regular review of standards of service.
4. The achievement of performance aims agreed with Government.
5. The containment of external financing requirements within the limits set by Government.
6. The proper appraisal of new investments.
7. The provision of regular information to Government in a form suitable for monitoring performance in relation to target and financial limits.

CALEDONIAN MACBRAYNE

Objectives

In relation to its ferry services the Group should pursue the following strategic objectives:

1. To provide services as approved by the Secretary of State in terms of his Undertaking with Caledonian MacBrayne and to make appropriate financial and investment provision for the continuity of these services.
2. To provide economically and efficiently a level and pattern of service which strikes an appropriate balance between costs and revenue and takes due account of local requirements.
3. To exploit opportunities for the development of services for the benefit of both Caledonian MacBrayne and the communities served, having particular regard to the Government's commitment to the economic development of these communities.
4. To seek to develop commerical opportunities outwith the approved (subsidised) services where these opportunities can be met within existing capacity and agreed capital investment programmes.

Framework for achievement of objectives

In seeking to achieve these objectives Caledonian MacBrayne's plans and actions should be governed by the following operational policies:-

1. The need to contain deficit subsidy.
2. The achievement of the financial target set by Government.
3. The achievement of performance aims agreed with Government.
4. The requirement to make proper appraisal of investments.
5. The establishment of a challenging system of cost control including targets for year on year reductions in unit costs.
6. The need to take account of the social and economic needs of the communities served when making decisions on service provision.
7. The provision of regular information to Government in a form suitable for monitoring performance on targets and financial results.

THE ARTS

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Clelland asked the Minister for the Arts what is his latest estimate of local authority spending on the arts.

Mr. Luce: The 1986-87 estimated outturns of local authority expenditure on museums, galleries and libraries, within my programme, are £434 million for current expenditure and £49 million for capital expenditure.

Budget estimates of individual authorities for current expenditure on wider arts activities are published annually by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy in "Leisure and Recreation Statistics Estimates", copies of which are in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Service Employees

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give figures for the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 of (a) the cost of the Civil Service and (b) the average cost for each civil servant; and if he will break down the average cost for each civil servant into pay, national insurance, superannuation, and other costs, such as office space, heating, lighting, car allowance, travel allowance.

Mr. MacGregor: Civil Service running costs were rigorously scrutinised during the 1986 survey and agreed plans were reported in the 1987 Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 56). Although there were significant reductions in manpower numbers during the period 1982-83 to 1985-86, not all the related costs (such as accommodation) can be expected to reduce at the same rate. Cost per head figures should be viewed in that light. The following running costs per head figures are based on the financial and manpower figures published in Cmnd. 56.

	1982-83 £ million	1983-84 £ million	1984-85 £ million	1985-86 £ million
Departmental running costs[1]	9,094	10,499	11,155	11,703
Staff totals (average staff in post):
Civil Service (excluding trading funds)[2]	630,600	611,100	596,000	590,400
Armed forces[3]	58,000	58,000	58,000	58,000
Northern Ireland Civil Service	26,200	25,500	25,000	25,000
Running costs per head	£ 12,722	£ [4]15,115	£ 16,429	£ 17,379

[1] Departmental running costs comprise pay costs, personnel overheads, accommodation costs, office services. They do not include notional accruing pensions liability, pensions in payment or capital expenditure.
[2] Trading funds are subject to separate financial control and are not included in running costs.
[3] The pay of armed forces personnel engaged in headquarters and support activities is included in running costs.
[4] The large increase between 1982-83 and 1983-84 is due mainly to the introduction of repayment for accommodation services.

Because of changes in the coverage of running costs the breakdown of these costs to the level of detail requested by my hon. Friend is only available on a consistent basis for 1984-85 and 1985-86. In considering a breakdown of total running costs account needs to be taken not only of the full-time staff shown above but also of usage of overtime and casual staff, ie man years of input. The figures shown in the table are based on the latest breakdown of the outturns on running costs for the two years:

	1984-85 £	1985-86 £
Running costs per man year	14,960	15,641
Costs per man year of main components:
Pay costs	8,742	9,216
Personnel overheads	1,244	1,306
Accommodation costs	2,684	2,833
Office services	965	1,088
Other services	1,324	1,195

Civil Service Pay

Mr. Favell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Civil Service unions about the scope for taking account of lower wage rates in the north in determining Civil Service pay.

Mr. Brooke: I am considering proposals for dealing with the difficult circumstances of recruitment and retention where they exist in London and the south east and other particular areas, and shall be discussing these with the Civil Service unions in due course.

Wales (Public Expenditure)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will specify the public expenditure under various categories in Wales that is incurred by Departments other than his own in the sphere of (a) agriculture, fisheries food and forestry, (b) trade, industry and employment, (c) arts and libraries, (d) roads and transport, (e) housing, (f) environmental services other than those specified above, (g) law, order and protective services, (h) education and science, (i) health and personal social services, (j) social security, (k) other public services not specified above and (l) common services as set out in the Treasury territorial analysis exercise, specifying the amount spent in the 1985-86 financial year and the responsibilities in relation to which this expenditure is incurred in each category.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to table 6 of the answer that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Fallon) on 16 December 1986 (columns 488-98). The table shows identifiable expenditure for Wales by function under the headings of Welsh Office (labelled "Programme 16" in table 6) and other departments (labelled "Wales Other" in table 6).

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Imperial Tobacco (Takeover)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will institute an inquiry as to whether any inducements were offered directly or indirectly to buyers of shares in Hanson Trust to boost the price of the shares in the course of the takeover of Imperial Tobacco.

Mr. Howard: I am not aware of any allegations that such inducements were offered.

Diamond Report

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations made to his Department on the Diamond report on the law relating to security over moveables.

Mr. Howard: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the consultative paper issued by my Department last July as part of Professor Diamond's review. The paper made no proposals but rather sought views on the legal and commercial need for reform and the form any changes might take. A wide range of views were expressed on the broad issues raised in chapters 4 and 5 of the paper but there was general agreement that the Companies Act provisions on registration of company charges are unsatisfactory and should be improved. [Some 70 references were received.]

If my hon. Friend wishes me to do so, I will let him have a list of respondents.

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has now reached any conclusions on the Diamond report on the law relating to security over moveables and its effect on leasing and hire purchase; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Professor Diamond was originally asked to report by 31 December 1986 but is not now expected to do so before May. The delay reflects the considerable degree of interest shown in the review and the weight of the responses to the consultative paper issued by my Department last July.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the types of project eligible for grant from the European regional development fund.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The eligibility of projects for aid from the European regional development fund depends on criteria set out in EC regulation 1787-84. The types of eligible project are

(a) infrastructure investment projects where the cost is borne wholly or partly by a public authority, or by an analogous body, except that certain types of infrastructure listed in the annex to the regulation are not eligible;

(b) industry, craft or service sector investment projects which help create or maintain jobs; service sector projects must concern tourism of have a choice of location;

(c) measures to help internally generated development of regions — mostly by assisting small businesses and tourism in specified ways including subsidising consultancy and common services for such firms.

Investment projects as at (a) and (b) above must cost at least 50,000 ecu. All projects must be situated in an area eligible for national regional aid except that up to 4 per cent. of the fund may be used for infrastructure projects which are situated outside such areas but are an essential complement to their infrastructure. ERDF aid to a project is expressed as a percentage of the expenditure by the relevant public authority or analogous body.

The fund may also assist programmes of measures as distinct from individual projects, and studies relating to its operations.

Steel Industry

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people were employed in the steel industry in general and in the special steel industry in particular in the years 1975, 1980 and in each year since 1983.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Employment figures on the broad definition of the steel industry, which includes SIC groups 221 (iron and steel industry), 222 (steel tubes) and 223 (drawing, cold rolling and cold forming of steel), are available up to 1985 from the annual census of production (ACOP) and are as follows:

Employment

	Thousands
[1]1975	310
1980	217
1983	127
1984	115
1985	114

[1] estimate.

The Department of Employment's estimates of employees in employment indicates that employment in the industry fell between 5 and 10 per cent. between 1985 and 1986. However, these estimates are subject to a considerable potential estimating error due to the relatively small numbers of employees in the industry.

No estimates are available for employment in the production of special steels. Whilst special steels, including stainless and heat-resisting steels, accounted for around 2 per cent. of total crude steel production in 1986, they will have accounted for a higher proportion of employment as their production is more labour intensive.

Regional Economic Policy

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he commissioned the report into the effects of Government regional economic policy by D. Moore, J. Rhodes and P. Tyler; and at what cost.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The report was commissioned in 1981 at a cost of £43,340.

Industry (Public Funds)

Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the shipbuilding industry since fiscal year 1978-79.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1987, c.517]: Direct and indirect support for shipbuilding in the United Kingdom between 1 April 1978 and 31 December 1986 has exceeded £2,300 million.

Sir Alex Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much support from public funds of all kinds has been made available to the steel industry since the fiscal year 1978-79.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 2 March 1987, c. 517]: An estimated total of £5,585 million has been made available to the United Kingdom steel industry from public funds since the beginning of the fiscal year 1979-80.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General how many people were employed in full-time manufacturing jobs in (a) the North West region, (b) Lancashire, (c) Burnley travel-to-work area and (d) Pendle travel-to-work area in May 1979 and at the latest available date; and if he will give the percentage change.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Between employment censuses, which we held in 1978, 1981 and 1984, employment statistics are based on small-scale sample surveys which cannot produce reliable results for areas smaller than the standard economic regions. At the regional level, figures are not available for those full time in manufacturing industries. The estimated number of people working both full and part time in manufacturing industries in the North West region in June 1979 was 971,000. In September 1986 it was 638,000, a decrease over the period of just over 34 per cent. However, some of the decrease in the figures will be the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors outside the manufacturing sector. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the decline of manufacturing employment.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what is his best estimate of the number of people with two or more jobs in 1979, 1983 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: The regularly published employed labour force series does not identify persons with two or more jobs.

The labour force survey provides information on a different basis but identifies persons with a second job. The available information for the years requested is given in the table:

Estimates of persons in employment[1] with a second job, either self-employed or as an employee, in Great Britain

1983	550
1985	778

[1] Estimates relate to the spring of each year. Figures for 1983 and 1985 include those on Government schemes, whereas the figure for 1979 includes those on schemes only if reported as in employment.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what is his best estimate of the number of people engaged on Government special measures with contracts of employment in 1983 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: The employment measures run by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission on which participants have contracts of employment are listed in the table, together with the number participating at January[1] 1983 and at the latest available date.

	January 1983	January 1987

[1] The figure for the job splitting scheme is for February as the scheme was launched in January 1983.
[2] These are staff employed by sponsors to run projects.
n/a = not available.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide full details of the basis on which the numbers of people in self-employment is estimated and any change that has been made since 1979 in the way in which this figure is estimated.

Mr. Lee: Estimates of self-employment are obtained from the census of population, updated using data from the labour force survey (LFS) and the census of agriculture. Full descriptions of the methods used have been published in a series of articles in Employment Gazette, in particular the editions for February 1983, June 1983, March 1985 and May 1986.

In 1979 self-employment was assumed unchanged since 1975.

The first change in methodology since 1979 was the use of LFS results to produce new estimates for 1975 to 1979. These were published in the January 1982 Employment Gazette. The LFS data were used in place of discontinued information from the national insurance card count.

In June 1983 the conventional assumption that the level of self-employment had remained constant since the date of the latest LFS data was reviewed. As there were reasons for expecting some continuation of the upward movement in self-employment, a supplementary series which assumed a continuation of the rate of growth observed between the latest two surveys, was introduced.

In July 1984, when data from the 1983 LFS were incorporated in the estimates, the version of the series which assumed no change since the date of the latest LFS was discontinued.

When the estimates were updated to take account of results from the 1984 LFS and revised data from the 1983 LFS the figures for self-employment showed exceptional growth between 1983 and 1984 and the Department's statisticians considered it inappropriate to assume that this rate had continued. It was instead assumed that the average rate of growth between 1981 and 1984 continued thereafter. When 1985 LFS data were incorporated it was assumed, pending the results of the 1986 LFS, that self-employment continued to grow after mid-1985 at the average rate observed between 1981 and 1985.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what is the best available estimate of male full-time employment and male part-time employment in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lee: For the period March 1979 to March 1986, the most recent estimates for male employees in employment are to be found on page 4 of historical supplement No. 1 to the February 1987 Employment Gazette. A copy is in the library.

Estimates for June and September (the latest date for which figures are available) are as follows:

Male employees in employment in Great Britain

	Full time	Part time
June 1986	10,759,000	852,000
September 1986	10,837,000	850,000

Except for September 1981 (when a census of employment was conducted) no figures are available for part-time males from March 1979 to June 1984.

Estimates of the numbers of self-employed people do not separately identify those who are employed full time.

Training

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General what discussions have been initiated by the Manpower Services Commission regarding provision of adult training courses in 1987-88 and beyond; what account has been taken of the comparative value for money offered by colleges of further education in providing such courses; when he expects decisions to be made on the commissioning of such provision for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission will shortly be issuing planning guidance to its area offices in the vocational education and training group on the commissioning of adult training courses in the financial year 1987-88. The planning guidance will encourage area offices to seek the best value for money when commissioning courses, both from colleges of further education and from other training providers. It is expected that the plans developed by area offices will be approved by early April.

Family Expenditure

Mr. Lester asked the Paymaster General if he will provide a breakdown of family expenditure on items such as food, housing costs and so on distinguishing between manual and non-manual households.

Mr. Lee: The information available from the family expenditure survey 1985 is as follows:

Average weekly household expenditure (£)

	Manual households £	Non-manual households £
Housing:
(gross)	27·75	37·79
(net)	26·41	37·40
Fuel, light and power	10·11	11·19
Food	38·28	40·88
Alcoholic drink	10·72	10·16
Tobacco	6·47	3·62
Clothing and footwear	14·03	17·52
Durable household goods	13·47	17·52
Other goods	13·84	19·11
Transport and vehicles	28·15	38·09
Services	18·09	31·03
Miscellaneous	0·72	1·27
All expenditure groups	181·29	226·79
Number of households in the 1985 survey	2,246	2,802

Notes:
(1) Manual households are here defined as those households in which the head of household is an employee or self-employed in a manual occupation.
(2) Non-manual households are here defined as those households in which the head of household is an employee or self-employed in a non-manual occupation, or a member of HM forces.
(3) Households in which the head of household was retired or unoccupied (2,764 in the 1985 survey) are excluded from this table. Unoccupied heads of household include school leavers who have never worked and those unemployed for more than 12 months.

Tourism

Miss Fookes asked the Paymaster General what level of grant-in-aid he expects to make available to the British Tourist Authority and the English Tourist Board in future years.

Mr. Trippier: The grants in aid to the British Tourist Authority and English Tourist Board (ETB) for 1987-88 will be £21·4 million and £11·3 million respectively. In addition, £12 million will be made available to the ETB for assistance to tourism projects under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act 1969.

Small Businesses

Mr. Gordon Wilson asked the Paymaster General if he will list the legislative measures introduced by the Government designed to assist directly the small business community; if he will show against each the amount of central Government funding in all forms of advice and assistance; and if he is able to show the estimated increase in small business formation associated with each measure.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1987, column 431]: A list of all Government measures since 1979 to assist directly the small firms sector was set out in my reply on 9 February to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) at columns 56-60. The principal measures operated by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission to assist small businesses are:

Enterprise allowance scheme (EAS). The EAS was introduced in 1981 and more than 200,000 people have taken advantage of it. Total expenditure on the scheme to 31 December 1986 is £310·9 million and the estimated cost in 1986-87 is £146·6 million.

Training for enterprise. A wide range of business training is made available through the Manpower Services Commission's training for enterprise programme. In 1986-87 the programme will cost £18·8 million and more than 46,000 people will take advantage of it.

Loan guarantee scheme. The LGS was introduced in 1981 and has covered 17,440 loans totalling £571·6 million. The net cost of the scheme to 31 January 1987 has been £107·9 million.

Small firms service. In England, there are 10 centres, which in 1985-86 dealt with 256,532 inquiries and provided 35,242 counselling sessions. The cost of the small firms service in England in 1985-86 will be £5·1 million. In Scotland and Wales, the small firms service is provided by the Scottish and Welsh Development Agencies.

Local enterprise agency grants scheme (LEAGS). The scheme which assists local enterprise agencies in England was introduced in 1986 and is expected to provide assistance to some 180 enterprise agencies by the end of this financial year. The cost of LEAGS in 1986-87 will be £2·5 million.

Co-operative Development Agency. The remit of the CDA was widened and authority for funding until 1989-90 was provided by the Co-operative Development Agency and Industrial Development Act 1984. There are now more than 1,400 industrial co-operatives.

The legislative authority for the enterprise allowance scheme and the training for enterprise programme is the Employment and Training Act 1973. That for the loan guarantee scheme, the small firms service and the local enterprise agency grants scheme is the Industrial Development Act 1982.

Restart

Mr. George Howarth asked the Paymaster General how many people in Merseyside have been interviewed under the restart programme; and of those, how many have since (a) obtained jobs, (b) joined the community programme, (c) joined job clubs, (d) taken part in the enterprise allowance scheme, (e) undertaken restart courses, (f) undergone training, (g) taken part in voluntary projects, and (h) remained unemployed: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987, c. 313-14]: From 12 May 1986 to 8 January 1987, 52,203 people were interviewed on Merseyside under the restart scheme. We have no means of knowing precisely how many have since found jobs or other opportunities which might lead to employment. However, 75 per cent. of participants agreed to pursue the offer made to them at their restart interview.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the list of restart menu options that will be offered to unemployed 18 to 25-year-olds when the job training scheme is extended outside the current 10 pilot areas.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1987 at c. 339]: When the new job training scheme is extended outside the current 10 pilot areas the menu options that will be available to unemployed people aged 18 to 25 will include (subject to individual eligibility)

—a submission to a job;
—a submission to a place on a job club;
—a referral for information on the enterprise allowance scheme;
—a submission to the new job training scheme;
—a submission for training under the commission's other training programmes for adults;
—a submission for a job on the community programme;
—a place on a restart course;
—locally available voluntary opportunities
—referrals to specialist help, for example a disablement resettlement officer.

Offers from the menu will be made in the light of which option will best help the individual's return to employment.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Council of Ministers

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers on 2 and 3 March.

Mr. Gummer: The Council continued its discussions on the implementation of the December agreements on milk and socio-structures.

Decisions were taken on the arrangements for modifying the intervention system in the milk sector. Intervention buying of butter may be suspended once offers into intervention in the Community from 1 March exceed 180,000 tonnes. The Commission will use alternative methods for supporting the market. Intervention will be reintroduced if the market falls to the level of 92 per cent. of the intervention price. If physical stocks at any time exceed 250,000 tonnes, excluding quantities offered before 1 March 1987, the "floor price" of 92 per cent. will be reduced to 90 per cent. The Commission undertook that the current delays in payment of the traders offering into intervention will be shortened to 90 days when intervention is reintroduced under these procedures. For skimmed milk powder, where the council had already agreed that intervention would be suspended between September and March, it was further decided that intervention could be suspended during the rest of the year in which offers into intervention exceed 100,000 tonnes.

These intervention arrangements will result in a more flexible system. They strike the right balance between the clear need to make intervention less of a market in its own right and the need to maintain market stability.

The Council also agreed to adopt the socio-structures package excluding the early retirement provisions on which a decision was deferred. We resisted suggestions for splitting the package in any other way. This outcome means that the measures to which we attach importance, particularly extensification and the environmentally sensitive area arrangements, are adopted. The Commission gave its opinion that the measures agreed will cost the Community budget no more than 350 mecu over three years. Before the end of this period, the Commission will report to the Council which will decide on whether the measures are to be extended.

The outcome of this week's Council means that all the important decisions necessary to implement the agreements reached at last December's Council have now been taken. It is therefore a notable confirmation of the major success of the British presidency.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Benefits

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the proportion of average earnings taken up by housing benefit, as rent and rate rebates, in 1970, 1980 and the latest available date.

Mr. Lyell: I understand that my hon. Friend's intention is to compare the growth in expenditure on rent and rate rebates over time with movements in average earnings. National rebate schemes did not come into effect until the early 1970s. The figures in table I show expenditure on the rent rebate and allowances and rate rebate schemes administered by the Department of the Environment but not the more substantial sums, which are difficult to isolate, which were at the time included in weekly supplementary benefit towards rent and rates.

The housing benefit scheme, which was fully implemented in April 1983, brought together the assistance with rent and rates previously provided through supplementary benefits and through the rent rebate and allowances and rate rebate schemes. Table II shows expenditure in the first full year of the housing benefit scheme and the latest estimates for the current year. To compare expenditure incurred under the different schemes would, however, be misleading as the apparent large growth in expenditure in 1983-84 arose primarily from the reclassification of what was formerly supplementary benefit expenditure.

Mental Health (Community Services)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what specific measures he proposes to take to remedy the shortfall in community services for the mentally ill identified by the Audit Commission report, December 1986.

Mrs. Currie: As I indicated in my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 20 January at column 537, the Government do not think that the substantial progress already made in carrying forward the policy of community care is properly reflected in the Audit Commission report; in particular, in the mental illness field, its account of existing community facilities is misleading.

The challenge of providing a good comprehensive community-orientated modern service for mentally ill people has been patchily met by health and local authorities; and successive Governments have recognised that it will take a good deal of effort over a long period to produce the kind of service we want. But a great deal has been achieved; the Health Advisory Service, and Good Practices in Mental Health, with sponsorship from the Department have helped to catalogue and spread good practice. Since 1979 gross expenditure on hospital and community health services for mentally ill people had grown by 18 per cent. in real terms by 1985 and gross expenditure on personal social services for this group by 47 per cent. (also in real terms) in the same period. A lot remains to be done; and funding for and pressure on authorities are designed to secure appropriate priority for services for mentally ill people.

We shall also await with interest the report of Sir Roy Griffiths' overview of community care policy announced by my right hon. Friend in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Hayward) on 16 December at columns 461-62.

Handicapped Children (Medical Services)

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation obliging education authorities to pay for medical services such as speech therapy and physiotherapy for children who are handicapped or have special needs.

Mrs. Currie: The Government have no plans to introduce such legislation. At the time of local government and National Health Service reorganisation in 1974 the principle was firmly established that medical services would generally be provided by health authorities. This principle was reaffirmed in the Education Act 1981.

Social Security Act 1986

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what net savings will result in the financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88 from the implementation of the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Major: The effect of implementing the Social Security Act 1986 will be to increase benefit expenditure slightly in 1986-87 and to save some £75 million in benefit expenditure in 1987-88.

West London Hospital

Mr. Raymond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the continuing threat of closure facing the West London hospital.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that, following consideration of the response to consultation on the closure of the West London hospital, work is continuing on the feasibility of relocating the hospital's maternity unit at either Charing Cross or St. Stephen's and a report will be made to a future meeting of the Riverside health authority.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he next intends to make an announcement about state retirement pension levels.

Mr. Major: The next review of benefit levels will take place in the autumn of this year and a statement will be made shortly afterwards.

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the yearly percentage increase for the pensioners price index and for the retirement pension for each year since 1983.

Mr. Major: The information requested is shown for the uprating month in each year in the table.

Percentage increase since previous uprating date

	Pensioners Price Index: One Person household[1]	Pensioners Price Index: Two Persons household[1]	Retirement Pension: Single person	Retirement Pension: Couple
November 1983	4·6	4·8	3·7	3·7
November 1984	4·4	4·5	5·1	5·1
November 1985	4·8	4·7	7·0	7·0
July 1986[2]	2·2	2·2	1·0	1·1

[1] The Pensioners Price Index measures the effect of inflation on low-income pensioner households. It covers about 40 per cent. of all pensioner households and is published quarterly. Figures used to calculate increases are for the quarter in which the uprating month fell in each year.
[2] Increase since November 1985.

Artificial Limb Fitting

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Security what studies his Department has made of the new process of computerised artifical limb fitting developed by University College, London; and if he plans to develop it for use in the artificial limb and appliance centres.

Mr. Major: The work on the computerised artificial limb fitting, carried out by the University College London, has been wholly funded by the Department. The research phase is nearing its end.

Limb fitting companies have been invited to participate in trials of the new limb fitting system and a pilot scheme is now under way.

Our officials and the college are seeking a commercial involvement for the manufacture of the system and its supply to the artificial limb and appliance service.

National Disability Income

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards a national disability income, and whether he has any proposals to introduce changes in social security provision affecting disabled people.

Mr. Major: The Government are aware of the case made for a national disability income and share the underlying aim of progress towards a more coherent system of benefits for long-term sick and disabled people as resources permit. However, it would be inappropriate to make significant changes to existing benefit provision in advance of results of the survey of disabled people currently being carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. The results of the survey are expected to be published in 1988 and will provide the evidence for a comprehensive review of benefits for long-term sick and disabled people.

Injuries (Animal Attacks)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 26 November, Official Report, column 295, whether he will give a breakdown of the figures provided in Tables (1) and (2) by the type of animal which inflicted the injuries on the people concerned; if he will also give the figures as to the total injuries caused to people by each category of animal; and what advice his Department gives on attacks by animals.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will update the information contained in his reply for 26 November, Official Report, column 295, to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: Updated information on hospital statistics for Scotland is shown in the table. I regret that data on injuries for England and Northern Ireland for 1985, and figures on the number of deaths registered as being caused by animals for the constituent parts of the United Kingdom for 1986, are not yet available.

Estimate of number of hospital admissions following injury caused by animals (ICD(9) E905 excluding E905.7, E906) Scotland 1985

Area	Estimated number
Scotland	310

Medical Equipment

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received concerning the situation whereby medical equipment may be donated by a registered charity to a health authority without paying value-added tax on the purchase but that this relief is not available when the equipment is donated to a doctor's surgery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have received one letter on this issue which has been passed to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Energy Saving

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to ensure local health authority tenants are fully aware of the single payments for draughtproofing currently provided by his Department.

Mr. Major: Single payments for draughtproofing materials are available only to people entitled to supplementary benefit. Most health authority tenants are employed by the authority and are not therefore eligible for such payments.

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what arrangements he has made to ensure his Freephone DHSS service can promote the work of local neighbourhood energy action projects by way of local referrals;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that those claiming severe weather payments can also claim single payments for draughtproofing where the work can be done by local neighbourhood energy action groups.

Mr. Major: I shall let my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he has made to promote the Energy Efficiency Office's Monergy Save Freepost and Monergy Linkline service to claimants of supplementary and other benefits.

Mr. Major: The Monergy hotline and freepost services are available to everyone, not just those in receipt of supplementary benefit and other benefits. Both services have been widely advertised in national and local newspapers and special promotional activities, and the hotline has also been advertised on national television.

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to introduce a specific scheme to replace single payments for draughtproofing.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 13 January 1987 at column 170.

Christie Hospital, Manchester

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any representations about the effect on patient comfort and care of budget changes for Christie hospital in south Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: My hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Silvester) has brought to my attention the important work being done at Christie hospital and what could be achieved with increased financial resources. The regional health authority has recently announced a package of additional funding of more than £¼ million for Christie, which will provide 20 additional nurses and fund other service developments. In addition, Christie hospital will get a substantial share of the £104,000 allocated to south Manchester health authority next year in recognition of its regional specialty workload.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 317, he will list in the Official Report those health authorities which have decided, or are considering whether, to use allocations from the waiting list funds for projects involving the private sector indicating (a) the specialties involved, (b) the cost and (c) the private sector participants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Premature Births

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give a breakdown by regional health authority of the number of premature deliveries by gestational age of the babies concerned; and if he will indicate in each group the percentage survival rate of such babies in each health authority in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will give a breakdown by estimated gestational age of the numbers of premature live births in England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will state how many of the babies in each case in each of those years survived.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the earliest gestational age at delivery of a premature baby which showed signs of life after birth in England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not available from the registration of live births, as period of gestation is not collected under this system.

Raptors

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish a table giving the figures of injuries to humans inflicted by raptors for each of the years 1979 to date for Scotland, England and Wales, which were reported to health agencies; how many of these injuries were serious; how many of them were to children; and what guidance his Department issues or has issued on this subject.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that information is not available centrally in the form requested.

Vaccination

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether deaths occurring in the first year of life have been identified as being attributed to vaccination since 1971; and how soon after the vaccinations the deaths occurred.

Mrs. Currie: Three deaths to persons aged under one year were registered in England and Wales between 1971 and 1978 where the underlying cause of death was assigned to "Complications and misadventures in prophylaxis with bacterial and other vaccines" (International Classification of Diseases (ICD) 8th revision E933, E934)—one in 1972, one in 1974 and one in 1976. Between 1979 and 1985, there have been no deaths to persons aged under one year registered in England and Wales where the underlying cause of death was assigned to "Bacterial and other vaccines causing adverse effects in therapeutic use" (ICD 9th revision E948, E949). From the registration of these deaths, it is not possible to state the interval between vaccination and death.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the research studies into cot death that are known to his Department; and if any such study recorded whether or not the child had been vaccinated.

Mrs. Currie: The main body for Government-funded biomedical research in the United Kingdom is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the Department of Education and Science. The council is currently supporting a number of studies that may have relevance to cot deaths and respiratory distress conditions. In addition the Foundation for the Study of Infant Deaths, a charitable organisation, is currently supporting a number of studies related to cot deaths. We do not have information centrally to indicate whether the children involved had been vaccinated.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many reports of sudden unexpected death occurring in infants under the age of one year have been made to the Committee on Safety of Medicines; how many were reported as associated with medication other than a vaccine; and how many were associated with pertussis related vaccine.

Mrs. Currie: Since 1964, the Committee on Safety of Medicines has received 75 reports from doctors, dentists or coronors of deaths in children under one year old where the death may have resulted from an adverse reaction to a drug. The number of these which were sudden and unexpected could be determined only at disproportionate cost. Forty of the reports named a drug other than a vaccine as suspect and 27 reports named a product containing pertussis vaccine as suspect. A report does not necessarily indicate a causal relationship between a product and a reported reaction.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Islington, North claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The Islington, North constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at Finsbury Park, Highgate and Hoxton, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims for maternity grant received at those local offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Finsbury Park	1,318
Highgate	1,656
Hoxton	321

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Islington, North received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, but in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, the following numbers of claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's offices which cover Islington, North, although the boundaries are not conterminous:

	Number
Finsbury Park	1,209
Highgate	1,105
Hoxton	695

Towers Hospital, Leicester

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make a statement on the escape by a patient from Arnold Lodge regional secure unit, Towers hospital, Leicester on Thursday 26 February;

(2) if he is satisfied with security arrangements at Arnold Lodge regional secure unit, Towers hospital, Leicester;

(3) how many patients are currently at Arnold Lodge regional secure unit, Towers hospital, Leicester; and what is the staff-patient ratio;

(4) how many patients have absconded from Arnold Lodge regional secure unit, Towers hospital, Leicester, since the opening of the regional secure unit;

(5) in the event of an escape from a regional secure unit, who exactly is notified; and, in the case of the specific escape from Arnold Lodge, Leicester, whether the police were informed.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Regional Secure Units

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his Department's policy on allowing patients on parole from regional secure units within the grounds of the unit.

Mrs. Currie: The degree of supervision which should be exercised within the grounds is a matter for the patient's responsible medical officer to decide, having regard to all the circumstances of the case.

Lung Cancer

Mr. Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the recommendations of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on the prescription of lung cancer will be implemented.

Mr. Major: I am pleased to announce that regulations were laid today which will add this disease to the schedule of prescribed diseases from 1 April 1987. Benefit will be payable to those who suffer from lung cancer who work or who have worked underground in a tin mine, or who are or were exposed to bis(chloromethyl) ether produced during the manufacture of chloromethyl methyl ether, or who are or were exposed to zinc chromate, calcium chromate or strontium chromate in their pure forms, while at work.

Mentally Ill and Handicapped People

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the objectives, priorities and achievements of Her Majesty's Government's policy towards mentally ill and handicapped people since 1983.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 12 February 1987, c. 361]: Services for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people, along with those for physically handicapped and elderly people, are high on our priority list. Within those broad priorities, we have given fresh impetus, direction and support to the development of comprehensive and integrated local service networks—providing people with accessible and acceptable help appropriate to their individual needs. For both mental illness and mental handicap services, we require a partnership between health and local authorities. For mental illness services, we require a service network which includes in-patient beds, a range of alternative accommodation (with appropriate support), and out-patient and day services. For mental handicap services, we require a network which includes a range of specialist residential care and home support, access to specialist resources and varied day services. Ready access to ordinary services and opportunities and planned and shared integration with local communities are vital.

Achievements since 1983, and earlier, have been the spread of good quality local services with marked improvements both for those living in more ordinary settings and those in hospital, and a marked shift of emphasis from the latter to the former. This has been achieved by increased resources, greater flexibility in their deployment and redeployment, clearer guidelines and wider spread of information about good practice, much more effective monitoring and accountability arrangements, targetted research, and specially funded initiatives to encourage new developments. Those in the front line of achievements have been local planners and other workers with vision and determination, in both the statutory and voluntary sectors; and service users who have themselves shown what they are capable of given the opportunity. Sir Roy Griffiths is presently conducting a review of care in the community provisions which should be completed by the end of 1987.

My right hon. Friend will be laying before Parliament later in the year the report required by section 11 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Attempted Suicide (Male Unemployed)

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many attempted male suicides were recorded for each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive; and how many of these involved unemployed males.

Mr. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 March 1987]: Information is not available in the form requested. The number of male suicide deaths for England and Wales in each year from 1979 to 1985 is given in the table. Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Male suicide deaths for England and Wales 1979-85 (ICD Nos. E950—E959)

Year	Number
1979	2,564
1980	2,629
1981	2,761
1982	2,781
1983	2,812
1984	2,859
1985	2,949

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies have been undertaken into possible links between male unemployment and the incidence of attempted suicides.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 March 1987]: I understand that the Medical Research Council, which receives grant-in-aid from the science vote of the Department of Education and Science and is the main Government body for biomedical research in the United Kingdom, is funding research at its unit for epidemiological studies in psychiatry.

Nurses

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the conditions of service for nurses who transfer with mentally handicapped people from the hospitals to community care for mentally handicapped people with social services departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 March 1987]: Transfer terms for NHS staff who moved to local authority employment as a result of the care in the community initiative are the subject of discussion between the Government Departments concerned.

Currently, nursing staff who transfer with mentally handicapped patients from hospitals to local authority community care may, depending on arrangements made locally, either move on secondment (retaining NHS conditions of service) or be recruited by the local authority on local government terms and conditions of service. We are actively exploring the feasibility of modifying these arrangements to facilitate such staff transfers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Payroll Giving

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Lord Privy Seal what arrangements he will be making to enable hon. Members to participate, if they wish, in the charities payroll giving scheme under the Finance Act 1986 provisions.

Mr. Biffen: On 17 February 1987 the Services Committee resolved

"that the Fees Office should make arrangements to enable Members and Members' staff, who are paid through the Fees Office, to participate in a payroll giving scheme for charities, as provided for in sections 27 and 28 of the Finance Act 1986."

I understand that Mr. Speaker has endorsed this resolution and that the Fees Office is proceeding with the necessary detailed arrangements to implement the scheme. All Members will be notified once the formalities are complete.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Vacant Houses

9. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what research is being undertaken by his Department into the reasons for the incidence of vacant privately owned houses.

Mr. Patten: The Department is commissioning a survey into vacant private dwellings as part of its housing research programme for 1987-88.

Rent Control

16. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received a copy of the recent report of the Institute of Rent Officers on the future of rent control and the private rented sector.

Mr. Ridley: Yes.

Local Authority Expenditure

17. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the amount spent by local authorities in (a) twinning arrangements with Third world countries and (b) establishing nuclear-free zones; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Boyson: No central governmental records are kept on these matters. It is, however, clear that a number of local authorities are wasting ratepayers' and taxpayers' money on these and other activities that have little to do with their functions.

Competitive Tendering

18. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce legislation concerning competitive tendering by local authorities.

Dr. Boyson: We shall introduce legislation at the first available opportunity, either before or after the next general election.

Community Charge

19. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish any responses received in his Department to the document "The Community Charge" published by his Department on 15 December 1986.

Dr. Boyson: No. The booklet is not primarily a consultation document; nor do I have the permission of respondents to publish their views.

26. Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been received to the document "The Community Charge" published by his Department on 15 December 1986.

Dr. Boyson: We have received more than a dozen representations in response to the document on the community charge.

41. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations had been received in his Department by 27 February in response to the document "The Community Charge" published by his Department on 15 December 1986.

Dr. Boyson: We have received more than a dozen representations in response to the document on the community charge.

49. Mr. Jack Thompson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish any responses received in his Department to the document "The Community Charge" published by his Department on 15 December 1986.

Dr. Boyson: No. The booklet is not primarily a consultation document; nor do I have the permission of respondents to publish their views.

56. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many organisations and individuals have responded to his Department's document "The Community Charge" published on 15 December 1986.

Mr. Boyson: We have received more than a dozen representations in response to the document on the community charge.

Leicester (Housing Programme)

20. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money Leicester city council received for its housing programme in 1979 and 1986.

Mr. John Patten: The housing investment programme allocations made to Leicester city council for 1979-80 and 1986-87 were £20,524 million and £13·2 million respectively. In 1986-87, unlike 1979-80, the council has also been able to make use of capital receipts to increase its capital expenditure.

Local Authorities (Advertising)

21. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities concerning the draft publicity code on advertising by local authorities.

Dr. Boyson: I recently met representatives of the local authority associations to discuss a preliminary draft of the code. In addition, we have received a number of detailed comments from other organisations.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

22. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to bring forward legislation in light of the publication by his Department of the physical and social survey of houses in multiple occupation in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so.

67. Miss Boothroyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following the publication by his Department of the physical and social survey of houses in multiple occupation in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: We have received a number of representations about the Housing (Houses in Multiple Occupation) Bill. Our response to the research was outlined in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 23 January at columns 776-77.

Water Bill

23. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the average household annual water bill is due to interest and borrowing costs.

Mr. Ridley: In 1985-86 water authority interest charges amounted to 25 per cent. of revenue from water service consumers. It is not possible to attribute interest charges more precisely to any group of customers.

Homeless Households

24. Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the numbers of homeless households in bed-and-breakfast hotels; and if he will estimate the cost in 1987.

Mr. Ridley: On the number of households, I refer to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 20 February, at column 854. Estimates of cost in 1986-87 or 1987-88 would involve too many assumptions to be reliable.

44. Mr. George Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for the number of homeless households reported by local authorities in England.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 20 February, at column 854. Copies of the tables relating to the third quarter 1986 and earlier quarters are in the Library.

Rural Sewerage

25. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to increase the grant for rural sewerage.

Mr. Waldegrave: I propose to revalue to current prices the grants for sewerage and water supply in rural areas. The Department is writing to water and local authorities with the details. I will send a copy of the letter to my hon. Friend and I am also placing one in the Library of the House.

Local Authority Housing Development

27. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on his plans to restrict the use of private finance for local authority housing developments.

Mr. John Patten: The Department has received several requests for the Secretary of State's consent to specific schemes and a number of local authorities and other bodies have submitted views on the proposals.

Bathing Beaches

28. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects Britain's bathing beaches to be able to comply fully with the European Economic Community water quality directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: More than half the United Kingdom bathing waters already comply with the directive's standards. Typically, major schemes to improve the quality of bathing waters take a number of years to complete and involve expenditure of millions of pounds. However, at the present rate of spending, we expect nearly all these waters to comply by the end of the century.

Private Sector Rents

29. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will be publishing any proposals for de-controlling private sector rents.

Mr. John Patten: We have no plans to amend the Rent Act in this Parliament.

Local Government Finance

30. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a White Paper on reform of local government finance before introducing any legislation to alter the rating system.

Dr. Boyson: Further statements of Government policy on this subject will be made as and when appropriate.

Local Authority Housing Waiting Lists

31. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the numbers of people on local authority housing waiting lists.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery).

Northern Region (Dereliction)

32. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will increase the grant to local authorities in the northern region for the clearance of dereliction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I announced on 28 January that resources nationally for derelict land reclamation in 1987-88 will be about £81·14 million. Of this, £13·75 million or 18 per cent. has been allocated to the local authorities in the Department's northern region. This is £1 million more than their allocation at the beginning of 1986-87. I am unable to say whether further resources can be made available during the year.

Basildon (Tenants)

33. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest total of New Towns Commission tenants in Basildon; and what is the figure for the corresponding period in each of the last four years.

Mr. John Patten: The number of tenancies given in the latest quarterly housing return from the Commission for the New Towns in respect of Basildon, and figures for the corresponding quarter in the four previous years are as follows:

	Number
December 1982	16,517
December 1983	15,886
December 1984	15,514
December 1985	15,103
December 1986	14,735

Sports Council

34. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Sports Council regarding his Department's grant to the Sports Council.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 December to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry), at column 582.

Land Use

35. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines his Department will be laying down for housebuilding in or near villages as a result of the proposed changes in agricultural land use.

Mr. Waldegrave: Planning policy on the character of new housing in the circumstances to which the hon. Member refers is set out in circular 15/84. Inter alia, it says,

"... sites for new housing should be well related in scale and location to existing development ... This applies to development within or adjoining larger towns and cities, and also to sites in smaller towns and villages where new housing, sympathetic in scale and character, can be permitted. Such development can help to sustain smaller communities in rural areas".

57. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following his announcement of his intention to produce a consultation paper on alternative land use.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart), for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) and for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey).

64. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what comments he has so far received on the draft circular "Development Involving Agricultural Land."

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart), for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) and for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey).

Soil Erosion

36. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources he plans to devote to monitoring soil erosion in 1987-88.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Department is not planning to devote any resources specifically to monitoring soil erosion in 1987-88.

I understand the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will be devoting £27,000 to monitoring soil erosion in 1987-88. Officials in the Department and the Ministry are in touch on this work.

Secure Tenants (House Purchase)

37. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many secure tenants have had their applications to buy their homes under the Housing Act 1980 refused during the last 12 months on the grounds of defective title; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I am only aware of cases which have occurred in Bolton, where I understand 42 right-to-buy applications have so far been refused on this ground.

Rivers

38. Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total estimated cost of cleaning up rivers in the United Kingdom so as to meet European Community standards.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is not possible to separate the costs of cleaning up rivers to meet the standards in EC directives relating to freshwater, that is, those concerned with the quality of water to support freshwater fish and with the discharge of dangerous substances, from general investment in pollution control. Most investment in cleaning up rivers is undertaken to meet national objectives such as the elimination of class 4 rivers.

Local Authorities (Contracts)

39. Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take steps to outlaw political contract compliance conditions imposed on contractors by local authorities.

Dr. Boyson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that my right hon. Friend made on 18 February at column 916. While we have reluctantly had to postpone the legislation planned for this Session, it is our firm intention to introduce appropriate legislation at the first available opportunity.

48. Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what up-to-date estimates he has of the scope for potential savings by local authorities from contracting out services.

Dr. Boyson: Precise estimates of the potential savings from contracting out are not possible as the cost-effectiveness of local authority service provision varies from service to service and council to council. However, authorities which contract out services, frequently report savings of 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. on previous costs.

Single People (Acccommodation)

40. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of single people requiring cheap rented accommodation in (a) London and (b) the metropolitan county areas.

Mr. Tracey: The Department does not collect this information.

Estate Action

42. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities are refusing to discuss the scope for improving their housing stock with Estate Action.

Mr. John Patten: Of the local authorities originally invited, in June 1985, to join in discussion with Estate Action (then known as the Urban Housing Renewal Unit) only two—Lambeth and Doncaster—have not taken up the offer.

Since then 63 local authorities have received approvals for £50 million additional resources in support of Estate Action schemes.

Anti-fouling Paint

43. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding the copolymer content of tributyl tin anti-fouling paint; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received over 1,000 such representations in the past two years. The Government's latest measures to control the supply and use of such paints was set out in the answer given on 24 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) at columns 202-3.

51. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to introduce regulations to reduce the permitted level of organotin compounds in copolymer anti-fouling paints; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) (Official Report, c. 202-3).

Structure Plans

45. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning his intentions in respect of structure plans for rural areas.

50. Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of structure plans.

55. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to bring forward proposals to reform the present system of structure plans.

Mr. Waldegrave: In London and the metropolitan areas, unitary development plans, prepared by the London boroughs and the metropolitan districts, are to be introduced under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1985. Proposals for new arrangements elsewhere were made in the consultation paper, "The Future of Development Plans", published last September. Copies have been placed in the Library. Comments should be made by 14 March. Changes on the lines proposed would require primary legislation which I do not expect to be introduced during this Parliament.

Urban Development Corporations

46. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be in a position to announce the setting up of the four new urban development corporations foreshadowed in October 1986.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Freeson) on 15 January, Official Report, at column 269. I am pleased to say that the order designating the Trafford Park development corporation has now been approved by Parliament and the corporation came into operation on 10 February.

Housing Associations

47. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to expand the role of housing associations in providing housing under general need.

Mr. Tracey: Under the increased programme for the housing corporation and new private finance initiatives announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban and Affairs and Construction on 9 December, housing associations will be able to cater for more people in need of housing, particularly homeless families in bed and breakfast accommodation.

59. Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses have been received in his Department to his announcement of 5 February about financial assistance to housing associations and further controls on local authority financial assistance to them and other bodies.

Mr. John Patten: The Department has received 13 written responses and a large number of telephone enquiries.

60. Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local housing authorities were affected by his announcement of 5 February concerning financial assistance to housing associations and other bodies.

Mr. John Patten: All local authorities were affected by my announcement, insofar as it proposed new powers for authorities to give financial assistance for private rented housing and required them to obtain the Secretary of State's consent before giving such assistance. It is impossible to say how many authorities were working up specific schemes that might now require consent, since there has been no obligation on local authorities to inform us of their intentions in this regard.

Creative Accounting

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the use of creative accounting devices by local authorities.

Mr. Chope: We have received a number of representations relating to those creative accounting devices which will have the effect of imposing a massive burden on ratepayers in future years.

Rates

53. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many English non-metropolitan district councils levy higher rates than 253·7p in the pound.

Mr. Chope: There are 27 non-metropolitan district councils with average general rate poundages of more than 253·7p in 1986-87.

54. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met leaders of the authorities which are to be rate-capped in the next financial year to discuss their levels of spending and rates.

Mr. Chope: On 12 February, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met local authority association representatives, some from rate-capped authorities, to discuss the Local Government Finance Bill, which includes provision for rate limitation in 1987-88.

Football Hooliganism

58. Mr. Stevens asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met members of the Sports Council to discuss measures to combat football hooliganism.

Mr. Tracey: I discussed this with the chairman of the Sports Council on 18 February.

Empty Houses

61. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about any progress made in studying the scale of, and reasons for, vacant privately owned houses.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to my reply given earlier today to the hon. Member for Worsley (Mr. Lewis).

Homelessness

62. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the results of his research project into the causes of homelessness.

Mr. Tracey: We expect to receive by the end of March 1988 the results of the homelessness study recently commissioned from the university of Birmingham's centre for urban and regional studies.

71. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a White Paper with proposals to reduce homelessness in England and Wales.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. On action against homelessness, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 16 January to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) at column 331.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of Friday 16 January, Official Report, column 331, what is his estimate of the comparative public sector costs of housing homeless families in non-metropolitan areas by (a) providing them with newly built council dwellings, (b) providing them with dwellings acquired from the private sector and improved for letting and (c) providing them with bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Tracey: The comparable figures for non-metropolitan areas in England are around £3,700 and £3,600 in the first year, and an average of some £15 per household day, respectively.

Private Rented Accommodation

63. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what population of households live in privately rented accommodation.

Mr. Tracey: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Cathcart (Mr. Maxton) on 23 February at columns 96-98.

Nitrates

65. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in measures to reduce the nitrate content of public water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Discussions are continuing both within Government and with the water industry and interested outside organisations on the various options for limiting nitrate concentrations in water supplies. On Monday I discussed the contribution which farmers could make with representatives of the National Farmers Union. The water authorities most concerned are reviewing their nitrate strategies in close consultation with Government, identifying areas at risk more closely, and investigating the extent to which protection policies are practical in those areas.

UK 2000

66. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Chairman of UK 2000 to discuss the progress of the scheme.

Mr. Waldegrave: I met Richard Branson, the Chairman of UK 2000, on 29 October 1986; my officials have met Mr. Branson about twice a month since then to monitor progress.

Gleneagles Agreement

68. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent action he has taken in support of the Gleneagles agreement on sport and apartheid.

Mr. Tracey: All governing bodies of sport have been advised of the Government's commitment to the Gleneagles agreement. They are aware that Her Majesty's Government discourages sporting contact with South Africa, and that Government and Sports Council Policy, most recently reaffirmed in January, ensures that no public funds are made available to support such contacts. I only rarely need to approach individual bodies to repeat or clarify that advice.

Sizewell

69. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the environmental implications of the proposal to build a pressurised water reactor station at Sizewell.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have received a number of letters commenting on the proposal to build a pressurised water reactor at Sizewell. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy is currently considering Sir Frank Layfield's report before reaching his decision on the CEGB's application.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

70. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what action his Department is to take to improve the conditions under which families live in bed-and-breakfast hotel accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The action that we are taking to assist and advise local authorities on the use of their powers to improve conditions in houses in multiple occupation was described in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 23 January at columns 776-77. Our current research on homelessness is examining the use of temporary accommodation.

Housing Prices

72. Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introducing legislation to control housing and flat prices in large cities, particularly London.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Sellafield

73. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what levels of radiation in the environment have been recorded as a result of the accidents at the Sellafield reprocessing plant during January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No increases in the levels of radiation in the environment were detected following the incidents at Sellafield in January 1987.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government propose to take any action with regard to safety standards at Sellafield in the light of the most recent call by the Irish Government for the closure of the plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply:

Safety standards at Sellafield are kept under continuous review by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate.

Housing

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many homes were completed for local councils and housing associations in the year 1986; and how this compares with the number in 1978;

(2) what is the latest available figure for the number of homes started by housing associations and local councils in the year 1986; and how this figure compares with the number of starts in the year 1978.

Mr. Tracey: The numbers of housebuilding starts and completions for local authorities and housing associations in 1978 appear in table 6.1*(a)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics 1975-1985" and the provisional estimates for 1986 are in table 3 of this Department's press notice No. 60 issued on 5 February 1987. Copies are available in the Library.

Water Courses (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to what improvement has taken place in the quality of South Yorkshire water courses between 1980 and 1986; and what further improvement he expects by 1990.

Mr. Waldegrave: In South Yorkshire between 1980 and 1986, some 65 km of canal and river length were reported as being upgraded—nearly half of this having previously been class 4 (bad quality). By 1990, a further 98 km are expected to meet the long-term objective of class 2 (fair) and be capable of supporting reasonably good coarse fisheries. These improvements are the result of investment in improved sewage treatment by Yorkshire water authority and of reductions in industrial effluent.

Local Authorities (Fees and Charges)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will complete their review of local authority fees and charges announced in "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714); and what proposals that review is considering in relation to local authorities' powers to charge for services such as compulsory education.

Mr. Ridley: I have not yet completed consideration of the results of the review; but I hope to have done so fairly soon.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 5 March 1987

THE ARTS

Museums (Admission Charges)

Mr. Nellist asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the effect on attendances of the introduction of admission charges to museums.

Mr. Luce: In the 12 months to the end of February I received six letters expressing concern about the effect on attendances of charges for admission to the national museums and galleries that I sponsor.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Child Sexual Abuse

Dr. Godman asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland when he last reviewed the policy on prosecution of child sexual abuse cases.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Prosecutions in respect of offences involving the sexual abuse of children are afforded a high priority in Scotland and every effort is made to ensure that proceedings are instituted expeditiously and handled in such a way as to minimise the inevitable traumatic effects upon the children involved. In addition, procurators fiscal are instructed to maintain contact with other agencies concerned with the safety and welfare of the children and, in particular, with the reporter to the children's panel, with whom the fiscal has a close working relationship.

WALES

Brecon Beacons (Herbicide)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Wales what action he proposes to take to prevent the spraying of herbicide on part of the Black Mountains site of special scientific interest in the Brecon Beacons national park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Nature Conservancy Council has already written to the landowner concerned to remind him of his statutory duty to inform it of any notifiable operation he intends to carry out on the Mynydd Du (Black Mountain) site of special scientific interest. I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that it does not consider that there is any immediate prospect that the statutory provisions will not be complied with.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Entertainers and Sportsmen (Taxation)

Mr. Squire asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received any representations on the new rules for the collection of tax from visiting entertainers and sportsmen; and when he intends to introduce the regulations.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Sixty-one representations have been received. Regulations will be laid before the House as soon as possible in time for them to come into effect on 6 April 1987.

Mr. Squire asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the governing bodies of sport which he has consulted over the draft regulations on the collection of tax from visiting entertainers and sportsmen; and if he intends to meet a delegation from the Institute of Sports Sponsorship to discuss the effects of the proposals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Representations on the draft regulations have been received from the following sports bodies:

All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club, Wimbledon
British Equestrian Federation
British Equestrian Promotions Ltd.
Central Council of Physical Recreation
Institute of Sports Sponsorship

I am considering these in detail, and the views expressed will be fully taken into account.

Consumer Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total consumer expenditure on (a) alcohol, (b) tobacco, (c) gambling and (d) video hire for each year since 1970 showing these in actual prices and in constant prices taking 1970 as 100; and if he will also show each figure as a percentage of total consumer expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: The latest estimates of consumers' expenditure on alcohol (including beer), tobacco and gambling (including bingo admissions) are as follows. Constant price estimates are based on 1980 prices and rescaled to 1970=100. Separate estimates for video hire are not available.

Consumers' expenditure on alcohol, tobacco and gambling

Public Expenditure

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, at 1980-81 prices, and using the gross domestic product market price deflator, public expenditure on education and science, housing, law and order and protective services in 1978-79 and in 1985-86, showing the percentage differences in each case.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he now expects the European Court of Justice to make its decision on the case presented by the Commission that the United Kingdom should cease to zero rate new house building, gas, electricity, news services and protective clothing for value added tax purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I understand that the oral hearing of the infraction case in which the Commission has challenged certain of the United Kingdom's zero ratings will take place on 15 September 1987. A final judgment is generally given three to four months after the conclusion of an oral hearing.

EC Commission (Overdraft Facilities)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions prior to February 1987 the European Economic Community Commission has demanded to overdraw on the account of member states under article 12(2) of Regulation 2891/77; if he will make a statement on the operation of the sub-article; and whether there is any restriction on the amount of such overdraft facilities which can be demanded from the accounts of member states.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service (Fees)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Attorney-General what is the average delay in the payment of Crown court fees to junior counsel briefed by the Crown prosecution service; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: Figures are at present not available. However, the target of the Crown prosecution service is to make payment of Crown court fees to junior counsel briefed by the Crown prosecution service within 10 days of the receipt of an agreed invoice; that target is already being achieved in the majority of the areas of the CPS. Ultimately it is expected that payment will be achieved within five days.

Judges and Registrars

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General how many registrars in the county court have been promoted to high court judge service since 1979; and how many were promoted directly from registrar.

The Solicitor-General: County court registrars are not eligible for appointment as High Court judges and none has been appointed. One registrar of the principal registry of the family division of the High Court has been appointed a High Court judge.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General how many registrars there are in England and Wales.

The Solicitor-General: There are 199 county court registrars, 13 registrars of the principal registry of the family division of the High Court and four bankruptcy registrars of the High Court in England and Wales.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General if he will make a statement as to the Lord Chancellor's practice in recommending the appointment of registrars and High Court judges.

The Solicitor-General: County court and district registrars are appointed by the Lord Chancellor. High Court judges are appointed by the Queen on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor.

The Lord Chancellor's practice is outlined in a pamphlet entitled "Judicial Appointments" obtainable from the Lord Chancellor's Department, and which has been placed in the Library of the House of Commons. The Lord Chancellor's overriding consideration is the public interest in maintaining the quality of the bench and confidence in its competence and independence. His practice is to appoint to every judicial post the candidate who appears to him to be best qualified to perform its duties regardless of party, sex, religion or ethnic origin. Profession ability, experience, standing and integrity alone are the criteria, with the requirements that the candidate must be physically capable of carrying out the duties of the post, and not disqualified by any personal unsuitability.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General (1) what is the total number of briefs given in prosecution cases to Queen's counsel in England and Wales, in each year since 1979 for each circuit;

(2) how many Queen's counsel were instructed in prosecution cases more than (a) two, (b) four or (c) six times per annum in each year since 1979.

The Solicitor-General: I will write to the hon. Member when the information he requests has been collated.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General whether he will publish a list of all those prosecution cases handled by his Department naming the Queen's counsel who were instructed in each year since 1979; and what were the results of each case.

The Solicitor-General: Responsibility for the prosecution of criminal cases in which the consent of the Law Officers must, by statute, be obtained lies with the prosecutor. Specific records are not kept of the leading counsel instructed in these cases, and figures could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General what is his practice in the allocation of prosecution briefs to Queen's counsel.

The Solicitor-General: The nomination of counsel for the prosecution of criminal offences, both leading and junior, is now the responsibility of the Crown prosecution service. Leading counsel are briefed in cases of gravity and complexity, either according to a rota system or on the basis of special expertise in a particular area, such as fraud.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General with whom he consults in deciding which Queen's counsel are allocated work in the High Court.

The Solicitor-General: In cases where it falls to my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General to nominate counsel for civil cases in the High Court on behalf of other Government Departments, although the ultimate decision is his alone he takes into account views expressed by the Department seeking a nomination.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General if any Queen's counsel have been removed from the list of Queen's counsel available for criminal work for reasons of lack of success in achieving convictions in prosecution cases.

The Solicitor-General: No.

EMPLOYMENT

Skillcentres

Mr. Eastham asked the Paymaster General how many skillcentres have been closed down during the past three years; and where they were located.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Employment informed the House on 29 November 1984 about the skillcentre training agency's proposals for improving the efficiency and cost effectiveness of the skillcentre networks and told the House on 21 February 1985 that he was asking the Manpower Services Commission to implement the agency's proposals. In consequence, some 27 skillcentres or skillcentre annexes have been closed down. These were located at:

Bellshill Annexe (Glasgow), Bristol Annexe, Castle Bromwich Skillcentre, Denton Skillcentre (Manchester), Doncaster Skillcentre, Dumbarton Skillcentre, Edinburgh Annexe, Gloucester Annexe, Handsworth Young Persons Training Centre (Birmingham), Hillington Annexe (Glasgow), Hindley Annexe (Greater Manchester), Killingworth Skillcentre (Newcastle), Kirkby in Ashfield Skillcentre, Lambeth Young Persons Training Centre, Liverpool Skillcentre, Llanelli Skillcentre, Long Eaton Skillcentre, Medway Annexe, Middlesbrough Skillcentre, Plymouth Annexe, Queenslie Skillcentre (Glasgow), Redditch Skillcentre, Waddon Skillcentre (Sydenham), Waddon Annexe (Sydenham), West Gwent Skillcentre (Pontllanfraith), West Sussex Annexe (Lancing), Wolverhampton Annexe.

Restart

Dr. Hampson asked the Paymaster General how many unemployed people in the Yorkshire/Humberside region have been invited to restart interviews; of these, how many have found jobs, how many have been placed on the community programme or other schemes; and how many have stopped claiming benefit.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In the period 12 May 1986—January 1987 a total of 97,270 people in Yorkshire and Humberside were invited to restart interviews. We have no means of knowing precisely how many have since found jobs or other opportunities which might lead to employment. However, 75 per cent. of participants agreed to pursue the offer made to them at their restart interview. 16,811 of those invited to interview had ceased to claim benefit as unemployed by 8 January. We do not know how many of these people left the count because of help received under the restart programme since people are constantly leaving unemployment for a variety of reasons.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to his answer of 16 February, Official Report, columns 427-8, if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the number of entrants to YTS schemes in the financial services sector at March 1986 by the standard Department of Employment categories of ethnic origin, and by sex, and (b) the percentages of young people in work three months after leaving YTS schemes in the financial services sector between April 1985 and March 1986, by ethnic origin, and by sex.

Mr. Trippier: The information required on entrants by ethnic origin and sex is not currently available. The information below shows the percentage of young people in work three months after leaving YTS schemes in the financial services sector between April 1985 and March 1986 by (i) ethnic origin and (ii) by sex.

(i) Of the 17,273 white young people 66 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS. Of the 452 young people of Black/African Caribbean descent 40 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS. Of the 457 young people of Indian subcontinent descent 37 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS. Of the 316 young people who were either from none of those groupings or preferred not to say, 65 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS.

(ii) Of the 6,409 males who left YTS schemes in the financial services sector, 62 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS. Of the 12,094 females, 66 per cent. were in work three months after leaving YTS.

Tobacco Manufacture (Job Losses)

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to the reply given by the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on 21 January, Official Report, column 568, he will estimate the number of jobs lost indirectly associated with tobacco manufacture since 1979; and what is his estimate of the extent to which such losses are attributable to the import of cheap cigarettes.

Mr. Lee: Estimates of the number of employees indirectly supported by tobacco manufacture are not available.

Employment in the various industries which supply tobacco manufacturers has, in some cases, grown since 1979 and, in others, declined. This performance has partly depended on the ability of those industries to win orders from many markets, of which tobacco manufacture is only one.

Direct employment losses in tobacco manufacture since 1979 are the result of numerous factors, principally declining cigarette consumption but also rising productivity in the industry and increased import penetration. It is not possible separately to identify the employment impact of each of these factors.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures are being undertaken or considered to reduce the numbers of Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We are considering carefully what more can be done to help, in terms both of resettlement and of the search for other practicable solutions to the problem of Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong. We shall announce our decision as soon as possible.

Hong Kong

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what consideration Her Majesty's Government propose to give, in future discussions with the Chinese Government regarding the legal framework governing the transitional period up to 1997, to the effect of the Colonial Laws Validity Act 1865 on the introduction of democratic institutions in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Our exchanges with the Chinese Government on Hong Kong are confidential. The legal framework for Hong Kong for the period up to 30 June 1997 must conform with the provisions of the Sino-British joint declaration, under which the British Government will retain full responsibility for the administration of the territory to that date. We are satisfied that the provisions of the Colonial Laws Validity Act will in no way affect the ability of the Government to fulfil all our obligations under the joint declaration.

Nicaragua

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the sale of arms by British manufacturers to the Contra forces in Central America.

Mr. Eggar: Our policy is in line with our consistent support for a political solution to the problems of the region based on the Contadora objectives and our frequently stated view that these problems cannot be resolved by armed force.

Project Zircon

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what detailed assurances have been given by Mr. Duncan Campbell in respect of the disclosure of sensitive information about project Zircon now that the injunction against Mr. Campbell has been discharged.

Mr. Renton: Mr. Duncan Campbell gave a binding undertaking to the High Court on 25 February that he would not, whether by himself, his servants or agents or otherwise, publish

(a) technical information or data, plans or diagrams, notes or sketches relating to the Zircon project;

(b) information on the intelligence, military, strategic or security arrangements or the purposes of the Zircon project;

(c) information about persons or organisations directly involved in the planning, implementation, design, direction, construction intended use or deployment of the Zircon project.

This undertaking does not prohibit

(a) bona fide reporting of or fair comment upon any public statements about the Zircon project made by Ministers or servants of the Crown or any other person authorised on behalf of the Crown to make such statements;

(b) comment on the publicity affecting the New Statesman article and associated BBC film about the Zircon project;

(c) political debate related to (a) or (b) above, provided that no such report comment or debate may include or deploy material or information obtained as a consequence of any breach of confidence. In the light of this undertaking, the injunction granted to the Government against Mr. Campbell was no longer necessary.

ENVIRONMENT

Sellafield

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in the light of the three accidents at the Sellafield plant during the month of January, he plans any new initiatives to investigate the cumulative effect of Sellafield's discharges to the terrestrial environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: None of the events at Sellafield during January resulted in a discharge of radioactivity to the environment. An extensive research programme is already in progress to examine the behaviour of radionuclides discharged to the terrestrial environment from Sellafield. Reports on this work are published regularly.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the three accidents at the Sellafield nuclear plant during the month of January; what evidence his Department has on plutonium levels in the Cumbrian environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been informed about two minor events at Sellafield during January 1987 and in the same month the results of an inquiry on the loss of part of a fuel pin were also announced. None of these events resulted in a discharge of radioactivity to the environment.

Levels of plutonium and other radionuclides in the vicinity of Sellafield are regularly monitored by BNFL and authorising Departments. The results of the aquatic monitoring programme undertaken by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the vicinity of major United Kingdom nuclear installations are published annually in a series of reports entitled "Radioactivity in Surface and Coastal Waters of the British Isles". Data relating to atmospheric discharges in 1986 will be published in mid-1987. A copy of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's Report "Studies of environmental radioactivity in Cumbria. Part 7: A summary of progress to December 1984" was published in April 1985. Copies of these reports have been placed in the Library of the House.

Community Charge

Mr. Hoddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effect of the proposed community charge on the rating of sports clubs and related buildings.

Mr. Chope: Sports clubs will not be directly affected by the introduction of the community charge. However, like other non domestic properties, under our other proposals for rating reform, they will pay rates at a uniform rate in the pound on up to date rateable values following the revaluation planned for 1990. Non profit making sports clubs will continue to be eligible for rate relief of up to 100 per cent. at the discretion of local authorities.

Heart Disease

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the actions taken by his Department since the publication of the COMA report, designed to assist in the prevention of coronary heart disease.

Mr. Ridley: The Sports Council sponsored by his Department continues to encourage participation in sports and recreational activities to enhance health and fitness. Also, the voluntary agreement on the sponsorship and related advertising of sporting events has recently been renegotiated with the tobacco industry, as outlined in my hon. Friend the Minister of Sports reply of 19 January to his hon. Friend the Member for Luton, North (Mr. Carlisle).

Sports Stadiums

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many publicly owned indoor multi-purpose sports stadiums there are in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) West Germany and (c) France.

Mr. Ridley: The information is not available in this form.

The Sports Council collects information only on the number and type of facilities in England as part of its planning process.

Ozone Levels

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions in each of the last five years ozone levels monitored in the open air have exceeded those permitted as a maximum in factories.

Mr. Waldegrave: The interim report of the United Kingdom photochemical oxidants review group, copies of which I have had placed in the Library of the House, analysed the United Kingdom ozone monitoring data available up to 1985. Only during the exceptional summer of 1976 could the occupational exposure limit for ozone be said to have been exceeded at some sites in the south-east. Data for 1986 have yet to be fully verified but it is unlikely that they will change that conclusion.

Green Belt

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list all planning appeals in the Hertfordshire, West constituency since May 1979 where he has upheld an appeal for planning application relating to land in the green belt.

Mr. Waldegrave: This information is not available. However, I will write to my hon. Friend if he will let me have details of the planning appeals he has in mind.

Council Housing

Mr. Peter Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council homes have been provided in each year since 1983; how many he expects to be completed in the current year; and how these numbers compare with the record for 1979.

Mr. Tracey: The number of new dwelling completions for local authorities in 1979 and 1983 to 1985 appear in table 6.1*(a)* of "Housing and Construction Statistics 1975-1985" and a provisional estimate for 1986 appears in table 3 of this Department's press notice No. 60, issued on 5 February 1987: copies are available in the Library. It is not the practice to make forecasts of housebuilding.

Planning Appeals

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he takes any steps in reaching a decision over a planning appeal to inform himself as to whether the recommendation comes to him as a result of a unanimous decision by the local planning authority.

Mr. Waldegrave: Planning appeals are decided having regard to the provisions of the development plan, so far as material to the proposal, and to any other material considerations. Representations by the parties and other interested persons are taken into account so far as they refer to considerations which are material. The unanimity or otherwise of the local planning authority's decision is not relevant to the weight to be attached to the local authority's representations.

Mobile Homes (Insulation Grants)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to enable mobile-home owners to qualify for insulation grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Thamesmead

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will issue direction requiring the London residuary body to transfer Thamesmead to Thames Trust;

(2) when he expects the transfer of Thamesmead from the London residuary body to Thamesmead Trust.

Mr. Chope I shall answer these questions shortly.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will require a further consultation of Thamesmead tenants on the final terms of transfer of Thamesmead from the London residuary body to the trust.

Mr. Chope: No.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will allow Thamesmead Trust to sell properties with vacant possession.

Mr. Chope: Yes.

"Faith in the City"

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he has taken in the light of the report, "Faith in the City", on matters which are the responsibility of his Department, subsequent to the action referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey, 9 December 1986, Official Report, column 95.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Rolls-Royce plc

Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assurances he has given Rolls-Royce plc about the future public funding of research and development following the proposed privatisation of the company.

Mr. Pattie: There will be no reduction in Rolls-Royce plc's eligibility for Government funding for research and development following privatisation. Rolls-Royce will have the same eligibility for Government funding as other companies in the private sector.

Shipbuilding

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the projected number of jobs in the shipbuilding industry from 1987 to 1990.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Chinese Cloth

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that cloth made in the People's Republic of China shall not enter the United Kingdom with the word "England" woven in its selvedge.

Mr. Howard: Section 16 of the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 prohibits the importation of any goods to which a false or misleading trade description has been applied outside the United Kingdom. This section is enforced by the Customs and Excise and I have drawn this matter to their attention.

Independent Intermediaries

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates he has made of the consequences for employment of the proposals he is currently considering from the Securities and Investments Board in relation to the future of independent intermediaries.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend is currently considering the rules and supporting material submitted by the Securities and Investments Board on 10 February. The position of independent intermediaries will be one of the matters to which he will have regard in deciding whether to recommend to Parliament the transfer to the board of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the proposals he is considering from the Securities and Investments Board in relation to the future of independent intermediaries.

Mr. Howard: I have received a large number of letters from hon. and right hon. Members and directly from those likely to be affected by the Board's proposals. The comments made will be fully considered in deciding whether to recommend to Parliament the transfer to the Board of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Patent Agents

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has completed his consideration of the Director General of Fair Trading's report on the patent agents' profession; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The report by the Director General of Fair Trading "Review of Restrictions on the Patent Agents' Profession" was published in September 1986. It recommended that the Government end the exclusive right which patent agents, together with solicitors, have to represent inventors in dealing with the Patent Office, and remove restrictions on the use of the title "patent agent" and on the freedom of patent agents to enter into mixed practices. It also made a number of recommendations relating to the rules of the Chartered Institute of Patent Agents, which the Government have already endorsed and asked the director general to discuss with the Chartered Institute.

Having studied the recommendation for statutory change carefully, and considered representations from the Chartered Institute of Patent Agents and others, the Government have now decided to accept the recommendations concerning the right of representation and mixed practices. It is our intention to include these changes in the legislation implementing the proposals in the White Paper "Intellectual Property and Innovation" (Cmnd. 9712) which will be introduced when the Parliamentary timetable permits. They will, by making it possible for anyone to offer patent agency services, open the profession to greater competition; whilst patent agents will be free to enter into practice with members of other professions to offer a range of protection and exploitation services. We have decided, however, that use of the title "patent agent" should continue to be reserved to qualified patent agents, so as to avoid any risk of the public being misled or the international reputation of the profession being undermined by unrestricted use of the title. This, and the maintenance of a register of patent agents, means that the position of qualified patent agents will continue to be recognised and safeguarded. At the same time, we are, as the director general also recommended, reviewing the present system of register qualifications.

Northern Development Company

Mr. Trotter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial support the Government are offering the Northern Development Company for the activities set out in the company's business plan as presented to him on 6 February.

Mr. Channon: I have offered the Northern Development Company a total of up to £1,118 million in 1987-88. Of this £908,000 is for the company's inward investment promotion work hitherto carried out by the North of England Development Council. This latter sum represents an increase in excess of the rate for inflation over the provision of 1986-87. The remaining £210,000 meets in full the company's request for support for its wider activities aimed at the regeneration of the region. My Department is providing up to £180,000 of this latter amount and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment is contributing £30,000.

Regional Development

Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial support he is offering the regional development organisations in England in 1987-88 for inward investment promotion activities.

Mr. Channon: As I have stated separately today in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) I have offered the Northern Development Company up to £908,000. I shall also make available up to £600,000 to support the approved inward investment promotion programme of the Yorkshire and Humberside development association and up to £320,000 to that of the Devon and Cornwall development bureau, on the understanding in both cases that they continue to co-ordinate such promotional work in their respective regions. In the case on INWARD Ltd, (the regional development organisation for the north-west), on condition that it is also able to carry out this co-ordination role, I am prepared to make available up to £380,000 in support of its approved inward investment promotion programme. I am also making available up to £320,000 to support the approved inward investment promotion programme of the West Midlands industrial development association, provided that it is able to raise the same level of support from contributors within its region.

TRANSPORT

Addingham Bypass

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the inspector's report on the A65 Addingham bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The inspector's report has now been received. We hope to announce a decision in the summer.

Driving Test Candidates (Impersonation)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions there were in the last five years for which figures are available for impersonation of driving test candidates; and how many resulted in convictions.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The figures are as follows:

	Prosecutions	Convictions
1981	6	6
1982	15	14
1983	20	18
1984	16	16
1985	15	15

M11 (Roadworks)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he anticipates the works on the M11 at Redbridge roundabout will be completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The works involve building a viaduct to carry the new A406 South Woodford to Barking relief road. The present closures and diversions for A12 traffic at the roundabout will finish by the beginning of May. The relief road itself should be fully completed and open to traffic early next year.

M4 (Closures)

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for Transport for how long he expects the night-time closures of the M4 between junctions 2 and 3 to last.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The westbound carriageway is involved in this essential maintenance work. Its closure is restricted to the hours of 9.30 pm to 6.30 am to minimise inconvenience to travellers. We hope to have the road fully open again from 13 March.

Speed Governors

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport how long he expects to be the period between the end of consultation about, and the implementation of, his Department's intention to compel coach operators to fit speed governors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall make the necessary regulations as soon as we have completed consultation with the interested organisations.

Driver Testing

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will review the operation of driver testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I am setting up an internal review of the scope for improvement in the way in which driver testing is carried out. Its purpose is to examine whether and how a better service to customers can be provided and greater efficiency achieved. The review will also consider the possibility of delegation to the private sector and of means to improve the pass rate of candidates. I have no intention of reducing the standard of the test. I expect that any changes the review may propose will maintain the contribution which the driving test makes to road safety, and the public confidence which the present arrangements enjoy.

DEFENCE

Defence Lectureships

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list existing defence lectureships in British universities, polytechnics and colleges of higher education.

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence currently sponsors a total of five defence lectureships in British academic institutions. These are at the University of Aberdeen; the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth; King's College, London; and two posts at the University of Cambridge. A sixth defence lecturer will take up his post at the University of Birmingham on 1 October 1987. Two former defence lecturers, at the University of Lancaster and the University of Leeds, will continue to receive support funds from the Ministry of Defence until the end of the 1986-7 and 1987-88 academic years respectively.

Compex Exercise

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the results of the Compex exercise are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following an initiative by my right hon. Friend the Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) on the scope for competition, and a report by a joint Ministry of Defence/British Shipbuilders working party, COMPEX was set up in 1984 to compare in terms of time in hand, quality and cost the refits in Devonport Dockyard of a Leander class frigate and an Oberon class submarine with those of similar vessels undertaken by private ship repair yards.

The refits of the frigates, HMS Euryalus at Tyne Shiprepair Ltd (TSL) and HMS Arethusa at Devonport dockyard, were completed in 1985 and 1986 respectively. A detailed report has now been drawn up. Against an allocation of 41 weeks at the outset, HMS Arethusa's refit was completed in 38 weeks; that for HMS Euryalus took just over 49 weeks. However, the report emphasises that the work required on HMS Euryalus was about 20 per cent. greater than that on HMS Arethusa, and that other delays occurred outside the company's control, particularly on material supplied by the Ministry of Defence. The report concludes that the difference in time-in-hand was insignificant given these circumstances.

Both refits were completed satisfactorily to a high standard. The Commander-in-Chief Fleet reported that it would be difficult to distinguish between them, or between these and other similar frigate refits.

The comparison of costs was carried out by the Ministry of Defence's principal director of accountancy services, independently of the Directorate General of Ship Refitting and the Chief Executive of the Royal Dockyards. In conducting the comparison, PDAS made allowance for differences in specification, work content, condition of ships and yard facilities. He also took into account the work sub-contracted by TSL, services provided to TSL by MOD and the rectification of defective Ministry-supplied materiel. With these adjustments, PDAS assessed that the cost of the Devonport refit of HMS Arethusa was 10 per cent. higher than that of the TSL refit of HMS Euryalus.

In addition to these main aims, COMPEX has afforded an unprecedented opportunity to learn lessons about refits by contract in a number of important areas. These include more accurate planning and specification of refits, working practices and our methods of supervising work done and of materiel control. These valuable lessons apply in varying measures to the Royal Yards, both now and in the future under commercial management, as well as to provide ship repairers. The report contains a number of recommendations, which are now in hand or under consideration.

Although the submarine refits will not be complete until later this year, and until then no final conclusion can be reached, so far COMPEX has shown that, despite the inbuilt advantage of depth of experience in the Royal Dockyards, private ship repairers can compete on level terms. More importantly, it shows the opportunities for tightening our refit procedures across the board to achieve better value for money, and points the way ahead as to how we can responsibly develop the scope for competition, following the introduction of commercial management into the Royal Dockyards.

I have placed in the Library a copy of the report on the frigate refits.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what investigations are currently taking place into murders and kidnappings by paramilitary organisations in the 1970s.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

ENERGY

Electricity (Export)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Energy what prospects he envisages for the export of electricity to France and other EEC countries from the national grid.

Mr. Goodlad: The present cross-Channel electricity link with France was designed for two-way exchanges. The predominant flows are likely to be from France to England; there have been some recent exports. The CEGB concluded agreements with Electricité de France which provide for imports of electricity until 26 March 1988. Arrangements beyond this will be subject to commercial negotiation between the two utilities. There are no plans at present for further links with any EEC countries.

Pressurised Water Reactors

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether he will place in the Library a copy of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's report of work carried out at the United States Oak Ridge National Laboratories into risk of damage to the core of pressurised water reactors;

(2) whether he will ask the British ambassador in Washington to secure from the Library of Congress under freedom of information legislation a copy of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's report of work carried out at the United States Oak Ridge National Laboratories into risk of damage to the core of pressurised water reactors for use by Government Departments in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Domestic Fuel Prices

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will set out in the Official Report a table showing in terms of 1985 prices the cost to a domestic consumer in 1974, 1979 and 1987 of a unit of electricity and a therm of gas, each computed on the basis of the standing charge for a quarter distributed across 1,000 units of electricity and 125 therms of gas and 25 kilogrammes of coal.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is as follows. Changes in tariff levels and structures over the period mean that the figures for each fuel are not directly comparable.

	1985 prices
	Coal[1] pence per 25 kg	Gas[2] pence per therm	Electricity[3] pence per kWh
1 January 1974	98	32·6	2·433
1 January 1979	214	34·8	5·430
1 January 1987	239	41·2	5·880

[1] Average prices for group 2 house coal.
[2] 1979 and 1987 relate to consumers on the domestic credit tariff in the General Zone. This did not exist in 1974; the 1 January 1974 price relates to the North Thames Region.
[3] Average for the standard domestic tariff in England and Wales.

PRIME MINISTER

BBC Scotland (Police Raid)

Q7. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what contacts there have been between the Strathclyde police and press officers of Government departments (a) prior to, (b) during and (c) after the police raid on BBC Glasgow.

The Prime Minister: So far as my office is concerned, there have been no such contacts.

I understand that on 6 February, five days after the police operation, the Scottish Information Office informed Strathclyde police as a matter of routine of the content of two news releases issued on behalf of the Crown Office. On 13 February the Scottish Information Office informed the Police of a third news release.

There is no evidence that press officers from any Government Department other than the Scottish Office have been in contact with Strathclyde police at any stage about the action at the BBC.

EC (Alternative Funding)

Q79. Mr. Teddy Taylor (Southend East) asked the Prime Minister if she will seek to raise at the next meeting of the European Council the proposals made by Mr. Delors, President of the Commission, on 18 February regarding alternative sources of funding for the European Economic Community; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 10 February 1987 at column 159.

Scotland (Visit)

Q142. Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister when she next plans to make an official visit to Scotland.

The Prime Minister: I make official visits to Scotland two or three times each year.

Moscow (Visit)

Q183. Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister if she will give the dates of her forthcoming visit to Moscow; and what matters she intends raising with Mr. Gorbachev.

The Prime Minister: At the invitation of the Soviet Government, I shall be visiting Moscow from 28 March to 1 April 1987. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 4 March 1987, column 598.

Official Receptions

Q190. Mr. Pollock asked the Prime Minister when she last hosted an offical reception at No. 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: I last gave an official reception at No. 10 Downing street on Monday 9 February.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 2 March, Official Report, column 463, what procedures will be adopted by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his capacity as a Director of the European Investment bank to identify and separate those funds provided by Her Majesty's Government to the bank when he and other directors consider the loan application from the promoters of the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is a member of the Board of Governors of the European Investment bank.

The bank borrows on the capital markets to finance its project loans. The funds paid by Governments are contributions to the bank's subscribed capital which supports the general operations of the bank and enables it to raise finance on the capital markets. It would not therefore be appropriate to link contributions to subscribed capital with particular projects.

Engagements

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today, including one with a delegation from the National Pensioners' Convention.

SCOTLAND

Arts (Expenditure)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of local authority spending on the arts in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Outturn in the current financial year is expected to be in the order of £60 million. The breakdown is as follows:

	£ million
Libraries—current	46·0
—capital	2·1
Museums and Galleries—current	10·0
—capital	1·2
Theatres and Entertainment—capital	0·7

The figures do not provide a comprehensive picture, since current expenditure on theatres and entertainment is subsumed under leisure and recreation and cannot be diaggregated.

EC (Surplus Butter)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the distribution points in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow where European Economic Community surplus butter is made available for pensioners to collect; and if he will give the quantity of butter so far distributed in Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Mr. John MacKay: In Greenock and Port Glasgow the Salvation Army and Women's Royal Voluntary Service are co-ordinating arrangements for the distribution of free intervention butter to those persons whom the charities consider are eligible, including many pensioners.

I understand that there are 10 distribution points:

Port Glasgow Salvation Army Hall
Gibbshill Community Centre, Greenock
Greenock Salvation Army Citadel
Greenock East Salvation Army Hall
Medical Aid Home, Greenock
Mariners Home, Greenock
Mearns Centre, Greenock
Octavia Tenants' Association, Greenock
Fewster House, Greenock
Salvation Army Inverclyde Centre, Greenock

Approximately 10 tonnes of butter had been distributed up to 28 February.

Housing Statistics

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest available figure for the number of homes started by housing associations and local authorities in Scotland in the year 1986; and what were the comparable figures in 1978.

Mr. Ancram: Figures for 1986 are not yet available. Figures for earlier years, including 1978, are published in the table on page 9 of "Scottish Housing Statistics 1985" which is available in the House Library.

NHS (General Managers)

Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will announce plans for the introduction of a scheme of performance related pay for general managers in the National Health Service in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish Home and Health Department issued today a circular describing the arrangements for performance-related pay for NHS general managers. The scheme provides for an annual performance review measured against objectives previously agreed with employing authorities. I have made arrangements for copies of the departmental circular promulgating the scheme to be placed in the Library.

Tilgate Forest, Crawley

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements have been made to date for the sale or provision for an option on sale of Forestry Commission land at Tilgate forest, near Crawley; what are the terms of such arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have been asked to reply.

The Forestry Commission has entered into negotiations to grant an option to purchase some 35 hectares of its land at Tilgate forest. Any sale under this option would be dependent on planning permission being given for industrial and other purposes.

Dwellings

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the existing provision of (a) sheltered housing, (b) amenity housing, (c) sheltered wheelchair housing, (d) wheelchair housing, (e) housing for the ambulant disabled and (f) other specially adapted housing; and if he will give the proportions provided by (i) public authorities, (ii) housing associations and (iii) the private sector, indicating the proportions which are rented housing and which are owner-occupied.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The provision of special needs housing, as reported by authorities to the Scottish Development Department, is set out in the table. Other sources of statistical information suggest that the numbers provided by the private sector as thus reported are understated. The information collected by the Department does not identify rented and owner-occupied housing in the private sector.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the numbers of dwellings in Scotland which are privately rented, detailing the numbers which are (a) rented with business, (b) rented by virtue of employment, (c) other rented unfurnished and (d) other rented furnished for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive, indicating the percentage of all households which are living in each of these sectors.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: Annual estimates splitting the numbers of privately rented dwellings into the required categories are not available.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the type of shortstay accommodation secured for homeless people and the percentage securing permanent accommodation for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86, and if he will provide this in a form similar to table 5 of SDD statistical bulletin HSIU Number 17.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: Details, in the form requested, are no longer available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mr. Craigen) on 30 July 1984, at column 95.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the average annual rent for registered rents for 1978 and for 1986.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: Information on registered rents for 1986 is not yet available. Figures for 1978 are published in the table on page 37 of "Scottish Housing Statistics 1985" which is available in the House Library.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the average subsidy provided by housing support grant per local authority house for each of the years 1979-80 to 1987-88 inclusive.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The information is given in the table:

Year	Average subsidy per local authority house £
1979-80	238·83
1980-81	255·30
1981-82	181·48

[1] Estimate.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the number of new dwellings started in 1986 by (a) local authorities, (b) new towns, (c) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (d) housing associations, (e) Government Departments and (f) the private sector; and if he will break down this information by district within regional sub-totals.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The information requested is not yet available.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the numbers of dwellings in Scotland which are (a) rented from a local authority, (b) rented from the Scottish Special Housing Association, and (c) rented from a new town development corporation for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The information requested is set out in the table:

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the numbers of vacant houses in (a) the private rented sector and (b) the privately owned sector; and if he will break these figures down according to the reasons for vacancy.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The most recent figures on vacancies in the private sector relate to 1981 and were published in Scottish Development Department statistical bulletin — HSIU No. 1 (September 1983) which is available from the House Library.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide detailed breakdown of local authority housing revenue account income for each of the years 1979-80 to 1986-87 inclusive; and if he will estimate income for 1987-88.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 57]: The information requested is set out in the table. Estimates for 1987-88 are not yet available.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Management Education

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what steps he takes to ensure that there are sufficient postgraduate management education places in the United Kingdom to meet demand therefor;

(2) when he expects to receive the report of the two working parties on management education in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend is advised by the University Grants Committee in relation to provision for management education in universities and by the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education in relation to the polytechnics and colleges. Reports relevant to this matter are expected shortly from Professor Handy who was commissioned by the National Economic Development Office and the Manpower Services Commission and whose work is expected to be published at a conference on 29 April; and in the late spring or early summer from a Confederation of British Industry/British Institute of Management study partly sponsored by the Department of Trade and Industry and my Department.

London Business School

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the funding of the London Business School.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received four letters about the University Grants Committee's basic distribution of recurrent grant to the school in 1987-88 and provisional indications for 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Nursery Education

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table in the Official Report giving the number of children attending nursery schools and nursery classes of primary schools, at the latest date and for each of the preceding five years, broken down for each local authority.

Mr. Dunn: The total numbers of children under five years of age attending maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in primary schools in each local education authority in England in January 1986 and in the preceding five years are as follows.

[1] Full time and part-time pupils. Ages at end of December of previous year.
[2] Includes Isles of Scilly.
Gloucestershire LEA provides a limited amount of pre-school provision in "family centres", staffed by teachers and NNEB nurses, and in which parents assist. There are currently 9 of these and another 3 are due to be established in September.

Cornish Language

Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the effect of a national curriculum on the ability of Cornish schools to teach the Cornish language.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government believe that there should be room in the national curriculum for appropriate local variations in response to local needs, although the scope for these will necessarily be limited. The way in which such variations should apply is one of the matters which will receive particular attention during the development of, and consultations on the national curriculum.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, further to the statement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn), on 2 February, Official Report, columns 788-92, he will make a statement on the accuracy and completeness of the information given to his Department by Lancashire county council in respect of its application for education capital allocation for 1987-88.

Mr. Dunn: Lancashire's prescribed capital expenditure allocation for 1987-88 was made on the basis of information about its expenditure plans for that year. The information was supplied by the authority in the form requested by the Department. The authority itself is responsible for deciding the policies which determine the nature of its expenditure plans.

University Academic Staff (Pay)

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on university academic staff pay.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I informed the House on 23 January at columns 745-46 that the Government were willing to make available to the universities additional resources amounting to £40 million in 1987-88, £56 million in 1988-89 and £71 million in 1989-90 if a settlement could be negotiated which would provide management with more flexibility to take account of the quality of lecturers' performance and recruitment and retention problems; and include a firm commitment to improved promotion, probation and performance appraisal arrangements.

The Government have accepted proposals put forward by the university employers and staff sides on this basis. The proposals provide for average pay increases amounting to 24 per cent.—16·6 per cent. backdated to 1 December 1986 and 7·4 per cent. from 1 March 1988.

The additional £40 million for 1987-88 will now be released. The £56 million for 1988-89 and the £71 million for 1989-90 will remain conditional on satisfactory progress with proposed arrangements for appraisal, probation and promotion.

I welcome this settlement. It will reward excellence, enable substantially higher salaries to be paid to a minority of outstanding professors, and help to counter the brain drain.

SOCIAL SERVICES

NHS (Staff)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of National Health Service directly employed staff in Great Britain (whole-time equivalents) divided into the various staff groups, for each of the years from 1979 to 1986.

Mr. Newton: The figures are shown in the table.

Health Service Directly Employed Staff by Main Staff Group—Great Britain[1] as at 30 September

Notes:

[1] Includes staff at the Dental Estimates Board, Prescription Pricing Authority, Welsh Health Common Services Authority, London Post-Graduate Special Health Authorities and Family Practitioner Committee staff on health authority pay rolls. Figures are independently rounded to the nearest 100 whole-time equivalents.

[2] Includes agency staff.

[3] Not adjusted for reduction in nurses' working hours in 1980 (from 40 to 37·5 hours per week).

[4] Includes permanent paid, honorary and locum staff in hospitals and community health services, hospital practitioners and part-time medical/dental officers (clinical assistants).

[5] On 1.4.84 approximately 3,000 (wte) Operating Department Assistants were re-classified from the Ancillary to the Professional and Technical staff group. The figures have not been adjusted for this re-classification.

Disabled People

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations and complaints he has recently received about discrimination against disabled people; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We have not received any complaints or representations recently about discrimination against disabled people.

Maternity Alliance

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will meet a deputation from the Maternity

Alliance on Monday 6 April to discuss matters relating to the provision of maternity benefits and services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: We have had no request from the Maternity Alliance for a meeting to discuss maternity benefits, but will consider any such request should this be received.

NHS (Trade Unions)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what subjects were discussed at his last meeting with trade union representatives of employees in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 23 February at column 106.

Elderly and Infirm Patients

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what safeguards exist to protect elderly or infirm patients who are summarily removed from general practitioners' panels whilst still in need of basic medical care;

(2) what guidance his Department issues on continuing the provision of general practitioner services to patients who have been removed from general practitioners' panels and who are (a) over the age of 65 years, (b) incontinent or (c) suffering from senile dementia.

Mr. Newton: Under the National Health Service a family doctor is not allowed to remove a person from his list without giving the local family practitioner committee (FPC) eight days notice of his decision. Where the person concerned is receiving frequent treatment from the doctor (that is, at intervals of less than eight days), the notice of removal cannot begin to run until the treatment is no longer needed.

When notifying a person that he is to be removed from a doctor's list, the FPC informs the person of his rights in the matter as described above. If there are difficulties in finding a new doctor, the FPC is expected to help. Indeed, the FPC is required to see that everyone who seeks the services of a family doctor does in fact obtain them and the FPC has the power to assign a person to a doctor if necessary. These arrangements apply to all persons irrespective of age or physical or mental condition.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients (a) over the age of 65 years or (b) who are incontinent were removed from general practitioners' panels by general practitioners in each year since 1980 who had been registered with the same general practitioner for (i) five years, (ii) 10 years, (iii) 15 years or (iv) 20 years or more.

Mr. Newton: This information is not available centrally.

Organ Donor Cards

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the cost of production and distribution of organ donor cards for each of the years 1980 to 1986;

(2) what plans he has to increase the effective distribution of organ donor cards to the general public.

Mrs. Currie: Production and distribution costs of the organ donor card are part of the Department's total stationery costs and cannot easily be identified as a separate item, but the cost of producing 7½ million cards in 1986 was estimated as £34,000.

We are constantly seeking ways of bringing the cards to the attention of additional groups of people. They are already available from a range of places including doctors surgeries and chemists. Recent publicity campaigns have involved a number of national organisations, for example, Esso, Barclaycard, the National Union of Students and the Confederation of British Industry.

Nurses

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress made by the pay review body on nurses pay.

Mr. Newton: The review body for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine is considering the evidence it has received from interested parties and will be submitting its report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in due course.

Dietary Salt

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he is taking to encourage a reduction of the intake of dietary salt in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Currie: Under the Health Education Council's endorsement scheme for bread which came into effect last year, the major bread manufacturers have reduced the salt content of their product by 12·5 per cent. In addition, steps are in hand to reduce the salt content of processed foods following discussions between manufacturers and officials about implementing the report on diet and cardiovascular disease by the chief medical officer's committee on the medical aspects of food policy (COMA). The public are advised about dietary salt intake through various health educational publications.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many married women have claimed invalid care allowance; how many claims have been settled; and what is the average length of time taken to settle each claim.

Mr. Major: As at 27 February, some 106,000 claims to invalid care allowance had been received from married women of which about 53,000 had been decided. The average time taken to process a claim is currently 20 weeks. We are taking all practical steps to reduce this period.

Benefits

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of people in receipt of unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit in the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency at the latest available date.

Mr. Lyell: The available information is given in the tables:

At 14 August 1986	Number of persons receiving
	UB only	UB and SB	SB only
Greenock UBO	1,539	250	3,541
Port Glasgow UBO	788	171	1,764

At 10 February 1987	Number of supplementary benefit cases in action
Greenock DHSS Office	12,139
Port Glasgow DHSS Office	5,385

Notes:
1. The DHSS office boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency.
2. The DHSS figures are of all supplementary benefit cases and include those whose benefit is paid through the UBOs.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the saving if no social security, housing, or welfare benefits other than child benefit were paid to any single person whose income was more than £65 per week and to couples married or otherwise whose income was more than £130 per week.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 2 March 1987, c. 496]: It is estimated that in 1985—the latest year for which figures are available—the total benefit saving in Great Britain would have been about £3·5 billion, all else being equal.

Supplementary Benefit

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total amount of supplementary benefit paid to Scottish claimants in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Lyell: The information is as follows:

Financial year	£ million (estimated)
1979-80	218
1980-81	286
1981-82	464
1982-83	599
1983-84	[1]570
[2]1984-85	639

Notes:
[1] Reduction from previous year because, with the introduction of housing benefit, most financial support for housing costs is now provided through that scheme.
[2] Latest available date.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of those claimants in receipt of supplementary benefit in each of (a) Littleborough and Saddleworth constituency, (b) Oldham metropolitan borough council, and (c) Rochdale metropolitan borough council are families with children, and young single people under the age of 25 years; and what information he has for these categories and for each area separately regarding additional requirements which are included in their supplementary benefit assessment, by type and average amount of additional requirements.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of people in (a) the north-west, (b) Greater Manchester county, (c) Oldham, (d) Rochdale and (e) for each of his Department's offices covering Littleborough and Saddleworth constituency, currently in receipt of supplementary benefit; how many of the claimants are retirement pensioners; how many are unemployed persons; and what were the corresponding figures for May 1979.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Electors

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the electoral quota for parliamentary constituencies in England for 1987; and if he will list in the Official Report the number of electors in each Hampshire parliamentary constituency in descending order of size and show in each case the percentage deviation from the electoral quota.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested for 1987 will not be available until the end of April. A table showing the number of electors in each constituency in relation to the electoral quota will be placed in the Library at that time.

Child Line

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a grant to the charity, Child Line, to assist it to meet the cost of its free link line telephone service and to enable Child Line to raise its level of response to callers.

Mr. Newton: My right hon. Friend announced on 30 October last year that £50,000 was being made available to help launch the Child Line project. No further grant application has been received.

Pensions

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will provide a breakdown of the £3 billion public expenditure estimate for the cost of the establishment of a common minimum pension age of 60 years for both men and women.

Mr. Major: The estimated net public expenditure cost of about £3 billion for introducing a common minimum pension age of 60 is broken down in the table into its main components. These are broad estimates only.

	£ million
Estimated costs[1]
Retirement pension	+ 4,200
Loss of national insurance contribution income and tax revenue	+ 600
Housing benefit	+ 50
Estimated savings[1]
Supplementary benefit	− 650
Other benefits[2]	− 1,000
Net estimated cost	+ 3,200

[1] Estimates are based on 1985-86 benefit, tax and contribution levels.
[2] Unemployment benefit, sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, job release allowance.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which pension schemes for which he is responsible (a) do and (b) do not pay a widower's pension.

Mr. Major: My right hon. Friend is directly responsible for the national insurance scheme and the National Health superannuation scheme. In the national insurance scheme, widowers' pensions are not paid, although in some circumstances a widower may use his late wife's national insurance record to enhance or establish his own entitlement to a retirement pension. In the NHS superannuation scheme, a widower's pension may be payable where a female member has nominated her husband for this cover because he is financially dependent on her and is prevented by ill-health from earning his own living.

The Social Security Act 1986 requires that from April 1988 widowers whose wives were members of contracted-out occupational pension schemes shall receive a guaranteed minimum pension on broadly the same conditions as national insurance widows' benefits are available. This provision will affect the NHS superannuation scheme, and in the light of this minimum requirement, consideration is being given to a wider extension of widowers' benefit in respect of service from April 1988.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners' households are currently in receipt of supplementary allowances; and how many he estimates are entitled to supplementary allowance but do not claim.

Mr. Lyell: People over pension age are entitled to claim supplementary pension. In February 1986 there were 1·68 million pensioners claiming supplementary pension, of whom 1·54 million were householders. The latest available figure for take-up of supplementary pensions is for 1983, and I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Thorne), the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Leighton) and the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay) on 30 October 1986 at columns 231-234.

Body Appliances

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the terms on which contractors to the National Health Service will supply body appliances.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Housing Benefit

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a list of each change made to the structure of the housing benefit scheme, other than traditional uprating changes, from March 1983 onwards, giving details of the effect of each change on public expenditure; if he will, for each change that has reduced the scope of the standard housing benefit scheme, provide estimates showing (1) the total number of households with decreased entitlement, (2) the total number of households losing entitlements, (3) a breakdown of the numbers of households with losses falling within appropriate ranges; and if he will provide a breakdown of the above figures between rent and rate assistance and between pensioner, working and other households.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state both the level and the percentage change each year since 1979 in total National Health Service gross revenue expenditure based on the National Health Service pay and prices index, and after deduction each year of an appropriate demographic element to take account of the numbers of elderly people and the cost of medical technology; and, in separate columns, how large these latter two elements were for each of these years.

Mr. Newton: The information requested in the first part of the question is as follows:

NHS Revenue England (gross)—Percentage increase deflated by movements in NHS pay and prices

	Cash (£ million)	Percentage
1978-79	6,053
1979-80	7,223	−0·2
1980-81	9,402	+2·3
1981-82	10,488	+2·0
1982-83	11,477	+1·5
1983-84	12,169	+0·8
1984-85	13,027	+0·9
1985-86	13,740	−0·1

Calculations for demographic pressure and medical advance are not relevant to National Health Service expenditure as a whole. The information in respect of hospital and community health services expenditure was given to the hon. Member in my reply to him on 23 February at column 133.

NHS (Pilfering)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate is available to him of the extent of pilfering of National Health Service equipment or property each year.

Mrs. Currie: The annual accounts of health authorities incorporate a statement of losses which includes a category "for losses of equipment and property in stores and in use due to theft, fraud or arson, etc." A consolidated statement for England appears within the statutory summarised accounts of health authorities which are published annually as a House of Commons paper (for 1984-85—the latest year published as Paper No. 411 of 1985-86).

The summarised accounts of health authorities record equipment and property losses of £1,434,511 due to theft, fraud or arson, etc. in 1985-86.

Sickle Cell Disease

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what resource he is at present allocating for research screening and counselling for sickle cell disease and thalassaemia and in which hospitals this work is being done.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Self-employed (National Insurance)

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many individuals have paid self-employed national insurance contributions in each year since 1979.

Mr. Major: The information is as follows:

Persons paying Class 2 (self-employed) National Insurance Contributions, United Kingdom

Year	(thousands)
1979-80	1,608
1980-81	1,661
1981-82	1,697
1982-83	1,766
1983-84	1,845

Notes:

1. Final figures are not available for later years. The Government Actuary has estimated that currently about 2 million people in the United Kingdom are paying self-employed national insurance contributions.

2. Self-employed people with profits above the lower profits limit are liable to pay class 4 contributions in addition to class 2. Precise information on the numbers involved is not available but it is estimated that between 1¼ and 1½ million people are currently liable to pay class 4 contributions.

Haemophiliacs

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many haemophiliacs there are in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: The returns submitted to the National Haemophilia Centre Directors register at 31 December 1985 showed that there was a total of 7,808 haemophiliacs in the United Kingdom. Only some of those patients registered require treatment with blood products.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many haemophiliacs are AIDS antibody positive as a result of receiving contaminated factor 8 in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras on 25 November 1986 at columns 199-200. These are the most recent figures available for haemophiliacs who have been found to be HIV antibody positive. A regional breakdown of these figures is not held centrally.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the most recent date of receipt of contaminated factor 8 by a haemophiliac subsequently found to be AIDS antibody positive.

Mr. Newton: Information about individual haemophiliacs is not held centrally.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what help, counselling and support is provided to haemophiliacs who are AIDS anti-body positive as a result of receiving contaminated factor 8.

Mr. Newton: Health authorities provide haemophilia care through a network of haemophilia centres. Six of these centres are designated haemophilia reference centres (HRC). The centres provide medical care and counselling support for haemophiliacs and their families.

A range of social security benefits is also available to those haemophiliacs who, like others, may suffer illness, unemployment or loss of earnings as a result of infection with HIV.

For 1987-88 an additional £44,000 has been allocated to each HRC specifically for AIDS counselling. A provision of £16,000 has also been made to the west midlands health authority for counselling at the Birmingham haemophilia centre.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate in the Official Report the patient journeys made by the London ambulance service, non-emergency provision for each of the quarters in 1986, as set out and in the categories in his written answer of 6 November 1986, Official Report, column 599-600, showing for each figure for the fourth quarter and annual totals, respectively, the percentage increase or decrease on the equivalent figures for 1984.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 12 February 1987, c. 361]: The information requested is given in the tables.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Lakes (Radioactivity)

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what alarm level he has set in relation to radioactivity in fish in lakes in England.

Mr. Gummer: Levels of radioactivity in freshwater fish in English lakes liable to be affected by artificial radioactivity continue to be kept under careful surveillance. On the evidence available to date, the Government sees no need to seek to restrict the consumption of such fish.

Food Labelling

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will forthwith take steps to require the percentage by weight of saturated and polysaturated fats to be printed on all wrappers or containers in which they are sold.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Proposals for regulations to require labelling of the fat content in most foods, including fats and oils sold as such, have been circulated widely. Comments on these have given rise to a number of practical problems which are still being examined. Consultations at official level with the EC Commission are also continuing.

EC (Food Distribution)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 260, he (a) has now or (b) plans to have available in the future any breakdown of the distribution of European Community butter and beef; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Retail Prices

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out in the Official Report a table showing in terms of 1985 prices the retail prices in 1974, 1979 and 1987 of a small white loaf, one pint of milk, 250 grammes of butter, a quarter chicken piece, a dozen size 3 eggs, ¼lb tea or tea bag equivalent and 250 grammes of minced beef.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The table provides the information requested based on prices collected for the construction of the retail prices index. Where prices of items to the precise specification are not collected, or are not available on a consistent basis, prices of comparable items have been substituted.

Average Retail Prices of Certain Foods in the United Kingdom in terms of 1985 prices[1]

	1974 Annual Average pence	1979 Annual Average pence	1987 January pence
Small white loaf (400g)	32·3	33·2	34·1
Milk (pint)	16·5	24·0	23·7
Butter (250g)	44·8	66·4	49·7
Fresh/chilled chicken (lb)	102·8	102·4	74·7
Eggs, size 4 (dozen)	122·8	93·5	87·0
Tea (125 g)	36·8	42·6	39·7
Brisket (250 g)	92·5	89·9	81·3
Minced beef (250 g)	n/a	n/a	62·6

Notes:

[1] Average prices have been adjusted to 1985 prices using the RPI all items index.

[1] Where unit prices have changed over the period an equivalent price has been calculated.

[2] Prices of quarter chicken pieces and of size 3 eggs are not currently collected and prices for minced beef have been collected only since January 1980.

EC (Cereals)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the total quantity of grain produced in each of the European Economic Community countries in 1986 and also the total amount of co-responsibility levy paid by each member state in pound sterling;

(2) what is the definition of a small farmer which will be used in establishing who will receive part of the 120 million ecu/£75 million in cereal co-responsibility refunds; how much of this total will be received by British small farmers and when; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what was the average ex farm price of wheat received by (a) British farmers, (b) French farmers, (c) German farmers and (d) the EEC generally in 1979, 1984, 1985 and 1986, in pound sterling.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drugs

7. Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he proposes to take to seek to reduce the incidence of crime connected with (a) heroin and (b) cocaine.

Mr. Mellor: The ministerial group which I chair will continue to give the highest priority to reducing drug-related crime. Since the group was set up in 1984, police and customs drug enforcement resources have been substantially increased and their intelligence capability improved. We shall ensure that these resources are used to best effect and monitor the use of new powers conferred by the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 to trace, freeze and confiscate the assets of traffickers. This year we shall further develop our anti-drug education and information campaign, launch a £2 million scheme for drug-related teacher training, and continue the expansion of treatment services.

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the establishment of drugs wings in the regional crime squads.

Mr. Mellor: Fourteen dedicated drugs wings have already been added to regional crime squads in England and Wales, and three more will be in operation by April 1987. Two hundred and twenty one additional police officers have been provided to man the drugs wings, whose task is to concentrate on catching major drug traffickers. In London, the Metropolitan police central drug squad fulfils a similar role, and it has been provided with 37 additional officers. These measures represent a major strengthening of the police effort against drug traffickers.

Police Questioning (Tape Recordings)

10. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evaluations have been undertaken by the police and his Department of the impact of tape recording of police questioning of suspects.

Mr. Hurd: Field trials to test tape recording equipment and procedures were held in five police force areas between 1984 and 1986. They were continuously monitored and evaluated by the Home Office and a national tape recording field trial steering committee, which included representatives of the judiciary, legal profession and police. A preliminary report was published in November 1984; a follow-up report will be published soon. We will continue to evaluate the effects of tape recording with all interested parties as it becomes widespread.

50. Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the plans of police forces in England and Wales to introduce tape recording of interviews with suspects.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government plan that tape recording of interviews with suspects should become standard police practice by 1991. Within that period, the individual force plans for introducing tape recording are an operational matter for each chief officer. Some 34 forces have been allocated grant aid to introduce tape recording during the current financial year.

Rape

12. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will provide resources to enable the introduction of victim examination suites for rape victims throughout the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The establishment of suites for police examination of rape victims is eligible for grant aid to the police under established procedures. The decision whether examination suites are the best option for his area is an operational matter for each chief officer. Home Office circular 69/86, issued to the police in October last year, recommends that rape victims should be examined in conditions offering privacy and dignity, but this may be achieved by other means such as using acommodation in local hospitals.

35. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of rape have come before the courts in each of the last three years; and what has been the average length of sentence in those cases where there was a conviction.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information on offences of rape is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", supplementary tables volumes 1 and 2, under offence classification 19; for proceedings and sentences at magistrates' courts and the Crown court in tables S1.1(A) and S2.1(A); and for the distributiion of the lengths of prison sentences imposed in table S2.4. The figures for rape include some offences other than under section 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956, including offences of aiding and abetting and attempted rape.

61. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support is he proposing for the provision of facilities at police stations for victims of rape.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Home Office guidance to police forces, in circular 69/86 issued in October last year, is that wherever practicable rape victims should be examined away from police stations to provide greater privacy. Adaptations to or building of accommodation for examining rape victims by the police are eligible for grant aid under the normal established procedures.

Life Sentences

13. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently serving life sentences for murder; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: On 30 November 1986, the latest date for which figures are readily available, 1,775 inmates were serving life sentences for murder in prison department establishments in England and Wales. This figure includes persons ordered to be detained during Her Majesty's pleasure or sentenced to youth custody for life.

AIDS

14. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to stop the spread of AIDS in prisons.

Mr. Mellor: Although we are not aware of any case of transmission of HIV infection in prison, high priority is being given to preventive measures. The prison department's strategy includes medical inquiry and examination at the reception stage, counselling of individual prisoners, educational measures directed at all prisoners, and precautionary regime restrictions for prisoners identified as HIV antibody positive. The restrictions applied in a particular case are a matter for the medical officer.

Prison Kitchens (Inspections)

15. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to invite environmental health officers to inspect Her Majesty's prison kitchens.

Mr. Mellor: No. The prison service has its own arrangements for the inspection of prison kitchens, which are subject to validation checks by environmental health officers employed by the Department of Health and Social Security. These arrangements do not preclude calling upon local authority environmental health officers for advice if a need is indicated.

Unsolved Crimes

16. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the proportion of crimes in each of the years 1978 to 1985 which were not cleared up.

Mr. Hurd: The percentage of crime cleared up by the police is published each year in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". The clear-up rate for 1985 was 35 per cent.

21. Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of crimes since 1 April 1979 which have not been cleared up.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The estimated number of notifiable offences which were recorded by the police in England and Wales in the period 1979 to 1985 but not cleared up is about 13 million.

Official Secrets Act

17. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about reform of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Hurd: This year I have received seven letters from right hon. and hon. Members forwarding representations from constituents, and one letter from a member of the public.

Independent Broadcasting Authority

18. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has recently met the chairman of the Independent Broadcasting Authority to discuss the future funding of Channel 4.

Mr. Hurd: I met the chairman and members of the Independent Broadcasting Authority on 7 January and discussed several matters with them, including the recommendations of the Peacock committee on the future funding of Channel 4.

Crime Prevention

19. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made by his Department in stimulating private sector interest in crime prevention initiatives.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Private sector involvement in crime prevention has substantially increased following the crime prevention seminars held at 10 Downing street last year.

New standards for car security and for security in newly-built houses are important examples of the increased attention which the private sector is giving to crime prevention.

The organisations representing the private sector are also involving themselves more in crime prevention work. They are, for example, participating actively in the working groups of the Home Office standing conference on crime prevention; the Association of British Chambers of Commerce has launched an initiative to promote its members' involvement in crime prevention work; I recently met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss a programme of crime prevention work involving its members.

Hanson Trust has seconded a member of staff to the Home Office as consultant on private sector involvement in crime prevention.

24. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail what lighting initiatives in the field of crime prevention he has taken; and what sums of money are involved.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office was involved in the preparation of the National House-Building Council guidance note for builders which includes advice on street lighting for estates and welcomed the British Standards Institute guide for architects and planners which includes advice on domestic lighting as a crime prevention measure.

27. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responses he has had to his proposals on crime prevention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There has been a generally favourable and encouraging response to our crime prevention strategy. A good example of the general public's response has been the establishment of well over 18,000 neighbourhood watch schemes. Many local authorities are increasingly incorporating crime prevention measures in their activities using Government funding where appropriate. Other Government Departments have adopted crime prevention programmes. The private sector is making an increasing contribution to a range of crime prevention activity at national and local levels.

Hampshire Constabulary

20. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will further increase the establishment of the Hampshire constabulary.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is the responsibility of the Hampshire police authority to determine the establishment of the force, subject to my right hon. Friend's approval. One hundred and fifty-one additional police posts have been approved for the force since May 1979, bringing the authorised establishment up to 3,105. The last application by the police authority was met in full by the approval, in August 1986, of 21 additional police posts.

Remand Centres

22. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received regarding the conditions of remand centres.

Mr. Mellor: We recently received representations from the hon. Member for Warrington, North (Mr. Hoyle) about population pressures at Risley; and hon. Members will be aware of the debate which took place in another place on Wednesday of last week on prison conditions generally, in which the Minister of State summarised the Government's programme for tackling the problem of overcrowding.

Lay Visitor Schemes

23. Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many lay visitor schemes are presently in operation or planned; and what guidance has been issued by his Department to guide their work.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand that lay visitor schemes are operating or planned in 32 police forces. We warmly welcome this progress. Guidelines on lay visitor schemes were circulated to police authorities and police forces with a Home Office circular which was issued on 26 February 1986.

Fraud

25. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were convicted of offences of fraud in each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The information is published annually in "Criminal Statistics: England and Wales, 1985", (Cmnd. 10), table 5.16, copies of which are in the Library.

Criminal Appeal Act

26. Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received to amend the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 in relation to appeals by the prosecution against sentences for criminal offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Some members of the public have written to suggest a prosecution right of appeal; but we think it better to adhere to our proposal in clause 29 of the Criminal Justice Bill.

Home Watch Scheme

28. Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current assessment of the extent and success of the home watch scheme.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are now nearly 3,000 home watch schemes in the Greater Manchester police force area. Virtually all of these schemes were set up during 1986 and it is therefore too early to assess their contribution towards reducing crime. However, they provide a very clear indication that members of the public in the area want to be involved in action against crime.

Prisoners (NHS Treatment)

29. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to ensure that prisoners are adequately advised on discharge of the action that should be taken to enable them to receive National Health Service treatment.

Mr. Mellor: The advice given to a prisoner in such circumstances is a matter for the clinical judgment of the medical officer.

Supervised Bail

30. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for the provision of supervised bail.

Mr. Mellor: Not at present. Any proposals for supervision to be provided by the probation service would raise questions of resources and priorities, but we will keep the possibility in mind.

Burglary and Vandalism

31. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to reduce the incidence of burglary and vandalism in Thurrock.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our whole range of guidance and advice on good crime prevention practice applies to burglary and vandalism in Thurrock. We have issued guidance to local authority chief executives and chief officers of police on local crime prevention practice, including anti-vandalism campaigns. The majority of domestic burglaries are opportunist crimes which would be less likely to occur if householders ensured that their premises were properly secured. Even relatively simple, low-cost precautions will deter the opportunist.

Theft

33. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest estimate of the incidence of theft from private property; and how this compares with the position in 1983.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics of notifiable offences recorded by the police do not always identify where the theft took place. Separate figures are available for burglary in a dwelling, burglary in other building, theft in a dwelling and theft from shops. The detailed analysis by type of offence is published annually in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 2.10 and 2.12 of the issue for 1985, Cm. 10).

Prison Facilities (Women)

34. Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what improvements are planned by the prison department in facilities for pregnant women and mothers.

Mr. Mellor: The policy on mothers and babies in prison is currently under review, in consultation with the Department of Health and Social Security, to take account of developments in childcare practice to the extent that it is practicable to do so within prison. A research project being carried out by the University of Sussex on behalf of the Department into the physical and psychological development of babies in prison mother and baby units will provide an independent evaluation of present policy and practice and we will give careful consideration to its findings.

Television Violence

36. Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take in the light of recent evidence on the connection between violence on television and violence in the streets, in relation to the broadcasting authorities screening less violence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are confident from our contacts with them that the broadcasting authorities are aware of public concern on this subject and keep both their policies, and the operation of the policies, under review in the light of research evidence.

Immigration

37. Mr. John Townend asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the immigration figures from the Indian subcontinent for the last three calendar years; and what estimates there are for the current year.

Mr. Waddington: As published in table 1 of Home Office statistical bulletin 38/86, the numbers of nationals of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom in the years 1984 and 1985 and in the nine months ending September 1986 were 14,840, 17,510 and 11,390, respectively. The annual total for 1986 will be published later this month in the next statistical bulletin in this series. It is not our practice to publish estimates of future levels of acceptances for settlement because of the number of varying and unpredictable factors which affect the figures.

40. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of cases of illegal immigration into the United Kingdom known to him in the latest available 12-month period.

Mr. Waddington: Information on persons dealt with as illegal entrants is published quarterly in the Home Office statistical bulletins on the control of immigration statistics. Action was commenced against 1,436 persons as illegal entrants in the 12 months ending September 1986 (table 13 of issue 38/86). Figures for the whole of 1986 will be published later this month.

47. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the right of entry to the United Kingdom of nationals of other countries who have established the right of settlement in other European Economic Community countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Non-EC nationals settled in other EC countries are accorded the same rights of entry to the United Kingdom as those settled in countries outside the EC. They acquire no right to preferential treatment as regards entry to the United Kingdom simply because they have a right of settlement elsewhere in the Community.

Thames Valley Police Force

39. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on police manning levels in the Thames Valley force.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Four hundred and seventy additional police posts have been approved for the Thames Valley police since May 1979. These include 150 posts which my right hon. Friend approved in October, bringing the authorised establishment of the force up to 3,467 with effect from 1 April. We will look again at the force's needs when it has recruited up to its new establishment.

Football Matches

41. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the average non-recoverable policing costs of (a) first, (b) second, (c) third and (d) fourth division Football League matches last season.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is not collected centrally and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

"The Secret Society"

42. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters he has received on the subject of the proposed British Broadcasting Corporation series, "The Secret Society."

Mr. Mellor: Three.

Prisoners (Distance from Home)

43. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review policy towards the location of prisoners in relation to distance from their homes.

Mr. Mellor: While home address is one of the factors taken into account when allocating prisoners to establishments, due weight must be given to their security category, likely conduct, suitability for particular kinds of accommodation and medical and training needs and to the availability of places in particular establishments.

Police (Devon and Cornwall)

44. Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he has had any applications for an increase in police manpower in Devon; if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Devon and Cornwall as to the priority given to the bobby on the beat; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Devon and Cornwall police authority applied in June 1986 for a phased increase of 137 police posts, and informed us in September that it was prepared to fund 17 of them in the latter part of this financial year (1986-87), and 53 in 1987-88. An increase of 17 police posts was approved in December 1986, meeting in full the authority's application for 1986-87. We are now considering the application for 1987-88 and hope to announce the outcome shortly.

It is the responsibility of the chief constable to decide how best to deploy the available manpower. It is the policy of chief officers to deploy as many officers as possible on patrol, and I understand that the chief constable of Devon and Cornwall will allocate most of any further increases in police manpower which may be approved to patrol duties.

45. Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of trials for the tape recording of police interviews with suspects.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The two-year field trials, which were held in five police force areas to test equipment and procedures, ended last year. The Government have announced their intention that tape recording of interviews with suspects in police stations should become standard police practice by 1991. So far 34 police forces have been given grant aid to introduce tape recording in their areas.

Cost of Crime

46. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department conducts any research into the total economic cost of crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Tottenham (Mr. Atkinson) on 18 December 1986 at columns 1340-41.

Crime Statistics

48. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the total number of crimes committed in England and Wales since 1 April 1979.

Mr. Mellor: Quarterly numbers of notifiable offences recorded by the police are published in Home Office statistical bulletins, copies of which are in the Library: annual figures are published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", (chapter 2 of Cm. 10 for 1985).

54. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of crimes per 100,000 population in England and Wales in 1978 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Police in England and Wales recorded 5,215 offences per 100,000 population in 1978, compared with 7,258 per 100,000 population in 1985. These figures are published in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (table 2.2 of the issue for 1985, Cm 10).

58. Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the total number of crimes in the nine months ended 31 March 1979 and in the first nine months of 1986.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 2 March to a question from the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell) at column 469.

Prisons Inspectorate

49. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the annual report of the Prisons Inspectorate for 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons for 1986 has not yet been received. His most recent annual report is that for 1985, which was published on 5 February. My right hon. Friend issued a statement at that time and a copy is in the Library.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

51. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of operating the neighbourhood watch schemes in the Thames Valley police authority area.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from Thames Valley police that the 160 neighbourhood watch schemes in the force area operate at minimal cost to police. The precise costs could not be separated out from other policing activity.

Police Areas

52. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received any representations in relation to the inclusion of parts of the Epping Forest district of the county of Essex in the Metropolitan police district.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received no such representations.

Prison Population

53. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were in prison at the most recent count.

Mr. Mellor: The total prison population in England and Wales on 27 February was 48,588, plus 62 Immigration Act detainees held on a temporary basis in Foston hall.

Sexual Offences

55. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received seeking legislation to modify the scope of sentences for sexual offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received a number of recent representations about penalties for sexual offences but we have no present plans to change the existing penalty structure. Sentencing in individual cases is entirely a matter for the courts.

Community Radio

56. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is yet in a position to make a statement on the future of community radio.

Mr. Mellor: The Government's views on the possible development of community radio are set out in "Radio: Choices and Opportunities" (Cm 92), which was published on 25 February.

Crime (Greater Manchester)

57. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to reduce the incidence of crime in Greater Manchester.

Mr. Hurd: The chief constable of Greater Manchester has set the stimulation of community involvement in crime prevention as a force objective. The establishment of the Greater Manchester police is 6,943, an increase of 208 since 1979. The strength on 31 January 1987 was 6,747, an increase of 307 since 1979. I understand that the police authority envisages that the force will reach full establishment during the 1987-88 financial year.

Since the beginning of 1986, nearly 3,000 home watch schemes have been established in the Greater Manchester police area, an encouraging indication that the public are prepared to take an active role in helping to prevent crime.

Nine community programme crime prevention initiative projects have been established in the Greater Manchester area and a total of 633 places have been authorised. Those projects are undertaking a range of useful crime prevention activities including property marking, the fitting of home security equipment for the elderly and disadvantaged, crime analysis and developing and supporting home watch schemes.

One of the five local crime prevention initiatives has been established in Bolton. The Bolton project is examining the means by which crime and the fear of crime can be reduced by preventive measures tailored specifically to meet local needs and concerns. Developments arising from the project have so far been encouraging, particularly those initiatives relating to property marking and the replacement of gas and electricity pre-payment cash meters.

Crimes Against Children

59. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state, in respect of each year since 1978, the number of crimes known to his Department to have been committed against children.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 18 December 1986 at columns 638-42.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

60. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the terms of reference given by him to the Devon and Cornwall police in connection with the case of six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave on 2 February to a question from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short), at column 476.

Fresh Start

62. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the most recent progress of the fresh start proposals for the prison service.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. and learned Friend to the reply given earlier to a question from the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox).

Amusement Arcades

63. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the admission of under 16-year-olds to amusement arcades.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received a number of letters from Members of Parliament, local authorities, members of the public and others expressing concern at the admission of under 16-year-olds to amusement arcades and forwarding press reports on this subject. In addition, I recently met a delegation from the amusement arcade action group. We keep the law under review and are considering at present whether we should initiate research into the extent to which under-16s use amusement arcades and the implications of this for the young people concerned.

Police Expenditure

64. Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average police expenditure for each crime cleared up (a) in the Metropolitan police area and (b) in England and Wales, in 1978 and in 1986, expressed (i) in money terms and (ii) in constant 1985 prices.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested in not available.

Postal Votes

32. Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the new postal vote application forms published by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received a number of suggestions for ways in which the new absent voting forms could be improved. The forms must contain the nformation required by the Representation of the People Regulations 1986, which were approved by both Houses. We shall consider carefully any further comments on the forms and review them in the light of experience. If my hon. Friend has a particular problem in mind, perhaps he would write to me.

Greater Manchester Police Authority

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received any further requests from the Greater Manchester police authority for an increase in the establishment of that police force.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed in South Yorkshire in 1979 and in 1986; and, of these, how many were crimes of violence against the person, of criminal damage and of thefts from dwellings in both these years.

Mr. Mellor: Numbers of notifiable offences recorded in police force areas in 1979 are published in table 32 of the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" for that year, and for subsequent years in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables", (table S.3.1 of volume 3 of the issue for 1985). Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Blyth Valley (Electoral Arrangements)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to review his decision not to implement the recommendations of the Local Government Boundary Commission in respect of electoral arrangements for Blyth Valley district council in time for the local elections of 7 May to take place on the proposed revised boundaries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. As I explained in reply to a question by the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 17 February (Official Report, c. 558-9), because of the administrative difficulty entailed in considering reports submitted by the commissions for England and Wales and preparing orders, it will not be possible to make an order in respect of Blyth Valley in time for the local elections in May. I am writing to the hon. Member.

Thomas Maguire (Detention)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the representations he received concerning the recent detention of Thomas Maguire at Liverpool.

Mr. Hurd: I received representations from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Garston (Mr. Loyden), from Mrs. Christine Crawley, Member of the European Parliament for Birmingham, East, and from the hon. Member himself. Inquiries about Mr. Maguire's detention were also made by the West Midlands Prevention of Terrorism Act Research and Welfare Association.

Horserace Totalisator Board

Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what authority the Horserace Totalisator Board is participating in satellite information services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the authority of section 15(1)(d) of the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963, which permits the board to take such action as is incidential to, or conducive to the attainment of the purposes of, any of its functions.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of new evidence now available, he will refer to the Court of Appeal the conviction in March 1981 of Colin Wallace for the manslaughter of Jonathan Lewis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I am not aware of any new evidence which would justify my right hon. Friend referring the case to the Court of Appeal. Over the past three years, numerous representations by and on behalf of Mr. Wallace have been considered, but none has provided grounds for such a reference.

Immigration

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were detained for how many hours per day in the annexe of the Harmondsworth detention centre; what exercise and recreation are available to persons detained in the annexe; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Since the Harmondsworth detention centre annexe opened on 10 November 1986, its average nightly occupancy has been 28·4 up to and including the night of 3 March 1987. Facilities include grassed and hard-standing exercise areas, a television/video room and table tennis room. The annexe is a separate self-contained unit run on similar lines to the main Harmondsworth detention centre which is on the same site.

Police (Complaints)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, Official Report, columns 348-9, on civil actions against police officers, he will give details of the nature of the complaints, the names of the complainant and the numbers of officers, and their ranks, involved in each of the 10 cases referred to in his answer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Police (Wrongful Acts)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, Official Report, column 348, he will give details of those 52 cases settled out of court referred to in that answer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information is as follows:

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vehicles were clamped in each of the past five years; where most clamping has occurred; what plans he has to extend the areas in which clamping is carried out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of vehicles clamped by the Metropolitan police since operations began on 15 May 1983 is as follows:

	Number
1983[1]	26,808
1984	44,101
1985	34,810
1986	26,028
1987[2]	14,665

[1] From 15 May.
[2] To 15 February.

The designation of areas in which wheelclamps may be used is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport. Since wheelclamping operations began they have been conducted in the area originally designated (parts of the London boroughs of Camden, Kensington and Chelsea, and Westminster). The designated area was extended by the Immobilisation of Vehicles Illegally Parked (London Boroughs of Camden, Kensington and Chelsea, and Westminster and the City of London) Order 1986 (S.I. 1225) and from 2 March this year the Metropolitan police began progressively to extend their area of wheelclamping operations with the intention of covering the whole of the extended designated area by the end of the year. The City of London police commenced wheelclamping operations on 20 October 1986 and had clamped 232 vehicles by 31 December. A further 270 vehicles had been clamped up to 13 February 1987.

Television Licences

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of the television licence for the years 1974, 1979 and 1987 in terms of 1985 prices.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is as follows:

	Television licence fees as at 31 March		Television licence fees at 1985 prices[1]

Nazi War Criminals

Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his meeting on 2 March with the Simon Wiesenthal's organisation regarding the presence in the United Kingdom of alleged Nazi war criminals; and what action he proposes to take in the light of his meeting.

Mr. Hurd: I had a valuable meeting with representatives of the Simon Wiesenthal centre who explained the background to their recent submission of the names of 17 alleged war criminals and invited us to establish special machinery to investigate these allegations. I explained that our courts have no jurisdiction over the alleged offences and that we have no extradition arrangement with the Soviet Union, where the alleged offences took place. I urged the centre to provide information to substantiate their allegations, as the case for any change in the law would depend on the weight of evidence brought forward. Meanwhile we are continuing our inquiries into the documentary material cited by the centre; the whereabouts of those named by the centre; and the statements which they made following their entry into the country and when applying for British citizenship.

Departmental Computers

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department to which firms his Department has awarded contracts for computer hardware for each year since 1984; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Hurd [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987, column 253]: The total number of contracts completed in 1985-86 was 286. Three hundred and seventy six contracts have been placed in 1986-87 to date. Orders in excess of £10,000 have been placed with the following companies:

AIT Corporation
Apricot
Artificial Intelligence
Bell Technical Services
Brainstorm Computers
British Olivetti
British Telecom
Burroughs (now known as "Unisys")
Cambridge Instruments
Camtech
Concurrent Computer Corporation
Cyfas Systems
Dacoll

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department has spent on (a) computer hardware and (b) computer software for each year since 1984; and what is the projected expenditure for 1987.

Mr. Hurd [pursuant to his reply, 25 February 1987, c. 253]: Home Office expenditure on computer hardware and software since 1984 by calendar year has been as follows:

	1985-86 (outturn) £ million	1986-87[1] (outturn) £ million
Hardware	2·7	3·6
Software	0·4	0·3
TOTAL	3·1	[illegible]

[1] Estimate.

The breakdown between hardware and software expenditure is approximate since in some cases expenditure on software is not recorded separately. The hardware figures include some projects where hardware and software has been bought as a complete system and some maintenance expenditure where maintenance service has been purchased as part of the initial procurement.

Planned expenditure for 1987-88 on hardware and software is in total just over £8 million.

WALES

Private Medical Care

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by district health authority and by local authority (a) the number of people placed by them in privately run drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care units on a day care basis, (b) the number of people placed by them in drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care centres as a residential patient and (c) the average length of stay for patients placed in residential care in drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care units for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by district health authority and by local health authority (a) the number of people placed by them in private psychiatric units on a day care basis, (b) the number of people placed by them in private psychiatric units on a residential basis and (c) the average length of stay for each patient placed in private psychiatric units for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Information on the number of people placed in private psychiatric units on a day care basis and lengths of stay in any category is not available centrally.

Since 1979, health authorities in Wales have placed two patients in private psychiatric units on a residential basis.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by district health authority the amount spent on placing people in (a) private psychiatric units and (b) private drug/alcohol abuse and assessment units for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The annual accounts of health authorities show their expenditure on all contractual arrangements for patient care in total only. The detailed information requested is not collected centrally.

A494 (Queensferry)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate is available to him of the cost of constructing the outer link, the local link or adding an extra lane in each direction on the present A494 where it crosses the river Dee at Queensferry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: At present no firm estimate is available of the cost of adding an extra lane in each direction to the A494 where it crosses the Dee. The construction of outer and local links would be for Clwyd county council, as local highway authority, to consider.

PRIME MINISTER

Ethnic Monitoring

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Prime Minister if she will list the numbers of entrants to her office from the ethnic minorities in the years 1985-86 and 1986-87; if she will also list the monitoring procedures used to ascertain the percentage of the work force represented by ethnic minorities and their patterns of promotion; and what are her methods of recruitment of minorities into the Civil Service.

The Prime Minister: The ethnic origins of new entrants to the Civil Service have been surveyed since October 1985. The latest available information for the period up to September 1986 for entrants to the Cabinet Office, which includes my office as well as those of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and my right hon. Friend the Lord Privy Seal, is as follows:

	Number
Total new entrants to Cabinet Office in period 1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986	180
Ethnic origins
White	100
Black/Asian	10
Not stated	70

(Numbers rounded to the nearest five to preserve confidentiality)

A phased programme of departmental surveys of the ethnic origin of non-industrial civil servants by means of voluntary self-classification is being conducted. The majority of non-industrial staff in the Cabinet Office have been included in the regionally phased programme of ethnic surveys covering the areas of London, the south east and East Anglia. Consideration is being given to ways of using the data on the ethnic origin of staff in post to monitor promotion.

All Departmental recruitment is conducted on the basis of fair and open competition and selection is on merit. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Privy Council Office, on 20 February 1987 Official Report, c. 881-82 reporting the arrangements being made to encourage people from the ethnic minorities to apply to the Civil Service.

Cable and Wireless

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Prime Minister what response Her Majesty's Government have received to their representations to the Japanese Government seeking a full and fair opportunity for Cable and Wireless to participate in a consortium to operate the second international telecommunications service in Japan; what information she has about the progress of Cable and Wireless in this matter; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government have been following closely the bid by Cable and Wireless to be involved through the International Digital Communications Planning Inc. (IDC) consortium, in the provision of alternative international telecommunications facilities in Japan and has made representations on behalf of Cable and Wireless.

I understand that discussions are still in progress in Japan and that no final decision has been taken. I believe that this is an opportunity both for Japan to show that its market is becoming more open and to create an outstanding example of Anglo-Japanese industrial co-operation in high technology.

Rural Enterprise and Development

Mr. Colvin asked the Prime Minister when Her Majesty's Government intend to publish the comprehensive set of documents on agriculture and rural enterprise and development.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Scotland will be publishing on Tuesday a series of documents entitled "Farming and Rural Enterprise". These will explain the Government's policies for farming and for rural enterprise and development as well as providing information on a wide range of assistance available for businesses in rural areas.

Copies of the folder of documents will be available on Tuesday from the Vote Office.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Correspondence

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will arrange for a reply to be sent to the hon. Member for Falmouth and Camborne in response to a letter passed to his hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) on 3 December 1986, from Mr. F. H. McWilliams, of 17 South park, Redruth, Cornwall.

Mrs Rumbold: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

Hearing Damage

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research is being sponsored through the various research bodies into possible damage to the hearing of young people caused by excessive noise from loudspeakers and earphones.

Mr. Walden: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Student Grants

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will amend the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations to ensure that in future all part-time university students receive grants from their local education authorities for their fees on the same basis as full-time students; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The possibility of financial assistance for part-time students pursuing degree studies will be considered as part of the student support review.

Local Education Authority Provision

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what reports made by district inspectors of Her Majesty's Inspectorate contain assessments of the appropriateness of provision by each local education authority; whether such reports contain any breakdown or analysis of provision; if he will place copies of all such reports for the last year in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Each year, my right hon. Friend publishes a report by Her Majesty's Inspectorate on the effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England. The reports are based on evidence from Her Majesty's inspectors' routine and centrally programmed visits to schools and colleges in the previous autumn, together with returns made by district inspectors for each of the 97 local education authorities in England, except for the Isles of Scilly. The district inspector returns consist of statistical and financial information provided by each LEA about overall levels of expenditure and the distribution of resources in the authority; the district inspector's broad assessment of the appropriateness of that provision in each case; and of the impact of any changes. The information collected, while giving some indication of current issues and trends, and providing a reasonable picture of the general position in schools and further and higher education, does not allow judgments to be made about the quality of education in individual LEAs. Statistics for the district inspectors' returns are requested from, and provided by, LEAs in confidence. My right hon. Friend does not propose to place copies in the Library.

Expenditure (Eligibility for Grants)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 3 March concerning expenditure eligible for grants, what grants for 1987-88 have been approved on such a cash-limited basis; what approximate proportion of such approved grant expenditure is likely to be spent on teachers' pay and allowances; what account has been taken of proposed increases in teachers' pay; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Secretary of State has informed local education authorities that he will pay grant of up to £114 million on expenditure of up to £200 million within the new LEA training grants scheme; and grant of up to £64 million on expenditure of up to £92 million within the education support grant programme. The proportions of expenditure estimated to consist of teachers' pay are 70 per cent. for LEA training grant, and 20 per cent. for ESG. The limits on this expenditure are cash figures, within which teacher pay increases will have to be accommodated.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 20 February, Official Report, column 838, concerning the formula used in determining capital allocations; what considerations were material in his not agreeing to place copies of the current formula in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The reply of 20 February, Official Report, column 838 explained the basis of the formula in words rather than algebraically, in the interests of general intelligibility. A copy of the formula expressed in algebraic terms has now been placed in the Library.

Dental Schools

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about support for dental schools in the United Kingdom; if he will list those that have been visited by the University Grants Committee during the past six months; what resources each dental school has been allocated as a result of the University Grants Committee's recommendations; how many students are currently in each; and how much additional capital expenditure is to be made available for each school.

Mr. Walden: Provision for dental schools in Great Britain is not separately identified in the University Grants Committee's recurrent grant allocations for their parent universities. The latest allocations were issued on 10 February 1987, a copy is in the Library. No dental school has been visited by the University Grants Committee itself during the past six months, but three in London — United Medical and Dental Schools, King's College Dental School and University College Dental School — have been visited by the committee's dental review working party set up to consider the future organisation of national provision for dental education, and to advise on rationalisation.

The Department does not hold information on total student numbers in the form requested. The full-time equivalent student load in clinical dentistry for each university in Great Britain with a dental school in 1984-85 was as follows:

	Undergraduate	Postgraduate
Birmingham	254	6
Bristol	149	4
Leeds	184	11
Liverpool	214	8
London	914	219
Manchester	205	23
Newcastle	263	2
Sheffield	145	6
Wales	153	18
Dundee	124	—
Edinburgh	138	4
Aberdeen	221	13

The following new capital projects in dental schools have been approved by the University Grants Committee:

	£ million
Edinburgh Academic accommodation in new hospital	0·27
Sheffield Extension to dental school	2·07

The latter project is subject to the outcome of the dental review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is prepared to accept a further offtake of Vietnamese refugees in the current year for resettlement in the United Kingdom; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: We hope to make an announcement shortly.

Magistrates' Courts

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on access to magistrates' courts for disabled Justices of the Peace.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not held centrally at present. Arrangements are in hand to collect information from magistrates' courts which will include the number of registered disabled magistrates; the nature of their disabilities; details of any difficulties they may face in gaining access to court buildings and moving within them; and whether any special provisions have been made to make access and movement easier. It is planned to have this information compiled by the end of June this year.

Summer Time

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has as to what economic benefits will accrue to the United Kingdom if the Council of Ministers adopts European Economic Community Commission proposals for harmonising the dates of summer time.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The present directive does not expire until 31 December 1988. The Commission has yet to put forward any proposals for harmonising the dates for the end of summer time beyond this.

Police (Sussex)

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement regarding police manpower levels for West and East Sussex, including Gatwick airport.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend is considering applications from the Sussex police authority for increases in the authorised establishment of the force, and hopes to announce the outcome shortly.

Fire Safety

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent consultations he has had with the Fire Brigades Union about fire safety of upholstered furniture.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council, on which the Fire Brigade Union is represented, discussed the fire safety of upholstered furniture most recently at its meeting on 25 November 1986, chaired by my noble Friend the Earl of Caithness. My noble Friend also corresponded with the Fire Brigades Union earlier this year about representation on a working party on the flammability of upholstered furniture set up by my hon. and learned Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Highbury Magistrates' Court (Women Prisoners)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners were accommodated in the cells at Highbury magistrates' court on the nights of 3 and 4 March.

Mr. Mellor: I am advised by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the number of female prisoners held in the cells at Highbury corner magistrates' court was nil on the night of 3-4 March and 18 on that of 4-5 March.

Police Manpower (Dorset)

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to increase police manpower in Dorset; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is the responsibility of the Dorset police authority to determine the authorised establishment of the force, subject to my right hon. Friend's approval. Sixty-two additional police posts have been approved for the force since May 1979, bringing the authorised establishment up to 1,226. We are now considering an application for a further increase and hope to announce the outcome shortly.

Immigration

Mr. Raison asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the immigration status on arrival in the United Kingdom of all those (a) granted refugee status or asylum and (b) refused it over the latest available 12-month period.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Rape

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many men have been prosecuted for rape in each of the last five years in England; how many men have been convicted in each of these years; of these, how many have not been sent to prison; and how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of less than three years, between three and five years, between five and 10 years and over 10 years respectively; and what orders were made in respect of those convicted but not sent to prison;

(2) how many men have been prosecuted for rape in each of the last five years in Wales ; how many men have been convicted in each of these years; of these, how many have not been sent to prison; and how many have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment of less than three years, between three and five years, between five and 10 years and over 10 years respectively; and what orders were made in respect of those convicted but not sent to prison.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 23 February 1987, c. 35]: The information requested for 1985 which may be incomplete is given in the tables. Comparable data for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on offences of rape in England and Wales as a whole is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, supplementary tables, volumes 1 and 2"—in tables S1.1(A), S2.1(A), S2.3, S2.4 and S2.5, under offence classification 19. The figures for rape include aiding and abetting and attempted rape and some offences not under section 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956.

ENERGY

Energy Efficiency Year

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much was spent by his Department on energy saving promotion during Energy Efficiency Year.

Mr. David Hunt: Energy Efficiency Year in 1986 marked an important stage in the continuing campaign of the energy efficiency office. Its aim was further to concentrate efforts in attaining the £7 billion energy savings available to the nation as a whole and to intensify the effect of all the initiatives undertaken.

A major target was to create a campaign that would be picked up and reinforced by the promotional efforts of the energy supply and energy efficiency industries. In this it was an outstanding success.

1986 covered two financial years. Estimated figures for the four quarters give a total of £11·8 million spent on energy efficiency advertising and other informational, promotional and marketing activity by my Department.

Electricity Connections

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the number of occupied dwellings in each parliamentary constituency in England, Scotland and Wales not connected to the public electricity supply.

Mr. Goodlad: I regret that these numbers are not available.

National Grid

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Energy what estimate he makes of the percentage of power to the national grid to be provided through the cross-Channel link for 1987.

Mr. Goodlad: My Department does not make such estimates.

EMPLOYMENT

Adult Training Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide details of the numbers in the adult training scheme and a breakdown of the type, duration and cost per place of the training in which they are engaged.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

St. Helens, North

Mr. John Evans asked the Paymaster General if he will give (a) the number of people in receipt of unemployment benefits in St. Helens, North, (b) the number of people who have been unemployed for over 12 months in St. Helens, North and (c) the number of people in each of the employment and training schemes in the St. Helens, North constituency, at the latest available date.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On 8 January 1987 the number of unemployed claimants in the St. Helens, North parliamentary constituency was 6,792, of whom 3,282 had been unemployed for more than 12 months.

It is not possible to give precise numbers of people in the employment, training and enterprise measures run by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission in the St. Helens, North constituency because of the various bases on which local information is collected. The numbers of people participating in these measures in the St. Helens area at the latest available date were given in a reply to the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 26 February 1987 at column 337.

TVEI (Grants)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General (1) what technical and vocational education initiative extension grants have been approved for each local education authority; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what technical and vocational education initiative grants have been made to each local education authority in 1986-87; when the pilot scheme started in each authority; whether in each case he has received an evaluation report of the pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Male Unemployment

Ms Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide the best available evidence of the growth in part-time male unemployment from 1979 to 1983 and 1983 to 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The information requested is not available. People with part-time jobs are not separately identified in the monthly unemployment count.

THE ARTS

Royal Opera House

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Minister for the Arts if, pursuant to his reply of 16 February, Official Report column 653, he will place a copy of the Royal Opera House's development land trust deed 1981 and the memorandum of agreement 1985 in the Library.

Mr. Luce: I am happy to do so today, with the assent of the Royal Opera House and the Arts Council.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Data Network

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what financial, technological and service improvements attachment of the Customs and Excise computer systems to the Government data network will bring to his Department.

Mr. Brooke: The economies of scale in the development, implementation and running of a GDN are expected to save Customs money, compared with the cost of using public services or developing a network of its own. If proceeded with, the network would enable Customs data processing to be distributed between several sites. It would simplify the handling of data collected from traders and make it more available to Customs and Excise officials to use in their work.

Privatisation

Mr. Wainwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide information showing, for each stock market flotation since 1979 of former publicly owned bodies (a) the date of flotation, (b) the number of shares offered for sale, (c) the offer price per share, giving, where appropriate, details of partly paid prices, (d) the number of shares allocated to applicants investing an initial instalment of (i) £1,000 and (ii) £5,000, (e) the opening stock market price per share for sales, (f) the total cost of the publicity campaign, (g) the total amount of fees paid, (h) administrative costs borne by the Exchequer, (i) an estimate of revenue forgone as a result of any special dealing arrangements, (j) in the case of British Gas and British Telecom an estimate of the total value of special customer bill reductions for shareholders, (k) an estimate of the total value of bonus share arrangements and (l) details of any Exchequer expenditure not already shown.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested at (a), (c), (d) and (g) is given in the table. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on 2 March (Official Report, column 522) for the information requested at (b) and (e). For information about pre-sale publicity costs, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 7 November (Official Report, column 628), the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, West (Mr. Maples) on 12 December (Official Report, column 244) and that given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Brandon-Bravo) on 18 February (Official Report, column 628).

No separate records of the administrative costs to the Exchequer of each privatisation are available: these are borne within the budgets of the relevant Government Department. No revenue was forgone as a result of special dealing arrangements for privatisation shares. The current estimated total value of special customer bill reductions for shareholders is £99 million for British Gas and £19·5 million for British Telecom. Bonus share arrangements were available on four privatisations, and the value of the shares at the offer price retained to meet this commitment was £107 million for British Telecom, £144 million for British Gas and £22 million for British Airways; final figures will depend on the number of eligible shareholders at the end of the qualifying periods. The value of Britoil bonus shares distributed in 1986 was £3 million.

Premium Bonds

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been paid premium bond prizes incorrectly; and how many people have not received prizes who should have, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not possible to say how many people have been paid premium bond prizes incorrectly, since such errors will generally come to light only when revealed by a third party. Any such cases as arise are very few in number and confined to very small prizes. Errors might arise when a bond holder changed address or died without the bonds and stock office being informed. Mistakes are always corrected when discovered. Details of unclaimed prizes are set out in the answer given to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 17 February 1987 at columns 424-25.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new people have invested in personal equity plans in each week since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Latest available figures indicate that during January more than 15,000 people per week invested in personal equity plans.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1986, Official Report, column 742 on the consultation document "VAT Input Tax: Origin and Scope of the Right to Deduct", if he will set out the main items and/or categories given to make up the estimate of £300 million tax recovered in 1987-88.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that I can add little to the answer that I gave the hon. Member on 3 February at column 537: it is not possible to make any reliable apportionment of additional revenue yield between the main categories in schedule 6 of the Value Added Tax Act 1983 other than to say that groups 1, 2 and 5 (land, insurance and finance) are likely to be those most affected. An estimate of the further subdivision of this apportionment, to identify the revenue yield arising from the individual items which go to make up the various groups, would be even less reliable.

SCOTLAND

Orkney and Shetland (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to visit Orkney or Shetland in the next six months.

Mr. Rifkind: I am currently considering the possibility of visiting Orkney and Shetland in the near future.

Ferry Service (Orkney)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has completed his study of proposals for the provision of a new ferry service for the north isles of Orkney; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Proposals for development of the ferry services in the outer north isles of Orkney are still under consideration, but a decision on the proposals will be reached shortly.

Housing

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the figures to be available as to how many homes were completed for local authorities and housing associations in Scotland in the year 1986.

Mr. Ancram: A provisional figure for the numbers of new dwellings completed during 1986 by each agency should be available by the end of March.

Dee Corporation

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the employment implications for Scotland of the recent reorganisations announced by the Dee Corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Fish Quotas

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Scotland when, and for what reason, haddock quotas for non-producers' organisations vessels in the 40 to 60 ft class were cut from 30 tonnes per month to 45 tonnes over two months; what is the monthly quota for producers' organisations vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The management arrangements for this year's North sea haddock fishery were reviewed by fisheries departments at meetings with industry representatives on 9 January and 20 February.

At the January meeting it was agreed that, for fishing vessels not in membership of producers' organisations operating sectoral quotas, a flat-rate vessel quota should apply for the month of February. This was subsequently set at 30 tonnes.

At the February meeting, fisheries departments accepted a proposal by the industry representatives that for March and April a system of differential quota limits should be introduced, based on vessel length categories and notional crew numbers. These revised arrangements have resulted in quota limits for the two-month period ranging from 30 tonnes for the smallest vessels to 90 tonnes for the largest.

It is for the producers' organisations to determine the quotas applicable to their members' vessels.

The objectives of the fisheries departments' management arrangements are to achieve the overall reduction required in this year's North sea haddock catch, compared with 1986, to take account of the decrease in the total allowable catch, and to secure a 12 months haddock fishery for the non-sectoral vessels.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Residual Current Circuit Breakers

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to make the use of residual current circuit breakers mandatory in England and Wales.

Mr. Howard: I have no plans at present to make use of residual circuit breakers mandatory in England and Wales.

The wiring rules for buildings prepared by the Institution of Electrical Engineers now include a provision for these devices to be fitted in circumstances where sockets are primarily used for DIY tools and garden equipment. The installation industry follow these rules very widely throughout the United Kingdom.

A working group has been set up for the promotion of both the portable and single socket type of residual current devices and user awareness is being promoted by organisations such as the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents and consumer groups.

Amateur Radio Transmitter (Interference)

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether, in the light of the further reports of continued interference to the radio, television and telephone reception of the residents of Tudor Close, Eastcote, Middlesex, from a nearby amateur radio transmitter, he will use his powers to withdraw the licence of this transmitter; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's latest assessment of the level of interference to television, radio and telephone reception in Tudor Close, Eastcote, Middlesex from a local amateur transmitter about which he has received complaints;

(3) whether, in the light of the alleged violations reported to him of the licence variation conditions of the amateur radio transmitter in the neighbourhood of Tudor Close, Eastcote, Middlesex, he will now use his powers to close down this transmitter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: Further to my reply of 27 October (Official Report, column 55), I am advised that regrettably complaints of interference have since been received at a time when the amateur's station was closed down. In the light of the information before us the amateur has been advised that consideration is being given to revoking his licence. We are now awaiting representations from the amateur's legal adviser. I will write to my hon. Friend when a decision has been taken.

Fireworks

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the firework injury statistics for 1986.

Mr. Howard: According to reports from hospitals in England, Wales and Scotland, 846 people required treatment for injuries caused by fireworks during a four-week period in October and November 1986. The figures for 1986 and the preceding five years are as follows:

Financial Services Act

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to extend from 28 February the deadline for comments by small businesses on the Securities and Investments Board rules governing FIMBRA under the Financial Services Act which were published on 12 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No. The proposed rules submitted to my right hon. Friend on 10 February by the Securities and Investments Board reflected the results of consultation on earlier drafts published by the board and therefore I do not believe that it is necessary to extend the deadline for comments. All comments made before the deadline to the Department about the proposed rules will be fully considered in deciding whether to recommend to Parliament the transfer to the board of powers under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Copyright (South Korea)

Mr. Absc asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has made to the Government of South Korea for the retrospective protection to be given to United States copyright work by South Korea to be extended to United Kingdom works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I most recently emphasised the need for the United Kingdom to receive equality of treatment with the United States of America on intellectual property rights when I met the Korean Vice-Minister for Trade and Industry last October; my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Information Technology will take up this issue during his forthcoming visit to Korea.

The EC is also maintaining pressure on the Korean Government to apply retrospective protection multilaterally without discrimination in favour of the United States of America.

Rover Group

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on financial support for the restructuring of Rover Group's commercial vehicles business.

Mr. Channon: I told the House on 19 February Official Report column 1059-60 that the Government intended to provide up to £750 million to write off the accumulated debts from Leyland Bus and Leyland Trucks left in Rover Group and the restructuring costs resulting from their sale. These costs can now be assessed with greater precision and are calculated to be £680 million. My right hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury is accordingly today laying before the House a Supplementary Estimate (class V, Vote 11-Vehicle Industry) for that amount.

Shipbuilding

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the projected number of jobs in the shipbuilding industry from 1987 to 1990.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1987, column 654]: In January this year, employment in merchant shipbuilding in Great Britain was some 9,200. There is no reliable basis on which to forecast the position in future years.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Discography of the Neck

Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the hospitals in England able to carry out discography of the neck.

Mrs. Currie: This information is not held centrally. I understand, however, that this facility is available at both the Leicester royal infirmary and Leicester general hospitals.

Free Milk and Vitamins

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of awards of free milk and vitamins which were made in 1985 to (a) pregnant women, (b) nursing mothers and (c) children under school age, showing for each group whether the grounds for the award were in receipt of supplementary benefit, family income supplement or low income; and if he will publish his estimate of the numbers of awards expected to be made to each group after changes in the Social Security Act to be introduced in April 1988.

Mr. Major: The table gives the information requested for pregnant women and for children under school age in Great Britain at December 1984, the latest date for which figures are available.

Thousands

	Supplementary benefit	Low incomes	FIS
Pregnant women	40	10	10
Children under school age	720	70	130
Total	760	80	140

Rounded to nearest 10,000.

From April 1988, the low income scheme for welfare foods will end. Families receiving family credit, expected to be significantly higher than those receiving FIS, will not be entitled to free milk but the children's rates will be set at a higher level to give extra cash help instead. We do not expect significant variation in the numbers in these categories who will become entitled to income support.

Nursing mothers are entitled to vitamins and their babies are entitled to free milk; the latter are included in the figure given in the above table for "children under school age". We estimate that about 3,000 nursing mothers, other than those whose vitamin tokens are issued when they are pregnant and which carry on after the baby is born, receive their vitamins at present. After April 1988, vitamins will be available free through health clinics.

Residential Homes

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to change the amounts of capital disregarded when elderly people enter (a) private residential homes, assisted by his Department's board and lodging payments or otherwise and (b) residential homes owned by local authorities.

Mr. Major: The present rules are that residents in private and voluntary homes can claim supplementary benefit if their capital assets are not more than £3,000. When income support is introduced in 1988 new rules will apply. The capital cut-off point will increase from £3,000 to £6,000 but with a tariff income assumed of £1 for every band of £250 between £3,000 to £6,000. The joint central and local government working party on supplementary benefit and residential care, which is considering means of harmonising financial support for people in residential care homes, is also considering the future arrangements for financial assessement. Its report is expected at Easter.

Births

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many births there were in Sheffield, Heeley, in the last year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: During 1985 there were 237 live births to mothers living in the Heeley ward of the Sheffield metropolitan district.

Private Medical Care

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by district health authority and by local authority (a) the number of people placed by them in private psychiatric units on a day care basis, (b) the number of people placed by them in private psychiatric units as residential patients and (c) the average length of stay for each patient placed in residential care in private psychiatric units for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by district health authority and by local health authority (a) the number of people placed by them in privately run drug/alcohol abuse assessement and care units on a day care basis, (b) the number of people placed by them in private drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care units as residential patients and (c) the average length of stay for each patient placed in residential care in drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care units for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry that I cannot give the hon. Member the information that he seeks. It is not held centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by district health authority and by local health authority the amount spent on placing people in (a) private psychiatric units and (b) private drug/alcohol abuse assessment and care units for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list (a) the private psychiatric units and (b) the private drug/alcohol assessment and care units used by district health authorities and local authorities for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry that I cannot give the hon. Member the information that he seeks in precisely the form requested. The information available centrally is given in the table.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what additional funds he expects to be allocated to the Newham district health authority in respect of his programme for cancer screening.

Mrs. Currie: Funds will be provided for a national breast cancer screening service to be established in England over the next three years on the basis of centres each serving a population of approximately half a million. It is for regional health authorities to decide in which districts the centres should be located and how the special allocations provided to establish them should be deployed. In 1987-88 each region will receive an allocation of about one third of a million pounds to cover the capital and revenue costs of establishing its first centre. Similar provision will be made for the remaining centres in the following two years.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. John Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of people in receipt of supplementary benefits in St. Helens, North at the latest available date.

Mr. Lyell: St. Helens, North constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at St. Helens and Warrington but their boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency. The number of people receiving supplementary benefit from those offices on 10 February 1987—the latest available figure—was 38,454.

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Nuclear Installations (Cancer)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what immediate action he intends to take following the publication of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report on incidents of leukaemia, lymphatic cancer and other cancers in areas around nuclear establishments; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The lengthy and detailed report published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys provides a large volume of statistics which require careful interpretation. The report's authors indicate that the number of relatively high results is similar for the areas of interest and for their controls. The authors also conclude that certain findings may warrant further consideration, including checks on the validity of the results and consideration of the need for field studies. The report is being referred to the independent committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment, which will in due course advise on the report's findings and the need for further investigations.

AIDS

Mr. Cormack asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the risks of contracting AIDS from hairdressing implements; and what guidance has been given to hairdressers on these matters.

Mr. Newton: We are not aware of any case in which HIV infection has been transmitted through hairdressing implements. However, high standards of hygiene are needed wherever there is a possibility, however remote, that sharp instruments such as razors or scissors could accidentally draw blood from one person and transfer it and innoculate it into another person. The Department and the public health laboratory service are preparing guidance for hairdressers on this.

Personal Pensions

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) when he expects to be able to publish details of the charges that institutions can make when providing personal pensions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he expects to be able to publish details of the information which must be provided to employees interested in taking a personal pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We shall make an announcement as soon as possible.

Community Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide full details of how he arrived at the estimate that allowing participants on the community programme to claim unemployment benefit would cost £2 million per week.

Mr. Major: It is impossible to be precise about the benefit cost of allowing people working part time in the community programme to receive unemployment benefit for the days on which they do not work and in my statement on 3 March I referred to expenditure of "around £2 million a week". The actual cost would depend upon the numbers of part timers who had underlying title to UB, had exhausted entitlement, were able to requalify by virtue of the CP work, would in fact be available for work on the days in question and indeed on whether people would choose to claim for these days, bearing in mind that in most cases part-time earnings would be considerably higher than benefit entitlement before joining the scheme. Information is not available on many of these points. £2 million is an approximate mid-point between best and worst assumptions.

Board and Lodging Regulations

Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he proposes to take following the judgment of the Court of Appeal, announced on 5 March, in respect of board and lodging regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Court of Appeal gave judgment in three cases affecting supplementary benefit claimants in board and lodging, including homes.

The court has dismissed the two appeals brought against the Secretary of State by the London borough of Camden and an individual claimant respectively. In those cases, the court unanimously upheld the validity of the regulations which governed payments of supplementary benefit to people in residential care and nursing homes during the period from April 1985 to July 1986, and to ordinary boarders during the period from November 1985 to July 1986.

In the third case, the Secretary of State himself was the appellant. The court has confirmed that in respect of the period December 1984 to April 1985 decisions on amounts of benefit to be paid should have been made solely by the independent statutory adjudication authorities. The limits promulgated by the Secretary of State had been made under powers which were insufficient for the purpose.

We accept the judgment. Action will be taken to identify cases affected by the judgment and arrears of benefit, where appropriate, including any increase in transitional protection dating from April 1985, will be paid.

Injuries (Animal Attacks)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 26 November, Official Report, column 295, whether he will give a breakdown of the figures provided in tables (1) and (2) by the type of animal which inflicted the injuries on the people concerned; and if he will also give the figures as to the total injuries caused to people by each category of animal; and what advice his Department gives on attacks by animals.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 4 March 1987, c. 623-4]: Exact figures on injuries by specific animal or category of animal are not available. However, table 1 shows for the three countries combined an estimation of the number of hospitals discharges and deaths resulting from injury caused by those categories of animals which may be identified separately. The number of accidental deaths caused by specified animals is shown in table 2.

ENVIRONMENT

Homeless Families

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of Friday 16 January, Official Report, column 331, what is his estimate of the comparative public sector costs of housing homeless families who are in receipt of supplementary benefit by (a) providing them with temporary accommodation under the 1988 housing corporation programme involving mixed public and private sector funding, (b) providing them with dwellings acquired from the private sector and improved for letting under secure tenancies and (c) providing them with bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Tracey: The estimated public sector costs in the first year of providing accommodation of the kinds specified, on various assumptions and on as comparable a basis as possible, are shown in table 1. The table provides separate information for both London and non-metropolitan districts because mixed funding projects are expected in practice to be heavily concentrated on the London area. The figures are based on the latest statistics available and up-rated to 1987-88.

	London	Non-metropolitan districts
Housing corporation mixed funding[1]	7,600	4,300
Local authority acquisition[1]	8,500	4,800
Bed and Breakfast[2]	12,400	6,100

[1] Includes interest on capital, management and maintenance, and an allowance for furnishing. Any single payments made in respect of furnishing to households in receipt of supplementary benefit would not be additional. Any housing benefit paid to householders would also not be additional. The figures should be reduced to the extent that some households are paying rent from their own resources.

[2] Based on average gross expenditure per household year as reported by authorities to the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. The comparable net figures (net of board and lodging payments made to authorities by or on behalf of households in receipt of supplementary benefit and net of any reasonable charges required by authorities of other households) would be £9,500 for London and £4,000 for non-metropolitan districts.

The social security benefits that will be applicable to households of various composition from 6 April 1987 are shown in table 2.

Table 2

Social security benefits available to households of various composition in various kinds of accommodation

	Rented accommodation	Bed and breakfast
Single person	£30·40 (£38·65 if on long-term rate) plus eligible amount of actual rent and rates.	Amount of actual charge (plus an allowance for those meals which are not included in the charge) up to limit varying from £45 to £70 depending on location, plus personal expenses allowance of £10 (£11·15 if on long-term rate.)
Couple without children	£49·35 (£61·85 if on long-term rate) plus eligible amount of actual rent and rates.	As for a single person for each partner.
Single parent with one dependent child	£38·65 plus eligible amount of actual rent and rates and age-related allowance for each child:	As for a single person, plus (a) age-related, extension to limit, and (b) personal expenses allowance, for each child:
age under 11	£10·40.	(a) £15·60; (b) £3·35.
age 11 or more	£15·60—£24·35.	(a) adult single rate; (b) £5·15—£10.
Couple with two dependent children	As for a childless couple, plus age-related allowances for each child as above	Twice the amount for a single person with one dependent child.

It should be noted that the public expenditure implications of transferring homeless households from one kind of accommodation to another would depend inter alia on the level of social security benefits applying to them and to any replacement households in both their previous and their new accommodation. As indicated in my hon. Friend's reply of 16 January, a distinction also needs to be made between permanent and temporary accommodation. Where capital works are involved there would be an increase in public expenditure prior to transfer.

Local Government Employees

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give figures for the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 for the average overall cost of a local government employee; and if he will break down the average cost into pay, national insurance, superannuation, and other costs, such as office space, heating, lighting, car allowance, travel allowance, etc.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health on Tuesday 3 March 1987.

Basildon New Town

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the income other than rent income, which will be available to the Basildon district council following transfer of current housing assets of the Commission for New Towns in Basildon to the council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: No decision has been taken to transfer any Commission for the New Towns housing at Basildon to the district council. If, following consultation with the tenants and others, the council were to take over some or all of the new town housing, under the transfer scheme procedure provided for in part III of the New Towns Act 1981, it would receive, in addition to the rent income, an increased level of housing subsidy. The exact amount of the increase would have to be settled in discussion with the council before any decision was taken to direct the preparation of a transfer scheme.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the Commission for New Towns housing assets in Basildon.

Mr. John Patten: No decision has been taken about the future ownership of the new town housing at Basildon, and none will be made until tenants and others have been consulted. I want there to be a choice between transfer to the council and disposal of the houses to alternative landlords.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the rent income per year from the houses and flats owned by the Commission for New Towns in Basildon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The estimated rent income due to the Commission for the new Towns in 1986-87 in respect of the houses and flats which it owns in Basildon is £15,371,000. This disregards voids arrears and rent rebates.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what number of dwellings are currently owned by the Commission for New Towns in Basildon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The total number of dwellings for rent owned by the Commission for the New Towns in Basildon was 14,907 on 31 December 1986, the latest date for which figures are available.

Privately Owned Flats

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government intend to introduce the Bill to extend the rights of people living in privately owned flats in England and Wales announced in Her Majesty's Gracious Speech.

Mr. Tracey: The Landlord and Tenant (No. 2) Bill was introduced on 5 March 1987.

"Faith in the City"

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he has taken in the light of the report "Faith in the City" on matters which are the responsibility of his Department subsequent to the action referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey dated 9 December 1986 at c.95.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1987]: I had a useful meeting on 10 December 1986 with the bishop of Willesden and other members of the group which is following up the work of the archbishop's commission on urban priority areas. Among other things we discussed the importance of making it easier for people to find rented accommodation. Following the meeting, I provided the group with details of the assured tenancies scheme and amended rules on shorthold and fair rent tenancies, together with information about the new programme run by the Housing Corporation designed to use private money supplemented by 30 per cent. Government grant to provide more rented accommodation, which should provide about £15 million worth of schemes for shared housing for young people moving jobs in London and the south.

My officials are also continuing to discuss with members of the follow-up group questions relating to the methodology of identifying urban areas of need.

Mobile Homes (Insulation)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to enable owners of mobile homes to qualify for insulation grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1987]: Mobile homes can qualify for a grant under the homes insulation scheme 1984 provided that they are dwellings for the purposes of part XV of the Housing Act 1985, they have a roof space, and meet all the other requirements of the scheme.

TRANSPORT

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many acres will be needed to build the proposed western bypass around Newbury.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Detailed land requirements will not be known until the compulsory purchase stage. Our current estimate is that approximately 260 acres for construction of the proposed bypass and approximately 60 acres for landscaping purposes would be needed.

M20 Motorway

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to publish the inspector's report and announce his decision following the latest inquiry into the Hallingbourne to Ashford section of the M20 motorway.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I hope to make an announcement and publish the report this summer.

Under-Sea Cables (Danger to Fishing Vessels)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Telecom about the potential risk to fishing boats from British Telecom cables laid on the sea bed in the Irish sea; what assessment he has made as to the possibility of these cables fouling fishing nets; what checks are applied to the physical dimension of such cables before permission is given for them to be laid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department is well aware of the risks involved. These underwater cables are clearly marked on navigation charts. Various notices have been issued over the years, warning fishermen not to fish near cable runs and advising them, if their gear snags cables, to cut the gear free rather than haul the cable up. British Telecom is also aware of the risks to fishing vessels and keeps in close touch with the fishing industry through MAFF and DAFS regarding the routeing of cables and every effort is made to lay cables away from known fishing grounds. They issue charts/maps to fishermen free of charge showing the location of cables; if gear has to be cut they are prepared to pay just compensation. The laying of cables is undertaken under the provisions of the international convention for the protection of submarine telegraph cables 1884 and permission to do so is not a matter for my hon. Friend.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the potential hazard to fishing boats of the British Telecom cable running 20 miles east of the Isle of Man in the Irish sea; what information he has about the material of which the cable is constructed, its diameter and its coating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is assumed that the cable referred to is the one running between Douglas, Isle of Man and Colwyn Bay on the mainland. No direct representations have been received but passing references to this British Telecom cable have been made in correspondence; it is clearly marked on admiralty chart D1826. I understand that British Telecom is increasingly burying cables in order to minimise interference with fishing activities. I am told that it is constructed of a central copper wire surrounded by polythene, a copper sheet and a helical layer of steel armouring wires. There are 12 such wires, each of 0·296 inches diameter and the whole assembly is coated with tar and jute to an overall diameter of 1·73 inches.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ethnic Monitoring

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the numbers of entrants to his Department from the ethnic minorities in the years 1985-86 and 1986-87; if he will also list the monitoring procedures used to ascertain the percentage of the work force represented by ethnic minorities and their patterns of promotion; and what are his methods of recruitment of minorities into the Department.

Mr. Eggar: Voluntary ethnic monitoring of new entrants has been carried out since 1 October 1985 in the development wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and since 1 April 1986 in the diplomatic wing. The latest available information is as follows:

New entrants to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office development wing in period 1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986

	Number
TOTAL	88
Ethnic origins
White	33
Black/Asian	4
Not stated[1]	51

[1] Did not respond to survey questionnaire.

New entrants to Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing in period 1 April 1986 to 28 February 1987

	Number
TOTAL	433
Ethnic origins
White	187
Black/Asian	8
Not stated[1]	238

[1] Did not respond to survey questionnaire.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is participating in a survey of the ethnic origin of non-industrial civil servants by means of voluntary self-classification. Consideration is being given to ways of using the data on the ethnic origin of staff in post to monitor promotion.

All Departmental recruitment is conducted on the basis of fair and open competition and selection is on merit. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for the Civil Service on 20 February 1987 at column 880 reporting the arrangements being made to encourage people from the ethnic minorities to apply to the Civil Service. Similar arrangements are being made by the diplomatic service.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Butter

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the retail price of butter for each year since 1970, in actual prices and in constant prices and also showing 1970 as 100.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is given in the table. The figures are based on average prices, published by the Department of Employment, which are used in the compilation of the retail price index (RPI):

Average retail prices of butter in the United Kingdom

Intervention Food Stores

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply of Monday 2 March, Official Report, column 526, if he will give details of the precise location of European Economic Community intervention food stores in (a) Sunderland, (b) Gateshead, (c) Newcastle-upon-Tyne, (d) North Tyneside and (e) South Tyneside.

Mr. Gummer: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sheep

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to ensure a greater degree of access to the French non-pedigree and pure breed markets for United Kingdom sheep producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Air Defence Systems

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about future provision for close ground/sea to air defence systems and expected in service dates for all three services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The future close air defence of the fleet will be provided by the close in weapon systems Phalanx which is already in service with the Royal Navy, and Goalkeeper, which will enter service shortly; and by the Seawolf missile system, including the vertically launched version due in service in the early 1990s. Regarding future provision for land-based air defence systems, we have placed major orders with British industry over the last year for Starstreak close air defence systems and improved Rapier area air defence systems. These will enter service in the early and mid-1990s, respectively. All these systems will provide major enhancements to our air defence capabilities.

Western Isles (Horizon Radar)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for installation of over-the-horizon radar in the Western Isles.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) on 8 December 1986 at column 87.

Service Men (Medals)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will institute a special medal for service men who were taken prisoner during the second world war or during the Korean war.

Mr. Freeman: Ex-prisoners of war are already eligible for certain medals—for example, the 1939-45 star, the Korea medal and the United Nations medal Korea—and there are no plans to institute a special medal.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the decision not to award the French-German star to service men taken prisoner within the perimeter defence at Dunkirk in 1940; and what reply he has given.

Mr. Freeman: Several letters on this subject have been received, including one from my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Mr. Watts). A copy of my reply has been placed in the Library.

Tactical Missile Wing

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what date RAF Molesworth will achieve initial operational capability;

(2) on what date the 303rd Tactical Missile Wing is due to be activated; on what date it will achieve initial operational capability; how many personnel of the 303rd Tactical Missile Wing are currently in the United Kingdom; how many personnel of the wing will be in the United Kingdom when it achieves fully operational capability; and whether he has any plans for the use of Alconbury for the 303rd Tactical Missile Wing.

Mr. Stanley: The 303rd Tactical Missile Wing was activated for administrative purposes on 12 December 1986. At present there are some 250 USAF personnel of the 303rd Tactical Missile Wing at RAF Molesworth. This will increase to some 750 USAF personnel by the time the wing becomes fully operational during 1988. RAF Alconbury provides administrative support for RAF Molesworth. As far as initial operation capability is concerned, I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 15 April 1986 at column 375.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 459, he will state what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards permitting United States officials to visit United Kingdom firms to inspect their books for compliance with United States laws, in relation to defence contracts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 2 March 1987 at column 528.

C-5 Galaxy Transport

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Defence what cargo was carried by the C-5 Galaxy Transport which arrived at Alconbury on 26 February; what is its purpose; and how many previous such deliveries have been made to Alconbury.

Mr. Stanley: For security reasons it is not our practice to give details of military aircraft movements or of cargoes being carried.

Firearms (Accidental Discharge)

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many incidents were recorded in each of the last three years, in Northern Ireland, in which military personnel accidentally discharged firearms.

Mr. Stanley: The number of negligent discharges of weapons involving military personnel in Northern Ireland is as follows:

Year	Number
1984	104
1985	101
1986	85
1987[1]	16

[1] To 28 February

The vast majority of these incidents occurred when soldiers were clearing their weapons on returning to base following a patrol. Clearance of weapons takes place under supervision in a designated area within the base.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 111

SESSION 1986–87

23rd February—6th March 1987

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
